For Chicago's young activists, 'This trial means everything'

If Jason Van Dyke is acquitted, protesters want to launch a national campaign

BY TONY BRISCOE
Chicago Tribune

When city officials released the dash cam video in 2015 that showed Chicago police Officer Jason Van Dyke fatally shoot 17-year-old Laquan McDonald, a coterie of young, black activists called a meeting on the Near West Side.

That cold, November evening, a few dozen mostly college-aged organizers gathered in rows of chairs at a storefront art gallery in the University Village neighborhood with hangdog expressions, trying to process the footage. After a short time, they stormed into the street, chanting as they marched toward downtown. With a convoy of unmarked police cars following close behind, protesters surrounded the motorcade, locked hands and began shouting "16 shots!" — a reference to the number of times the black teen was struck by the white officer's gunfire — a chant that would become a rallying cry at future demonstrations calling for police reforms.

In the nearly three years since, these fledgling activists, galvanized by the recent phenomena of police-involved fatalities caught on video, became known for their unabashed strategies: targeting the Magnificent Mile on the busiest shopping days of the year, picketing Mayor Rahm Emanuel's Ravenswood home and engaging in nose-to-nose faceoffs with police officers.

Kavanaugh hit with 2nd accusation

Showdown looms before Senate panel as Ford, nominee set to testify Thursday

BY LISA MASCARO AND MARY CLARE JALONICK
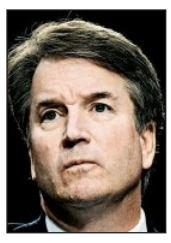
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Judiciary Committee scheduled a hearing Thursday for Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh and Christine Blasey Ford, a woman who says he sexually assaulted her as a teenager, as a claim of sexual misconduct emerged from another woman.



Kavanaugh

The New Yorker magazine reported Sunday night that Senate Democrats were investigating a second woman's accusation of sexual misconduct by Kavanaugh dating to the 1983-84 academic year, Kavanaugh's first at Yale University.

The New Yorker said Deborah Ramirez, 53 described the incident after being contacted by the magazine. Ramirez recalled that Kavanaugh exposed himself at a drunken dormitory party, thrust his penis in her face and caused her to touch it without her consent as she pushed him away, the magazine reported.

Kavanaugh, in a statement provided by the White House, said the event "did not happen" and that the allegation was "a smear, plain and simple."

A White House spokeswoman added in a second statement that the allegation was "designed to tear down a good man."

The New Yorker said it contacted Ramirez after learning of a possible involvement in an incident

Uptick in assaults on CTA bus drivers

MARY WISNIEWSKI
Getting Around

Besides trying to safely weave a 20-ton vehicle through city traffic, drivers get yelled at, offered phony fare cards, and, on rare occasions, physically attacked.

The bus drivers union said it is seeing an increase in assaults on drivers, which it blames on inadequate barriers on buses, lack of mental health services in the city and disrespect for people just doing their jobs.

"You have to look at what's going on in our city, with the closing of mental institutions and a lot more homeless people on the street," said Keith Hill, president of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 241. He said sometimes disputes over a fare or the failure of a Ventra card can lead to a hostile situation.

The CTA said the number of serious attacks has remained stable in recent years, but it shares the union's concerns and is working on more measures to protect drivers.

Assaults in recent years have included drivers getting punched in the head, tear-gassed, doused in bleach, shot at, egged, pelted with snowballs and even hit with a bag of frozen chicken, according to Hill and CTA records.

The CTA said that it has reported to the federal government an average of about 30 driver assaults per year that are bad enough for the driver to go to the hospital — at 35 in 2014, 29 in 2015, 27 in 2016, 26 in 2017 and 12 through

UNSOLVED 75 SHOT, 3 CHARGED

1st break in 'most violent weekend'

Murder charges nearly two months after 13 killed

BY ANNIE SWEENEY, JEREMY GORNER
Chicago Tribune

Nearly two months after 13 people were killed during a burst of weekend violence in Chicago, authorities have filed the first murder charges.

But it took a deathbed statement, surveillance video and a witness willing to step forward with information that led police to both the suspect and the murder weapon, illustrating why it is so difficult to investigate the street violence that fuels most shootings in the city.

The Tribune is examining the first weekend of August, when 75 people were shot in Chicago, hoping to shed light on the challenges in solving crime and the impact unsolved shootings have on the cycle of violence.

The weekend was just beginning when police found Christopher Jackson on the afternoon of Aug. 3, slumped in the courtyard of an apartment complex in South Shore. He had been shot twice by a rival gang member who kicked open a gate and chased him down, according to police.

As the 23-year-old lay dying at the University of Chicago Medical Center, he managed to give a videotaped statement identifying his attacker. Jackson died exactly a month after he was shot, and first-degree charges were filed a little more than a week later against Terrell Webb.

ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

As Van Dyke trial turns to defense, the video remains the key witness

Dahleen Glanton

The video always has been the roadblock to Officer Jason Van Dyke's freedom.

It is difficult for most people to get past the shocking image of Laquan McDonald's body twitching on the pavement from a hail of bullets. No doubt, it will haunt some members of the jury too.

That image alone has caused many of us to doubt Van Dyke's claim that he shot McDonald 16 times in self-defense. And it is the one troubling thing that has cemented our views on what justice in this case should look like.

Raising doubt about that video is the only way Van Dyke has a chance to walk out of the courtroom a free man.

Many of the jurors already had seen the video, taken from a police dashboard camera, long before they were selected to decide the officer's fate. Anyone who had not seen it has now been immersed in the details.

The prosecution showed portions of it over and over during the first week of Van Dyke's first-degree murder trial — a dozen times, at least, often in slow-motion.

The emotional intensity of watching someone die is difficult to overcome.

When we see a police officer shoot a teenager to death, we do not forget what we saw. Even when the video has stopped rolling, the pictures linger vividly in our minds.

Prosecutors need jurors to carry into the deliberation room the mental image of McDonald sprawled on the ground, with plumes of debris rising from beneath him as some of the bullets went through his body and struck the pavement.

As jurors debate whether Van Dyke feared for his life, prosecutors want them to remember McDonald's final moments and how he must have been terrified for his.

At the start of court last week, defense attorney Daniel Herbert said that unlike other trials where the defendant is presumed not guilty, Van Dyke unfairly would have to prove his innocence.

To be acquitted of first-degree murder, Van Dyke must prove that the shooting was justified.

When there is a video that appears to show otherwise, that could become an insurmountable task. At the very least, it could pose a challenge for Van Dyke this week as the defense phase of the trial begins.

His lawyers must convince jurors that the images on that video were inaccurate — that what they saw isn't really what happened. They must force jurors to doubt their own reasoning and trust that the defendant's version is the truth.

Defense attorneys began laying the groundwork last week with the testimony of Van Dyke's former partner, Joseph Walsh. He was standing near Van Dyke that night and was, in fact, the one who stopped him from reloading his gun. He is also one of three police officers who have been indicted for allegedly trying to cover up the shooting.

The emotional intensity of watching someone die is difficult to overcome.

According to Walsh, McDonald was clearly threatening the officers with a knife. Walsh demonstrated for the jury how the teenager had swung the knife behind his back, flicked it open and raised it shoulder high.

Herbert said those movements indicated that McDonald was planning to attack. He described the scene as a horror movie, the part where the suspenseful music starts to play just before someone gets slashed.

Those of us who watched the video on our phones can't see how it looked to Van Dyke. If we could stand in the officer's shoes, his attorneys say, we would see it from a different angle, one that clearly showed the officers under attack.

We would see that Van Dyke had a reasonable belief that McDonald was planning to do harm to him and other police officers, defense attorneys contend. We would see why the tall, bulky 17-year-old had to be shot down before he could make his way to the Dunkin' Donuts store where innocent bystanders could have been hurt, they say.

"If the decision to shoot was lawful," Herbert said in court, "there is no crime."

To demonstrate that, the defense is expected to present an animated video that supposedly shows the shooting from Van Dyke's point of view. You can bet it will portray McDonald as a dangerous guy and Van Dyke as a brave guy.

That, coupled with Walsh's re-enactment, represents the crux of their self-defense case.

It could boil down to this: The jury will have to weigh actual video footage of the shooting against a computer-generated cartoon and the word of a fired cop who investigators said created false police reports to prevent a criminal probe.

If this were just a video game, the outcome probably wouldn't be all that important. But in real life, the stakes for jurors getting it wrong are way too high.

Sowing the seeds of fandom and tradition

Some parents say it's never too early to take the kids to the ballpark

By Morgan Greene
Chicago Tribune

NUCCIO DINUZZO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Fans participate in the singing of "YMCA" at a Cubs game at Wrigley Field last week. The average age of kids attending their first game is 2.

Diehard Cubs fans who endured parts of the 108-year World Series drought know their hometown team's current success could be short-lived. So some families are pushing fandom before solid foods and potty training.

And this is not just a Cubs phenomenon. Across town, as the Cubs took two out of three in the City Series this weekend, White Sox fans vigilantly maintain their family traditions, hoping their kids won't go rogue and ask for tickets to Wrigley Field.

No matter what brings superfan families to the stadium — whether to watch the NL Central leading Cubs or the rebuilding Sox — they're bringing their kids along for the ride.

While parents may do it to instill the excitement of rooting for the underdog or so their offspring can back them up on the chorus of "Go Cubs Go," experts say it's ultimately about building family ties and traditions.

Devoted Cubs fans John and Emily Carruthers decided this was the year to bring 2-year-old daughter Jane to her first game. They picked Sept. 14, and the Cubs held on to beat the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

"Obviously, getting kids to pay attention to anything is a bit much," said John Carruthers. "But we walked her around."

"We took her to the bullpen on her way out and she smashed her little toddler face against the window and Randy Rosario ran out and gave her a baseball," John Carruthers said.

"Jane, who gave you that ball?" asked Emily Carruthers.

"An-dee Wo-sa-io," she said.

Cindy Rubic said her now 7-year-old son Robert threw a drink into a crowd of people at a White Sox game when he was about 2.

"After that we were like, maybe this is just way too young," she said.

Robert, a baseball player and Cubs fan, couldn't wait to attend his first game at Wrigley this season. He made the Jumbotron twice and ran the bases after the game.

"It was 100 percent better," said Cindy Rubic. "He was able to read the scoreboard. He was watching the game. He did the right things you're supposed to do at a ball game."

But people become baseball fans at a younger age than they do of any other sport, said Rich Luker, a social psychologist who has run ESPN's polling for more than two decades. About half of all Americans over the age of 12 were taken to a major league or minor league game by a parent when they were a kid, he said.

Today's millennial parents are taking their kids to games earlier than ever. If you're in your 60s, odds are you were about 10 when you went to your first game, said Luker. Today's kids are averaging their first game at 2.

"What we've learned is that baseball is a relationship that's built on a family bond," said Luker.

While some parents may want to wait to take their kids until they can remember that infamous Anthony Rizzo slide, fans who go to their first game young are more likely to keep going.

Children attending their first baseball game before the age of 5 are likely to attend 58 percent more baseball games per year for the rest of their lives than someone who does not go to their first game until they're over 14, according to Luker's analysis of ESPN polling. And 1 in 4 baseball attendees ranked going to a game with their parents on a scale of 10 as a 10, meaning it was a pinnacle life experience for them.

"You become a baseball fan because of your family ties, and it's something you pass on to the next generation," said Luker.

Lifelong Cubs fan Pam Biron was pregnant with her first child when opening day hit in 1991.

"I introduced her to the Cubs in utero," said Biron. "My husband and my brother-in-law were very worried that I would go into labor during the game so they paid for easy-out parking."

"My grandchildren will be Cubs fans in — five or 10 years?" Biron joked to her daughter.

For longtime fan Beth Festa, the 1-year mark wasn't too soon to bring daughter Isabelle.

"I think about a year is the right time," she said. "Even though she probably won't remember it."

Festa, of Lincoln Square, said her 4-year-old son has attended games since he was 2.

"He had a 103-degree fever yesterday, and all he kept asking was, 'Am I going to get to run the bases?' "

Dave and Wendy Farkasch, of Shorewood, also went with the-sooner-the-better philosophy.

Their son Jackson, 13 months and sucking on a pacifier, wore a Bryant onesie.

"I had his hair in a Mohawk but he's been too sweaty" to pull it off, said Wendy Farkasch.

Jonathan Jensen, an assistant sports marketing professor at the University of North Carolina who helped carry out a 10-year study on why sports fans stick with a losing team, grew up in Chicago and counts himself a Cubs fan.

"There are very few things that have the potential to bring together a baby boomer in their 50s and a 20-year-old millennial, and sports is one of those few things," he said.

Going to a game can be about passing along rituals as a "way for people to keep the memory alive of a loved one who perhaps took them to a ballpark," said Jensen. But the push to convert kids is often ultimately more for the parents.

"Perhaps it's a marking your territory situation," he said. "If you want your child to become a Cubs fan instead of a Sox fan or a Cardinals fan, god forbid."

Chicagoans on the other side of town are similarly committed.

Self-described diehard Sox fan John Joiner passed along his South Side fandom as if it were a sacred responsibility. When his first grandchild was born, he was ready with a bag of White Sox gear.

"You have to get 'em early," said Joiner. "If you don't get 'em early, someone else is going to get 'em."

In 1969, Cubs left fielder Billy Williams and pitcher Ferguson Jenkins showed up at Joiner's home to get the picks of the litter of his father's hunting dogs, he said.

"These two gentleman stood in the hot August sun and signed everything you could imagine that kids from blocks around were bringing because word of mouth traveled," said Joiner.

Joiner said he refused to speak to the players because of his Sox loyalties. But that visit turned his younger brother into a Cubs fan.

"My father passed away, and I told him numerous times along the way, 'I forgive you for everything that happened. But in all honesty, I cannot forgive you for the visit that turned my younger brother into a Cubs fan.' "

Part of why families take fandom so seriously is because the team becomes part of a fan's identity, said Paul Booth, an associate professor at DePaul University who researches fandom. By introducing someone to your fandom, in a way you're introducing them to your beliefs and desires.

"When I'm talking about fandom with my students, it's interesting to see how many of them go back to what they were fans of as kids," said Booth. "You can just be as overtly emotional and passionate as you want to be when you're a kid. It's kind of beautiful in a way."

Before a game last week, parents Teresa and Parker Dodson each had one of their 6-month-old twin boys, Levi and Logan, strapped to their fronts.

Parker said he went to his first game when he was a year old and was determined to get his boys to a game early. Teresa said she was just waiting for the doctor's all-clear that the boys could wear sunscreen.

The twins were fast asleep.

"We just want them to win the World Series again because they weren't born for the last one," said Parker Dodson. "And we can't wait another hundred years."

Cubs, Sox fans field jokes and jabs during crosstown rival series

By Morgan Greene

NUCCIO DINUZZO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Only a rivalry this close to home could bring the city of Chicago together.

On a breezy Sunday afternoon, more than 39,000 fans in black and white and red and blue sat shoulder to shoulder for the final game of the City Series at Guaranteed Rate Field.

Before the series closed with the Cubs clinching a 6-1 win over the White Sox and two out of three games, both sides flaunted high hopes and a sense of camaraderie.

The Piccadilly Ski Club brought a busload of fans. Half were rooting for the Cubs, half for the Sox.

"We're here to socialize," said Bill Ciciora, in between a game of catch with Cheryl Skurkis. Both wore their Sox gear but showed off their "shot ski," a ski outfitted with holes for shot glass placement.

"She went to the other side," Lange joked.

Straith's husband, Michael, shot back at Lange with a playful jab: "Not only are they Cubs fans, but they put nacho cheese on their beef sandwiches."

Just before the start of the game, Charles Kellett, wearing a flashy Cubs button down, had a moment of doubt.

"I feel like we're gonna win, we gotta win," he said. But when asked if the team could go all the way again, Kellett paused. "My opinion, no," he said.

Lindsey and Mike Opyd, of Bridgeport, were rooting for the Sox and the Cubs, respectively.

"We're a house divided," said Mike Opyd. But "it's nothing that's going to tear our family apart."

"The Sox haven't been good for a long time," he said.

"Stop that!" said Lindsey Opyd. "Oh, yes, we're taking it!"

"I guess anything's possible," her husband joked.

Beth Kleinschmidt, of Waukegan, celebrating her 58th birthday at the game with her family of Cubs fans, wanted a win for her grandfather, who introduced her to baseball.

"He's watching over us," said Kleinschmidt. "Hope the Cubs will win today."

"When the Sox were in the World Series, we kind of rooted for them," said her sister Maria Kleinschmidt.

"Baseball is America's sport," said Ron Adair, her brother-in-law. "And it's the thing that's always brought this town together."

That was certainly true of Nadine Preskill, of Highland Park, who was sporting a Cubs hat and a Sox shirt.

"You can call me a winner or loser," said Preskill. "Here are my hashtags: history, family, loyalty and compromise."

That didn't fly with Sox fan Paula Amador, who was making her way down to the concession stand after the Cubs took a 5-0 lead in the third inning.

"You can't be both. You've got to be one or the other," she said. "To be a true fan, you've got to be with them, regardless if they're winning."

Amador said she had faith in the Sox. "We're rebuilding right now. The tables will turn."

While many fans were enjoying longtime rivalries with friends and family members, others were watching their first game together.

Judy Finch, 83, and Evelyn May, 85, both matriarchs of three generations of fans, had been introduced through their daughters and met in person for the first time Sunday.

Finch wore a Cubs T-shirt and faded blue baseball cap while May was decked out in an oversized Sox jersey, black sunglasses and a Sox hat decorated with buttons of her grandkids playing ball.

May was polite about the Cubs victory. "You can't say no to a winning Chicago team," she said.

She also didn't criticize Finch for breaking her vow to never set foot in Sox Park.

"And I'll probably never be back," Finch said with assurance.

Continuing the South Side civility, May added: "We're treating our guests very nicely."

By the end, Finch had a huge smile on her face.

"I brought them luck. Only five to go," Finch said, referring to the Cubs' magic number to clinch their third consecutive National League Central title.

Jason Van Dyke trial spurs young activists

Their disruptive techniques have been credited with creating the political pressure that contributed to the firing of police Superintendent Garry McCarthy, the ouster of Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez, and the announcement earlier this month by Emanuel that he would not seek a third term. Several of the organizers are running for office, including two for alderman and mayor.

Now, everything they've learned about activism is focused on Van Dyke's first-degree murder trial, which they see as a litmus test of what constitutes excessive use of force for police officers.

"This trial means everything. The entire country is paying attention to Chicago right now," said Kofi Ademola, an organizer with Black Lives Matter Chicago. "If justice isn't found, I honestly don't know what's going to happen. I'm kind of afraid. I don't know how people in communities are going to act. We don't know how government and police are going to act. But (an acquittal) reinforces the idea that police almost have impunity and immunity to kill black and brown people."

On Sept. 5, the first day of the jury selection process, about 100 protesters assembled on the lawn between California Avenue and California Boulevard, positioning themselves between the parking garage where jurors park and the Leighton Criminal Court Building.

For community activist William Calloway, 29, of South Shore, the demonstration was the first step toward making good on his pledge to lead protests outside the courthouse during the trial.

"It's been close to four years since the shooting happened. It's been three years since (Van Dyke) has been charged. And we want justice. It's time for him to face the music about what he did."

Since that first day of the trial, the number of protesters outside the courthouse each day has dwindled to a handful. But that could quickly change when the verdict comes down. Van Dyke's attorneys will begin presenting evidence Monday morning.

Calloway, who unsuccessfully ran for state representative earlier this year, has been hosting meetings to discuss how communities should prepare for all possible trial outcomes. In the past month, Calloway said he has grown increasingly worried about tensions with police turning violent, noting the clash between a crowd of about 200 people and officers following the fatal shooting death of Harith Augustus in July. There were reports of objects thrown at police and officers using batons against people in the crowd.

"That's one street ... that turned up like that," said Calloway, who sued for the release of the recordings in the Augustus shooting. "What if it happens like that across the city: Englewood, Austin, all these other neighborhoods. That could be a huge problem. I don't want to see Chicago turn into Ferguson or Baltimore."

If Van Dyke is acquitted, Calloway said protesters want to launch a national campaign, organizing demonstrations in other major cities.

"If he is acquitted, it's not just going to be the South Side; it's not just going to be the West Side," Calloway said. "It's going to be every side of this city that's going to rise up, demand justice and shut this city down."

By all accounts, emotions have been running high since the release of the video, which came more than a year after McDonald's death and months after Emanuel had secured re-election. The videotape also appeared to contradict the narrative of responding officers, three of whom were later charged with conspiracy, obstruction of justice and official misconduct.

Page May, 29, founder of black female empowerment group Assata's Daughters, remembers joining a group who gathered to view the videotape of the McDonald shooting for the first time.

Information from police and the medical examiner's office revealed McDonald was armed with a knife and under the influence of the psychedelic drug PCP. But many saw his death as an indictment of government agencies that failed repeatedly to help the troubled teen, who had been shuttled between foster homes after his mother was accused of neglect.

"I think that's why Laquan resonated so much," May said. "He was just walking down the street. He self-medicates for the trauma he's has gone through, which is true of a lot of young people. He's struggling. He's trying to get back in school. He's in and out of juvy. He's doing the best he can. That could've been anyone."

Days after the video was released, on Black Friday, about 1,000 protesters formed human barricades outside high-end stores on Michigan Avenue, obstructing many would-be shoppers from entering. On New Year's Eve, throngs of young people gathered around Emanuel's North Side home for the third straight day calling for his resignation and staring down the band of police officers standing guard near his front door.

In addition to protests that disrupted shoppers, they also launched dynamic opposition campaigns, perhaps most notably, ginning up resistance to former Cook County State's Attorney Anita Avarez in the #ByeAnita crusade. Protesters blocked the entrance to her fundraisers and disrupted her speaking engagements. They overtook CTA train cars to persuade riders to vote her out. And they arranged for a plane to fly a banner with the hashtag over the city.

The younger generation says members see themselves as adding to Chicago's rich history of activism, which has included the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and Fred Hampton, the chairman of the Illinois chapter of the Black Panther Party. But the new guard says bold, new techniques are necessary to call attention to issues like police brutality and longstanding social woes on the South and West sides.

And in what some see as a coming of age for these young activists, many are taking a different approach: running for political office.

Ja'Mal Green, 22, one of the most outspoken critics of Emanuel, had previously made it his mission to personally unseat the mayor in his bid to become Chicago's youngest ever mayor.

Now that Emanuel has announced he will not seek re-election, Green finds himself going up against other formidable challengers, including McCarthy and ex-Chicago Police Board president Lori Lightfoot. But Green, who has pledged to make reforms to the police department, said he feels he holds an advantage over candidates who had ties to city hall and the police department during the McDonald case.

"This case changed the path of everyone's life," Green said. "I wasn't planning to be where I am today. I never expected to be an activist. The plan wasn't to go and be the mayor either. Laquan McDonald's case has shaped everyone in the activism community. My thing was, I felt obligated to make sure we have a voice, a seat at the table and someone to battle Rahm."

Green isn't alone.

At least three prominent activists have their eyes on separate, upcoming aldermanic races in wards on the South Side, including Jedidiah Brown, a 32-year-old pastor from South Shore and Lamon Reccord, 19, who has spoken out against neighborhood violence and police brutality.

During the Van Dyke trial, some activists are protesting, while others watch from the pews of the courtroom gallery.

Then, there are those like May who acknowledged the importance of the case, but plans to focus her efforts on remedying the conditions she feels led to McDonald's death. Part of the solution is the city spending less on police and more on the South and West sides, she said.

"This is way bigger than Jason Van Dyke, though he very much matters," said May, who is advocating against the construction of a $95 million police training facility.

"To me, the point wasn't that Laquan was shot 16 times. It's that this city failed him at every level. He had a harder life than he should've had and a shorter life than he should've had."

While some activists say the verdict, whatever it might be, will serve as culmination of three years of organizing. Others, like Brown, say they believe it is only the beginning.

"It's still in its infancy," Brown said. "We're still trying to cultivate our movement and find where we're going next. I would say this is a test of if we've done proper preparing. I think our moment is about to gets its definition."

The Laquan McDonald shooting has galvanized activists in Chicago, including Ja'Mal Green, left, who is running for mayor.

The number of protesters outside court has dwindled each day, but that could change when the verdict comes down.

'Troll Hunt' exhibition attracts a record number of visitors to Morton Arboretum

By Kate Thayer
Chicago Tribune

Spotting a 20-foot, spear-wielding troll peering down from atop his grassy berm on the outskirts of the Morton Arboretum might make drivers on Interstate 88 do a double take.

It seems they also are stopping in to do some further investigating at the 96-year-old Lisle attraction. Officials there report record monthly visitor numbers since the opening of the "Troll Hunt" exhibit June 22.

Created by famed Danish artist Thomas Dambo, the exhibit features six large troll statues — most 15 to 20 feet high — made of repurposed wood and other recycled and natural materials, and spread throughout the 1,700-acre arboretum.

"We've definitely seen increased visitation," said Sarah Sargent, manager of interpretation and exhibits. "The trolls have definitely been a big draw."

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

In July, about 163,000 people visited the arboretum — the most ever reported in a single month, Sargent said. The previous monthly record of 150,000 was set in October 2011. And last month was also a successful one, Sargent said, with more than 140,000 visitors.

In surveys and anecdotally, visitors explain they come specifically to see the trolls, but they're also staying to see other parts of the arboretum they've never seen before, she said.

Dambo constructed the exhibit during an eight-week period earlier this year, placing the trolls, along with their troll hideout, throughout the grounds, Sargent said.

Finding all six "is a bit of an undertaking," Sargent said. "It takes several hours to hike and see them all, even to drive it," so "many people are coming back more than once ... to see them over several visits."

Dambo told the Tribune earlier this year that after he was approached to work on the exhibit — similar to art installations he's completed in Copenhagen, Denmark, and South Korea — he would ride his bike around the arboretum to identify spots to place his creations. He wanted people to explore the grounds and its hiking paths to find all the trolls.

"One thing that I would really like my trolls to do is try to bring people out of their safe zone in their cars and go exploring nature a little bit," he told the Tribune in June. "Because when you explore such a beautiful forest as the Morton Arboretum, then obviously you will understand that it's worth protecting it and saving it."

It seems to be working, Sargent said.

While the arboretum provides a map with the exact location of each troll, many visitors are choosing instead to use a program with clues and to find them that way, she said. "There's this draw to go on a quest and seek them out."

The trolls will remain at the arboretum until at least the end of the year, Sargent said, "and we'll see how they do in Chicago winter and assess next year."

If you believe your only options are agonizing knee pain or surgery... You are WRONG!

Thousands of Chicagoland Boomers and Seniors are now getting knee pain RELIEF, INSTEAD of knee replacement.

It turns out, the secret of enjoying the "golden years" is NOT simply having a giant nest egg for retirement Why?

Recent research showed that Baby Boomers and seniors who lead an active lifestyle during retirement, and continue doing the things they truly enjoy, free of pain, ARE happier, regardless of income level or wealth.

And truth be told, people who don't have their mobility to enjoy their favorite activities at that age, all the money in the world won't bring true happiness.

We know this because we hear people say this over and over again at the Joint Relief Institute in Orland Park. Comments like this . . .

"I didn't know how much LIFE and SLEEP I was missing because of my knee pain, until it went away with this wonderful treatment."

— George R.

Alternative to the knife for your knee pain? Non-Surgical treatment success rate soars after using new digital technology

You know how it is . . .

You start to recognize your knee is hurting, and you try pain medicines, braces, or different over-the-counter arthritis supplements. Soon enough, you realize they either cause lots of side effects, or they fail to live up to their promise of fast, long-lasting relief, and are not worth the price of the bottle they come in.

And BECAUSE you'd prefer NOT to go under the knife . . .

And can't afford to be put in bed for several weeks, and because you know people who still hurt EVEN after surgery . . . you give up, and learn to live with the pain. BUT, you miss out on things you enjoy doing, and lose your golden years one activity at a time.

With less activity, comes weight gain, and depression . . . Yes, you can put up with this ache in your knee, but the cost of doing nothing about it is HUGE. You are not doing yourself a favor by "toughing it out."

"Six months later, I found out the one thing between me and losing 20 lbs, WAS my knee pain"

— Mary T.

"Every day was hard. I couldn't enjoy my favorite activities anymore. But thankfully, now I'm back in full form. I am doing yard work for the first time in years!"

— Phil M.

What are my options if I don't want to undergo surgery?

Today we live in an age with tremendous technology advances, and that's what Joint Relief Institute doctors use to put new life and energy into failing knee joints.

Using precise, advanced imaging, they gently place an all natural joint lubricant directly inside your knee to replace the lost fluid that's causing your pain. This treatment has proven to have a very high rate of success.

However, it HAS to be done right with advanced imaging . . .

A recent study examined trained doctors and surgeons who attempted these injections without using advanced imaging. Instead, they simply felt the knee with their fingers and BLINDLY delivered the replacement fluid.

Advanced Digital technology is used to eliminate a HUGE percentage of treatment failures. Every treatment at Joint Relief Institute is pin-pointed to the damaged area inside the knee. The doctors see the medication live as it goes to help the troubled joint.

The study revealed that these doctors missed the target most of the time . . . In fact, 30% of the time, they didn't even place the treatment inside the joint. Yes THIRTY percent. It is not a typo.

Even after missing the target, they had no way of knowing they missed, because they are not SEEING it with advanced imaging.

That means these patients went away thinking they had received a life-changing treatment, and, in fact, did not get any benefit at all. Even worse, many of them went on to have surgery they didn't need.

How did Joint Relief Institute find the Antidote to this MISERABLE failure . . .

The doctors at the Joint Relief Institute are trained in using cutting-edge low dose motion digital imaging. These highly skilled, Board Certified doctors are able to see into the knee joint. They actually watch the medicine, live, as it goes where it needs to be. This technology is so precise, so advanced, and so forefront that it was able to make a whole difference in Non-surgical treatments.

"We've had so many patients tell us they RECEIVED treatments like Synvisc or Orthovisc in the past, and it didn't work. So they were considering surgery, and some even had surgery scheduled. Luckily, we were able to save many of those people from the knife." Said Dr Mike Hana at the Joint Relief Institute.

Joint Relief Institute's proven accuracy and effective treatment is why people are traveling hundreds of miles to get knee pain treatment from their Doctors.

Why did Knee treatments from Joint Relief Institute become the talk of the town?

Many seniors walk out feeling better than they have in years! So as you might imagine, when their friends see them move easier, walk further, sleep better and are happier, they want it also.

Only days after this treatment, people usually notice a decrease in: Pain... Stiffness...Muscle weakness... Swelling... Locked joints... Reduced range of motion... and Cracking sounds.

Most patients who receive the treatment are able to live pain free for up to 6 months, and some even get relief for 3-5 years with NO additional treatments.

How does the treatment help relieve your joint pain...

It's pretty simple, really. You see, when you're young, you have a thick, fluid protein inside your knee joints to lubricate them as you move.

This fluid also acts as a cushion and shock absorber inside your knee. It's called synovial fluid, and it works much like the oil in a car's engine to keep all the parts moving freely, without friction.

However, as you age, this fluid dries out, leaving your bones to painfully rub and grind against each other with every step. And unfortunately, there's no way for the joint to make more.

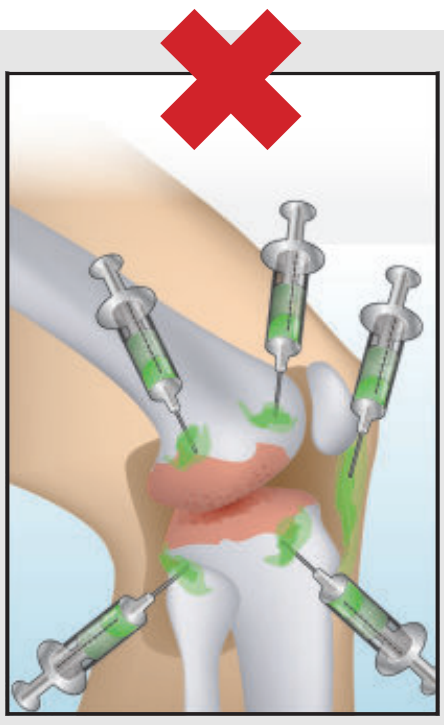
After years of trusted service in moving you everywhere you need to go, you start to feel a subtle ache in your knees with certain activities like kneeling down, or getting out of the car. With time, it becomes a constant ache. If left untreated, it can keep you awake at night, and hurt with every step.

The good news is, researchers discovered an almost identical, all natural lubricating fluid called Hyaluronic acid. It has been proven in numerous clinical studies to act as a natural lubricant in your joints.

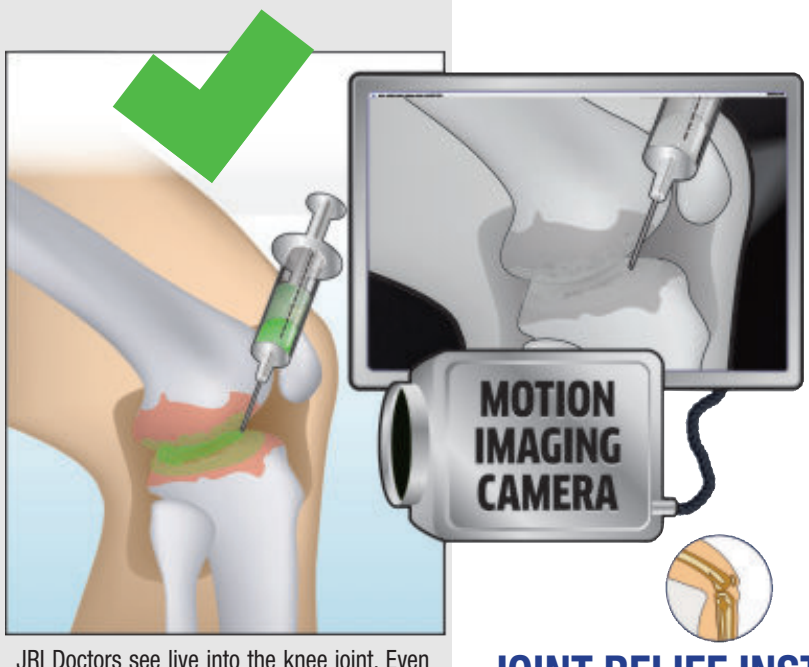
It's FDA approved and is a perfect cushion and shock absorber for your joints. Once it's correctly placed inside your knee, it can make them feel just like new again, eliminate any rubbing and friction, and make your joints glide smoothly.

Are there any side effects to this treatment? Is the treatment painful?

After numbing the skin with a special spray, Joint Relief's imaging technology makes this treatment virtually painless. And because you are getting a supplement for a protein we are all born having, there are NO known after effects.



If you received this kind of treatment in the past, and it didn't relieve your pain, there is a BIG chance the medication landed somewhere around, but not INSIDE, the joint where it can't help you.



JRI Doctors see live into the knee joint. Even you will be able to tell the medicine went where it needs to be. No guess work, no poking around, the medicine cushion lubricate and help heal the damaged knee.

That is right, this is a quick, natural long-lasting, non-invasive, non-surgical treatment with NO known side effects...

Is it true this natural treatment costs NOTHING?...

Yes, more good news, besides the pain relief, is that because this non-surgical program has already proven to help thousands of seniors, Medicare and other insurance plans DO cover the full cost of the treatment.

So there is very likely NO COST to you for this life-changing treatment.

Here is what you need to do if you or a loved one is suffering with knee pain…

Call now for a free screening...

If you or a loved one is suffering with knee pain, this could be the blessed relief you're looking for. You are personally invited to a FREE knee pain screening from the Joint Relief Institute doctors to see if you are a good candidate for this all-natural, highly-precise treatment.

Due to high demand, they can only offer a limited number of FREE screens every month. So if you're interested, Call now (708) 914-5145.

Waiting will not help you feel better...

This ache in your knees could be a sign of serious damage and people who choose to simply "tough it out" will definitely see their knees deteriorate further over time. The one thing we know is: The damage will NEVER undo itself without some help.

Your screening will only take about 20-30 minutes of your time, as one of their doctors sits down with you and answers all the questions you have about your knees.

On the day of your treatment, you'll be able to come in on your own, and be done within 30 minutes or less. No pain. No problem driving yourself home. ■

Scores at CPS still barred from working

Further scrutiny given to some after initial background checks

By Jennifer Smith Richards
Chicago Tribune

More than 140 Chicago Public Schools employees still are barred from working in schools as the district scrutinizes their backgrounds, the district said Friday, including six teachers and more than 100 who work as coaches.

The district said its massive effort to recheck the criminal and child-welfare histories of its nearly 44,000 employees is complete and that more than 99 percent of workers directly employed by the Chicago Board of Education were cleared to work with children. But the figures showed that the district still is churning through the background results of more than 1,800 vendors, including custodians and nurses who work as contractors. So far, about 88 percent of CPS vendors have been cleared, the district's figures show.

Few employees' backgrounds outright prohibited them from working with Chicago children, though there were some.

Three teachers, two aides, one central-office worker and seven custodial vendors had something in their background check that won't allow them to continue working at CPS, the district said. Those employees likely will go through termination hearings unless they resign. The district did not release the names of those employees or say where they worked.

"Background rechecks are helping create safer schools throughout Chicago, and we appreciate the commitment and patience of our employees, vendors, volunteers and families as we worked to make this a productive effort," said a written statement from district spokesman Michael Passman.

CPS announced in June that it would undertake the effort to run new background checks and fingerprint workers who had no fingerprints on file. The district did so in response to Tribune reporting that found some school employees had been hired with criminal backgrounds or were arrested for sex crimes after being hired. Some employees chose not to resubmit to background checks this summer, including two teachers. Those workers also face discipline and are not allowed in schools.

To fill the positions left open by employees who are awaiting clearance or who did not meet the requirements to work in schools, the district said it is using substitutes and "adjusting staffing assignments."

CPS budgeted more than $3 million for its background effort. A district-commissioned review of CPS' handling of sexual misconduct released early findings last month that lauded the background rechecks but also noted that the district still has no reliable way to check employees on an ongoing basis.

ERIN HOOLEY/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Baby killed in West Englewood fire

By Hannah Leone and Elyssa Cherney
Chicago Tribune

The last time Sylvia White saw her grandson, the energetic 7-month-old was smiling and laughing, as usual, during a family celebration.

It was on Saturday, when the boy's father married White's daughter during a casual church ceremony in the Chicago area.

When White needed to leave for her home in Michigan City, Ind., she wrapped little Treshun Izaiah Estes in a hug, kissed him on the forehead and said, "Grandma loves you."

Early Sunday, Treshun was killed in a fire that broke out in his West Englewood home, according to authorities. Treshun's father was critically injured in the blaze while seven other people, including the boy's siblings and his mother, were displaced.

"We were just at a wedding. ... Now we got to plan a funeral," White said.

Chicago police officers patrolling the neighborhood noticed smoke coming out of the single-family home in the 1700 block of West 59th Street about 1:40 a.m. Sunday and notified the Fire Department, according to District Chief Juan Hernandez.

Treshun Estes, 7 months old

The fire appeared to start in the kitchen, Hernandez said. Investigators believe it was accidental, sparked by someone who was cooking on a stove, which caused something else to catch aflame.

Firefighters did not hear smoke detectors when they entered the home, Hernandez said. Signs of smoke detectors have not been found yet.

Treshun was taken to Comer Children's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead shortly before 2:30 a.m. A 51-year-old man, identified by family as the boy's father, was taken to University of Chicago Medical Center in critical condition. He jumped out of the home's first-floor window, Hernandez said.

Others displaced include boys ages 1, 9, 11 and 16; girls ages 10 and 17; and a 37-year-old woman, police said. The displaced relatives were not injured. Everyone lived in the same home, according to family.

The surviving children are related and are struggling with the death of their infant brother, White said.

"Now he's gone," White said, calling the fire a tragedy. "(But) he's in a better place now."

Treshun's aunt, Cynthia Estes, described the little boy as a joy to be around. His death has devastated the family and comes only six months after Estes and her brother lost their mother, she said.

"He was always smiling and always happy," said Estes, a sister of Treshun's father. "It's unfortunate, this situation. It's just hard. It's so hard."

Treshun's sister, Tesha Estes, said the family is grieving and needs help raising money for the burial. Her siblings also need assistance to get the basic living items that were lost in the fire. The house is uninhabitable, according to a fundraising page she set up.

White said she remembered holding Treshun at the wedding, which she described as casual but beautiful.

"He didn't take his eyes off me," she said.

Waiting outside the hospital Sunday, White showed a Tribune reporter a photo on her cellphone of the bride and groom in "Mr." and "Mrs." T-shirts and jeans. "They didn't want no big gowns," White said. The groom loved to cook for all the children, she said.

After the wedding, White went back home to Michigan City. She had gone to bed early, woke up to a 2 a.m. phone call about the fire and raced back to Chicago, arriving at the hospital about five hours after her family members were taken there.

As she sorted out plans with other family members, she made sure that the children would stay together.

For hours after the fire had been put out, the air still smelled of smoke outside the two-story home across the street from Hermitage Park. Objects including a bent window frame scattered the lawn outside the brown-and-white house.

A man who works for a company that boards up houses idled in the street out front in a big white van. Upon learning the boy had died, he shook his head and said he wasn't sure if he should leave flyers anymore.

"They've got bigger problems now," he said.

CTA drivers report more attacks by passengers

June of this year. The CTA employs about 4,000 operators, which shows that the incidents are rare.

Hill said the union is also looking at attacks that may not require medical attention, such as being spat upon. Since the union started keeping a tally of attacks last fall, it has seen a rise as the months have gotten warmer — from an average of 8.6 incidents per month October through February to 16.3 incidents per month March through August.

Union members have passed out flyers demanding "maximum felony charges" against those accused of bus driver attacks.

One serious assault was reported earlier this month. According to police, a 47-year-old female bus driver was driving along the 8600 block of South Damen Avenue on Sept. 12 when a male passenger began smoking a cigarette. Another passenger complained to the driver, which led the smoker to walk up to the driver, grab her breasts and demand sex, police said. The driver fled the bus and the perpetrator tried unsuccessfully to drive, police said.

The man accused of the assault is in custody, charged with three felony counts of criminal sexual abuse, vehicular hijacking and aggravated battery against a transit employee, according to the Cook County state's attorney's office.

While both the CTA and the union agree that more needs to be done to stop assaults on drivers, they differ on what to do.

Steele said most buses are equipped with operator barrier shields, which are made from a strong, clear polycarbonate called Lexan. Older buses have partial shields, while newer ones have full doors, Steele said. Neither completely encloses drivers, and some buses have no barriers at all.

Each bus has up to 10 security cameras, Steele said. The CTA is also adding security cameras and extra lighting to bus turnarounds. The agency upgraded its bus communications systems in 2014, providing drivers a link to the CTA control center.

Hill said current barriers are inadequate and can be easily pulled back by passengers. "We want to be fully enclosed," said Hill. The union favors a barrier that completely shields the driver — similar to the way a rail operator is fully enclosed — with a window that allows drivers to interact with passengers but can be shut quickly in case of an emergency, Hill said.

The union also wants more police help on problem routes in high-crime neighborhoods such as Englewood, Garfield and Lawndale. Police spokesman Anthony Guglielmi said police have a dedicated public transportation unit devoted exclusively to CTA safety, and individual districts work with the agency on directed police patrols.

The union also seeks more training for drivers, to teach them how to better defuse situations, and it wants the CTA to be able to ban some people permanently from public transit. "If you can ban a person from a store or a place of business, you can ban them from the bus," said Hill.

Early this past summer, CTA President Dorval Carter established a new committee to reduce operator assaults, which will include doing more data analysis, Steele said. The committee also will explore pushing for tougher legal penalties for operator assaults.

The agency also will be trying out TV-monitor screens that hang at the front and center of the bus that will show customer information and have the capability of showing live feeds from the buses' interior security cameras, Steele said. These would be similar to the screens in some stores that show a security-camera view of shoppers.

"We think it will help increase awareness of the security cameras and serve as a deterrent," said Steele. He did not have a cost yet for the pilot program — he said the TV monitors would be rolled out by the end of the year on a limited basis and tested for customer feedback.

Attacks on bus drivers are an issue for the Amalgamated Transit Union nationally, which is supporting a bipartisan bill in the U.S. Congress that would seek to protect operators by adding barriers and training drivers to help de-escalate hostile encounters.

Transportation song quiz

Last week's song was about a train that used to run through the Deep South. The songwriter also wrote the music for movies that included a coin bank as a character. The song is "Dixie Flyer," by Randy Newman, who also did the music for the "Toy Story" movies. The winner was Vicki Kastory of Northbrook, who even was able to name the coin bank — "Hamm."

This week's song is about a four-legged means of transportation, the color of the sun, who takes the narrator across the southern border to avoid a little trouble. What's the song, and who wrote it? The first to email me with the correct answer gets a Tribune notebook, and glory.

First break in 'most violent weekend'

be charged with a homicide from the weekend. Two other alleged gunmen have been charged in shootings that were not fatal. Arrests have yet to be made in connection with more than 70 other people shot between Aug. 3 and early Aug. 6.

The weekend reflects how the Police Department has been struggling to clear cases.

Its record for solving homicides — known as the clearance rate — is 16.8 percent for killings that occurred so far this year, according to newly released figures. That's close to the 17.1 percent rate for all of 2017, which was the lowest in the city in years. The clearance rate for shootings that are not fatal is worse: 6.5 percent so far in 2018 and 7.2. percent for all of 2017.

The first weekend in August was particularly tasking for the Police Department. Not only did it face violence that was spiking with the scorching temperatures, it also had to guard hundreds of thousands of concertgoers at the Lollapalooza music festival in Grant Park.

About 3 p.m. on Aug. 3, Jackson was moving into his mother's apartment building in the 7600 block of South Kingston Avenue when he saw Webb outside, according to Cook County prosecutors.

Jackson was a member of the Black P. Stones street gang, according to police, and Webb belonged to the rival Gangster Disciples. Jackson ran toward the building, and Webb chased and shot him in the stomach and arm, prosecutors said. He was unconscious but still breathing when police arrived.

Days later, in the intensive care unit, Jackson gave a videotaped statement to prosecutors that named Webb as his attacker, according to authorities. Chicago police have said cooperation like Jackson's is unusual, given the retaliatory nature of the city's gun violence, but refused to comment on the specifics.

But the case against Webb also includes a witness who stepped forward to give a description of Webb. Responding officers quickly found Webb and recovered a handgun. Shell casings recovered at the scene were tested in the Police Department's gun lab and matched the gun found on Webb, police said.

Authorities indicated they have surveillance video of Webb running near the crime scene around the time of the shooting.

Webb was taken into custody soon after the shooting, based on the witness description, and a gun found on him was sent out for testing. Prosecutors declined to file any charges and Webb was released, authorities said. It's not clear why he wasn't held on gun charges.

Eleven days after the shooting, an arrest warrant charging Webb with attempted first-degree murder was issued, according to court records. Webb was tracked down in Iowa on Aug. 28.

The charges against him were upgraded to murder after Jackson died Sept. 3. Webb was brought back to Chicago on Sept. 14 and ordered held without bail, according to Cook County state's attorney's office spokeswoman Tandra Simonton.

Asked why Webb was initially released from custody, Simonton would only say the case was a "continuing police investigation."

A police spokesman declined Friday to make anyone from the department available to talk about the case, saying it was now in the hands of Cook County prosecutors.

Senator blasts 'bureaucratic coup'

Graham urges new special counsel to investigate DOJ

By Tom Hamburger
The Washington Post

MANUEL BALCE CENETA/AP

Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., said Sunday he wants a new special counsel to investigate a "bureaucratic coup" led by enemies of President Donald Trump in response to questions about a report on Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lindsey Graham said Sunday he believes "a bureaucratic coup" led by enemies of President Donald Trump is taking place at the Justice Department, and the Republican senator asked that a new special counsel be appointed to investigate.

Graham, a veteran member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, made the comments on "Fox News Sunday" in response to questions about a report that Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein suggested secretly recording Trump and possibly using the 25th Amendment to remove the president from office.

Graham said he didn't favor firing Rosenstein, who has denied the report and said he never advocated for removal of the president.

"He shouldn't fire Rosenstein unless you believe Rosenstein's lying," Graham said.

Instead, the South Carolina senator pointed his finger at others in the department who he said have "tried to destroy this president."

He specifically referred to former FBI officials Andrew McCabe, Lisa Page and Peter Strzok.

McCabe, a former FBI deputy director, was fired after being accused of making an unauthorized disclosure to the news media. Strzok, who helped lead the FBI inquiry into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election, lost his job after officials discovered he had been exchanging anti-Trump text messages in 2016 with Page, a lawyer, who also has left the department.

"Before the election, the people in question tried to taint the election, tip it to (Hillary) Clinton's favor; after the election, they're trying to undermine the president," Graham said.

He added he did not know "what Rosenstein did, but I know what McCabe or Page and Strzok did. They tried to destroy this president. If Rosenstein's involved, he should be fired. If he's not involved, leave him alone."

At the time of his firing, McCabe said the attacks against him were "part of this administration's ongoing war on the FBI" that "only highlights the importance of the special counsel's work" investigating whether the Trump campaign conspired with Russia.

Graham told Fox News host Chris Wallace on Sunday that a new special counsel is required to investigate what happened at the FBI, and he called on Rosenstein to appoint one immediately.

"Rosenstein is doing the country a disservice by not appointing a special counsel" to look into FBI actions regarding Trump and Russia, he said.

Democrats have resisted the call for another special counsel to be appointed and ridiculed claims by Trump and his allies that the FBI is tainted by bias.

"The president has claimed a vast conspiracy in his own government against his campaign and administration," Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., said during the summer when a Justice Department inspector general's report was released finding that former FBI director James Comey and others failed to follow rules.

Durbin noted that "this report found no evidence that political bias affected the FBI's investigations."

He and other Democrats repeatedly have said complaints of bias are misplaced and seem to be an effort to undermine the inquiry into the Trump campaign and Russia led by special counsel Robert Mueller.

Meanwhile, Trump, though telling confidants that he felt the moment was another example of the "Deep State" and media conspiring to undermine him, held off dismissing Rosenstein.

The story broke as Trump was in his motorcade heading toward a Department of Veterans Affairs event Friday in North Las Vegas, Nev., though some in the White House had been alerted to the report the day before. Rosenstein put out a statement refuting the story and then, after being summoned to the West Wing that evening by White House chief of staff John Kelly, put out a second, stronger denial.

At the same time, at a rally in Springfield on behalf of Missouri Senate candidate Josh Hawley, Trump made a cryptic remark about removing the "lingering stench" from the FBI and Justice Department but did not explicitly bring up the Rosenstein story.

Later, the president angrily asked confidants, inside and outside the White House, how to respond. He received mixed messages. Some urged him to fire Rosenstein.

Others suggested restraint while seeing if the report was incorrect or if it was planted by some adversary.

Jack Maloney, of Brownsburg, Ind., says the billions of dollars in U.S. relief for farmers is "a nice gesture" but what farmers want is free trade, not government handouts.

Farmers fear Trump's bailout will fall short

By Juliet Linderman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Farmers across the United States will soon begin receiving government checks as part of a billion-dollar bailout to buoy growers experiencing financial strain from President Donald Trump's trade disputes with China.

But even those poised for big payouts worry it won't be enough.

While support for Trump is unwavering in the heartland, some growers say with the November election nearing, such disappointing aid outcomes could affect their vote.

"It's pretty obvious that the rural agriculture communities helped elect this administration, but the way things are going I believe farmers are going to have to vote with their checkbook when it comes time," said Kevin Skunes, a corn and soybean grower from Arthur, N.D., and president of the National Corn Growers Association.

Corn farmers get the smallest slice of the aid pie. Corn groups estimate a loss of 44 cents per bushel, but they're poised to receive a single penny per bushel.

"If these issues haven't been resolved, there could be a change in the way farmers vote," Skunes said.

Farmers are already feeling the impact of Trump's trade tiffs with China and other countries. China has hit back hard, responding with its own set of tariffs on U.S. agricultural products and other goods.

The Trump administration is providing up to $12 billion in emergency relief funds for American farmers, with $6 billion in an initial round. The three-pronged plan includes $4.7 billion in payments to corn, cotton, soybean, dairy, pork and sorghum farmers.

The rest is for developing new foreign markets for American-grown commodities and purchasing more than two dozen select products, including certain fresh fruits and vegetables, nuts, meat and dairy.

Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue announced last month that soybean growers will get the largest checks, at $1.65 per bushel for a total of $3.6 billion. China is the world's leading buyer of American soybeans, purchasing 60 percent of the U.S. crop.

But since Beijing imposed a 25 percent tariff on soybean, imports prices have plunged.

Asked about the confusion, Rob Johansson, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, responded that the USDA took into account a number of factors "including the share of production that is exported and the value of trade directly affected by the retaliatory tariffs."

"The level of damage is not the same for each commodity," he said in a written response to questions submitted by The Associated Press.

The USDA has since released a detailed analysis of how the department made its calculations.

The breakdown has stunned corn and wheat farmers who say the payments are uneven and won't do much to help keep struggling farms afloat.

Trump set to rattle foes, friends with U.N. speech

By Jonathan Lemire and Zeke Miller
Associated Press

DOMINICK REUTER/GETTTY-AFP

Most world leaders, even those representing America's closest friends, remain wary of President Donald Trump.

BRIDGEWATER, N.J. — President Donald Trump is poised to redouble his commitment to "America First" on the most global of stages this week.

In the sequel to his stormy U.N. debut, Trump will stress his dedication to the primacy of U.S. interests while competing with Western allies for an advantage on trade and shining a spotlight on the threat he says Iran poses to the Middle East and beyond.

One year after Trump stood at the rostrum of the U.N. General Assembly and derided North Korea's Kim Jong Un as "Rocket Man," the push to denuclearize the Korean Peninsula is a work in progress.

Scores of world leaders, even those representing America's closest friends, remain wary of Trump.

In the 12 months since his last visit to the U.N., the president has jolted the global status quo by pulling out of the Iran nuclear deal, starting trade conflicts with China and the West, and embracing Russia's Vladimir Putin even as the investigation into the U.S. president's ties to Moscow moves closer to the Oval Office.

Long critical of the United Nations, Trump delivered a warning shot ahead of his arrival by declaring that the world body had "not lived up to" its potential.

"It's always been surprising to me that more things aren't resolved," Trump said in a weekend video message, "because you have all of these countries getting together in one location, but it doesn't seem to get there. I think it will."

If there is a through line to the still-evolving Trump doctrine on foreign policy, it is that the president will not subordinate American interests on the world stage, whether for economic, military or political gain.

Nikki Haley, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told reporters in a preview of Trump's visit, that the president's focus "will be very much on the United States," its role and the relations it wants to build.

"He is looking forward to talking about foreign policy successes the United States has had over the past year and where we're going to go from here," she said. "He wants to talk about protecting U.S. sovereignty," while building relationships with nations that "share those values."

In his four-day visit to New York, Trump will deliver major speeches and meet with representatives of a world order that he has so often upended in the last year.

Like a year ago, North Korea's nuclear threat will hover over the gathering, though its shadow may appear somewhat less ominous.

On Monday afternoon, Trump planned to sit down with South Korean President Moon Jae-in, who comes bearing a personal message to Trump from North Korea's Kim after their inter-Korean talks last week. Trump and Moon were expected to sign a new version of the U.S.-South Korean trade agreement, one of Trump's first successes in his effort to renegotiate trade deals on more favorable terms for the U.S.

Even so, some U.S. officials worry that South Korea's eagerness to restore relations with the North could reduce sanctions pressure on Kim's government, hampering efforts to negotiate a nuclear accord.

Trump's address to the General Assembly comes Tuesday, and Wednesday he will for the first time chair the Security Council, with the stated topic of nonproliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

Meanwhile, authorities in New York City said there's been no credible threats against the event, but that the security concerns are so broad that the police department has considered how it would stop assassins armed with poison or killer drones.

The NYPD's main line of defense will be thousands of extra police officers flooding the streets as part of a carefully coordinated effort with the Secret Service and other federal and local law enforcement agencies to protect both the United Nations and Trump Tower in midtown Manhattan, said Police Commissioner James O'Neill.

A birthday bash for drug lord's girls

'El Chapo' sits in a NYC jail, but twins celebrate in style

By Kate Linthicum
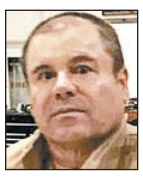
Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — It was a Barbie-themed birthday party most kids could only dream about, with carnival rides, hundreds of pink balloons and a theater-worthy set featuring gold chandeliers and a rose-colored throne.



Guzman

The guests of honor were the 7-year-old twin daughters of the world's most notorious drug lord, Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman.

Photographs and videos of the decadent bash showed up on Instagram this month, giving Mexicans a glimpse into the lives of some of the country's most controversial 0.1-percenters.

Guzman, the longtime leader of the Sinaloa drug cartel, was captured in Mexico in 2014 and three years later extradited to New York, where he is preparing to go on trial this fall on drug trafficking and murder charges. The federal indictment against Guzman also seeks the forfeiture of more than $14 billion in drug proceeds and other illicit profits.

Efforts by U.S. Treasury Department and Mexican law enforcement to find and seize Guzman's assets have largely failed. That seemed evident from the Instagram posts, in which his family looked quite comfortable.

The party was thrown by Guzman's wife, Emma Coronel, who was photographed in 4-inch-high heels in front of a fake pink mansion and a long table covered with flowers, desserts and a towering birthday cake.

Images from the extravaganza, which took place at what appeared to be a real mansion in Culiacan, the capital of Sinaloa state, were uploaded by the event photographer.

"Celebrating #MaximumElegance," photographer Antonio Tizoc wrote in one caption. In another, he praised the twins, Emali and Maria Joaquina, as "princesses."

Reactions to the images ranged from amused to incensed.

"Spectacular!" one person commented on Instagram. "Beautiful!" said another.

"Pure elegance!!" wrote a third. "Pity where the money came from."

In an interview, Tizoc said Coronel authorized him to publish images of the party, but he said he was prohibited from sharing other details, including who attended.

Tizoc is often hired to photograph quinceaneras and weddings of Sinaloa's wealthiest families.

Guzman's rise from rural poverty to leadership of Mexico's most powerful drug gang earned him folk hero status in his home state and beyond. He ran the Sinaloa cartel for decades, even during long stints in Mexican prisons — from which he famously escaped twice, once through a mile-long tunnel.

But now that he is in solitary confinement in a high-security federal jail in Manhattan, Guzman, 61, is finally believed to have handed over the reins of his organization to his adult sons.

KENA BETANCUR/GETTY-AFP

Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman's wife, Emma Coronel, and their twins leave federal court in June in New York City.

Alejandro Hope, a Mexican security analyst, said it is common for cartels to financially support the wives and children of leaders who have been killed or jailed.

Coronel, a 29-year-old former beauty queen who caught Guzman's eye at a pageant a decade ago, may also have her own family money. She is a niece of Ignacio "Nacho" Coronel, a onetime partner of Guzman who was killed in a July 2010 shootout with the Mexican army.

Emma Coronel, who was born in Los Angeles, gave birth to the twins in 2011 at a hospital in Lancaster, Calif.

The failure to seize Guzman's assets has not been for lack of trying by officials on both sides of the border, Hope said.

Drug kingpins are expert at laundering and concealing money — hiding it in real estate, small businesses and sometimes even holes dug in the ground. At the same time, Mexico's legal framework for seizing drug money is still under development and is less advanced than those of other nations, such as Colombia.

Chikinarcos, or narco juniors, as the children of Mexico's drug lords are called, have never been known for their modesty.

Damaso Lopez-Serrano, who is the son of another onetime Sinaloa cartel leader and believed to be Guzman's godson, famously posted photos on social media of his million-dollar jewelry, gold-plated guns and pet cheetah. Lopez-Serrano turned himself in to U.S. authorities last year and may testify against Guzman.

Some people simply laughed when they heard about the party for Guzman's twins.

In a segment about the celebration, Telemundo newscaster Enrique Usales wondered how the girls would observe their 15th birthday, which in Mexico is generally marked with a blowout party.

"If they celebrated the seventh birthday this way," he said, "can you imagine the quinceanera?"

Thousands bracing for flooding after Florence

By Gary D. Robertson, Martha Waggoner and Alan Suderman
Associated Press

BLADENBORO, N.C. — Thousands of coastal residents remained on edge Sunday, told they may need to leave their homes because rivers are rising more than a week after Hurricane Florence slammed into the Carolinas.

About 6,000 to 8,000 people in Georgetown County, S.C., were told to be prepared to evacuate ahead of a "record event" of up to 10 feet of flooding expected from heavy rains dumped by Florence, county spokeswoman Jackie Broach-Akers said.

She said flooding is expected to begin Tuesday near parts of the Pee Dee and Waccamaw rivers, and people in potential flood zones should plan to leave their homes Monday.

The county's emergency management director, Sam Hodge, said in a video message posted online that authorities closely are watching river gauges and law enforcement would go door to door in any threatened areas.

"From boots on the ground to technology that we have, we are trying to be able to get the message out," Hodge said in the video feed, advising people they don't need an official order to evacuate should they begin to feel unsafe.

In North Carolina, five river gauges were still at major flood stage and five others were at moderate flood stage, according to the National Weather Service. The Cape Fear River was expected to crest and remain at flood stage through the early part of the week, and parts of Interstates 95 and 40 are expected to remain underwater for another week or more.

"Hurricane Florence has deeply wounded our state, wounds that will not fade soon as the flood waters finally recede," Gov. Roy Cooper said Saturday. The storm has claimed at least 43 lives since Sept. 14.

North Carolina Emergency Management Director Michael Sprayberry said eastern counties continue to see major flooding.

He said residents who register with the Federal Emergency Management Agency can begin moving into hotels Monday.

The program initially will be open to residents in nine counties and then will be expanded. A FEMA coordinator said about 69,000 people from North Carolina already have registered for assistance.

In Washington, Congress is starting to consider almost $1.7 billion in new money to aid recovery efforts from Florence.

Lawmakers already are facing a deadline this week to fund the government before the start of the new budget year Oct. 1, and Congress is expected to try to act on the disaster relief along with separate legislation to fund the government.

The chairman of the House Appropriations Committee said the money would be available as grants to states to help rebuild housing and public works, and assist businesses as they recover from the storm. Rep. Rodney Frelinghuysen, R-N.J., called that "a first round" and that lawmakers are ready to act quickly if the federal disaster relief agency needs more money.

Cosby to fight label of predator

Debate expected at sentencing hearing

By Maryclaire Dale

MATT ROURKE/AP

Bill Cosby faces anything from probation to 30 years on three felony counts of aggravated indecent assault.

Bill Cosby's sentencing hearing Monday will begin with testimony about his sex offender evaluation and, presumably, a fierce debate over whether the 81-year-old actor should be branded a sexually violent predator.

The stakes are high given the lifetime counseling, community alerts and public shaming the designation would trigger. And it could become evidence in the defamation lawsuits filed against Cosby by accusers who say he branded them liars when he denied molesting them.

Defense lawyers say the state's latest sex-reporting law, despite several revisions, remains unconstitutional.

"It's the modern-day version of a scarlet letter," said lawyer Demetra Mehta, a former Philadelphia public defender, "which I think is sort of an interesting philosophical issue at this time with the #MeToo movement, but also criminal justice reform."

Pennsylvania's sex-offender board has examined Cosby and recommended he be deemed a predator, concluding that he has a mental defect or personality disorder that makes him prone to criminal behavior.

Montgomery County Judge Steven O'Neill will have the final say Monday.

O'Neill has presided over the case for nearly three years, from shortly after Cosby's December 2015 arrest to a 2017 trial that ended in a jury deadlock to the jury finding this past April that Cosby drugged and molested a woman at his suburban Philadelphia estate in 2004.

He faces anything from probation to 30 years in prison on the three felony counts of aggravated indecent assault.

It's unclear if the judge, in weighing the predator label, will consider the dozens of other Cosby accusers who have gone public or his deposition in the trial victim's 2006 lawsuit, when Cosby acknowledged getting quaaludes to give women before sex; described sex acts as the "penile entrance" to an "orifice" and "digital penetration"; and said he often gave young women alcohol but didn't drink or take drugs because he liked to stay in control.

Defense lawyers fighting the predator label note that sexual offender registration laws are in flux in Pennsylvania and elsewhere.

Numerous courts, including the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, have found the laws so vague as to be unconstitutional.

Courts have also debated whether the programs unfairly amount to extra punishment, especially for people convicted of misdemeanors. Cosby has added one of the state's top appellate lawyers, Peter Goldberger, to his defense team.

"This is going to probably be a very important case for sex-offender law when it's up on appeal," Mehta said. "It's an area of law that is just sort of unsettled right now. There's a lot up on appeal, but there's not a lot decided."

Pennsylvania alone now has 2,200 people classified as sexually violent predators, of the more than 20,000 people on its Megan's Law list of sex offenders. The Megan's Law group has their names, pictures and towns listed online, but they're not subject to the same monthly counseling mandates as the "predator" group, and authorities don't actively warn communities of their nearby presence.

The stigma may not be as paralyzing for a man like Cosby — in his 80s, living in a gated house and presumably not looking for work or going to the local gym. However, it's one more stain on his reputation.

Defense motions note that the sex offender board's recommendation followed an evaluation by just a single board member, and that the evidence needs only to meet a "clear and convincing" standard.

That violates Cosby's "right to reputation without confrontation, without trial by jury and without proof beyond a reasonable doubt," defense lawyer Joseph Green Jr. argued in a July court filing.

Legal experts believe a "predator" classification would be a legal finding that Cosby accusers could use in their defamation suits, including one involving seven female plaintiffs that's pending in Massachusetts.

Pompeo: No end to North Korea sanctions until 'denuclearization'

By Matthew Pennington
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Top U.S. diplomat Mike Pompeo said Sunday that economic sanctions on North Korea won't be reduced until it completes "denuclearization" after leader Kim Jong Un offered to close the North's main nuclear site in exchange for U.S. concessions.

Kim said last week at a summit with South Korea's president that he was willing to dismantle the Nyongbyon nuclear complex in the presence of outside inspectors if the U.S. takes unspecified "corresponding measures." He also promised to dismantle the North's main rocket launch site.

That has helped revive U.S.-North Korea diplomacy that had failed to make headway since President Donald Trump met Kim in June in Singapore and won a vague commitment on denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula. But U.S. administration officials have yet to signal a readiness to provide the kind of incentives that Pyongyang wants.

Pompeo also wouldn't be drawn on whether the U.S. would consider a declaration on ending the Korean War that the North has sought as a sign of reduced U.S. "hostility." The war ceased without a peace treaty in 1953.

"Everybody's got their own idea what a concession might be. Some thought it was a concession for President Trump to go to Singapore. I certainly didn't think so; President Trump doesn't," Pompeo told "Fox News Sunday."

Pompeo

"But what we've made clear is the economic sanctions — the driving force to achieve the outcome we're looking for — will not be released. And the U.N. Security Council will not reduce those sanctions until such time as we've achieved that final denuclearization," he said.

Pompeo has invited his North Korean counterpart for a meeting at the annual gathering of world leaders this week at the U.N. Trump, who is considering a second summit with Kim, will meet South Korean President Moon Jae-in for a debrief on the allied leader's recent visit to Pyongyang.

Nikki Haley, U.S. ambassador to the U.N., told CBS' "Face the Nation" that Trump is not interested in "half measures" and wants North Korea to allow inspectors at all its sites.

"We have to make sure that we're thorough in this. There are multiple sites in North Korea, and we need to have inspectors in all multiple sites if that's going to happen," she said.

North Korea is suspected to have secret sites linked to its nuclear weapons program in addition to the plutonium and uranium production facilities at Nyongbyon.

Dramatic showdown looms at Senate hearing

with Kavanaugh and that the allegation came to Democratic senators through a civil rights lawyer. She had been considering speaking to the magazine for at least a week.

The magazine reported that Ramirez was reluctant at first to speak publicly "partly because her memories contained gaps because she had been drinking at the time of the alleged incident." She also acknowledged reluctance "to characterize Kavanaugh's role in the alleged incident with certainty."

The magazine reported that after "six days of carefully assessing her memories and consulting with her attorney, Ramirez said that she felt confident enough of her recollections" to recall the incident.

The new information came hours after the Senate committee agreed to a date and time for a hearing after nearly a week of uncertainty over whether Ford would appear to tell her story.

The agreement and the latest accusation set the stage for a dramatic showdown as Kavanaugh and Ford each tell their side of the story. The developments could also determine the fate of Kavanaugh's confirmation, which hangs on the votes of a handful of senators.

It had seemed assured before Ford, a 51-year-old California college professor, went public a week ago with her allegation that Kavanaugh assaulted her at a party when they were in high school.

Kavanaugh, 53, an appellate court judge, has denied Ford's allegation and said he wanted to testify as soon as possible to clear his name.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, wrangled with Ford's lawyers for the last week over the terms of her appearance. She made several requests, some of which were accommodated — a Thursday hearing, three days later than originally scheduled, and a smaller hearing room with less press access to avoid a media circus. Grassley's staff also agreed to let Ford testify without Kavanaugh in the room, for there to be only one camera in the room, "adequate" breaks and a high security presence.

But the committee said it would not negotiate on other points, including Ford's desire for additional witnesses and a request to testify after Kavanaugh.

"As with any witness who comes before the Senate, the Senate Judiciary Committee cannot hand over its constitutional duties to attorneys for outside witnesses," Mike Davis, Grassley's top nominations counsel, wrote in an email exchange with Ford's lawyers obtained by The Associated Press. "The committee determines which witnesses to call, how many witnesses to call, in what order to call them, and who will question them. These are non-negotiable."

Ford's lawyers said it was still unclear who will ask questions, as Republicans were trying to hire an outside female counsel who could take over the questioning. The 11 senators on the GOP side of the dais are all men, which could send an unwanted message on live television against the backdrop of the #MeToo era.

Democratic senators were expected to ask their own questions.

"We were told no decision has been made on this important issue, even though various senators have been dismissive of her account and should have to shoulder their responsibility to ask her questions," the attorneys for Ford said in a statement.

As he builds a case for his innocence, Kavanaugh plans to turn over to the committee calendars from the summer of 1982 that don't show a party consistent with Ford's description of the gathering in which she says he attacked her, The New York Times reported Sunday.

The newspaper reported that it had examined the calendars and noted they list basketball games, movie outings, football workouts, college interviews, and a few parties with names of friends other than those identified by Ford.

Meanwhile, Sen. Dianne Feinstein, the top Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee, sought an "immediate postponement" in Kavanaugh's nomination amid the new report of alleged sexual misconduct.

Feinstein, who sent a letter late Sunday to Grassley, also asked the committee chair to have the FBI investigate both allegations.

Earlier, Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., speaking on "Fox News Sunday," promised a fair hearing in which both Ford and Kavanaugh "will be challenged" but said "unless there's something more" to back up her accusation, he indicated he will vote to confirm Kavanaugh.

One issue that appeared to have been resolved in Sunday's phone call between Judiciary staff and Ford's lawyers was the committee's refusal to subpoena Mark Judge, the other person Ford alleges was in the room when the assault occurred. Judge has told the committee he does not recall the incident.

The lawyers for Ford want the committee to hear from other witnesses, including a person who conducted a polygraph of Ford earlier this year, the person familiar with the talks said. Ford's lawyers also want to call on two trauma experts, the person said.

Sen. Dick Durbin, an Illinois Democrat on the committee, said he believed Ford's requests have been reasonable and that she deserves a fair hearing to determine whether her allegations are serious enough to vote down Kavanaugh's nomination.

Durbin said lawmakers will "probably not" be able to know the truth of Ford's accusation. But Durbin left little doubt that that Democrats will go after Kavanaugh's drinking history to help shed light on the matter.

Ford has alleged Kavanaugh was "stumbling drunk" when it happened.

Democrats again called for the FBI to investigate Ford's claims, a request that was unlikely to be met as Trump and Senate Republicans have said it's unnecessary.

Good News!* Stem Cell Therapy for Pain now offers solutions for you!

Stem Cell Therapy for Pain devotes much of its time treating chronically ill patients – especially those in pain. With 3 years experience, serving Northern Illinois with multiple practices, it continues to utilize cutting-edge technology to help restore patients' health. The institute recently announced its latest state-of-the-art healing procedure: regenerative stem cell therapy.

Stem Cell Therapy for Pain recently announced its latest state-of-the-art healing procedure; regenerative stem cell therapy. Stem Cell Therapy for Pain is now offering painless stem cell injections for pain and advanced procedures for arthritic and/ or degenerative conditions, especially those found in the knees, hips, should, neck and lower back.

These remarkable treatments can repair tissue in the body that has been damaged from age, disease or degeneration. They do this by pinpointing the impaired areas, removing the swelling with powerful anti-inflammatory properties and healing them by regenerating new cells and tissue.

This innovative therapy is particularly effective in treating such conditions as degenerative arthritis, degenerative cartilage and ligaments, bone spurs, degenerative joint disease, bursitis, tendinitis, and especially Osteoarthritis of the Knee.

According to the Stem Cell Therapy for Pain chief medical officer, patients can experience a significant decrease in pain and an improvement in range of motion within weeks of treatment.

"We are so excited about the results we are seeing with our patients. More Importantly, our patients are excited about living their lives enjoying the activities they enjoy. We invite you to attend one of our upcoming seminars near your home, to learn more about this incredible healing technology and how it might be able to help you or someone you love finally live a pain free life."

Iran's president blames U.S. ally after attack on military parade

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran's president on Sunday accused an unnamed U.S.-allied country in the Persian Gulf of being behind a terror attack on a military parade that killed 25 people and wounded 60, further raising regional tensions.

Hassan Rouhani's comments came as Iran's Foreign Ministry also summoned Western diplomats over them allegedly providing havens for the Arab separatists who claimed Saturday's attacks in the southwestern city of Ahvaz.

The Iranian moves, as well as promises of revenge by Iran's elite Revolutionary Guard, come as the country already faces turmoil in the wake of the American withdraw from Tehran's nuclear deal with world powers.

Rouhani's remarks could refer to Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates or Bahrain — close U.S. military allies.

Spain saves 447 migrants amid new crackdown on rescue boat

ROME — Spain's maritime rescue service said Sunday that it rescued 447 people from 15 small boats, most of them off the country's southern coast, while humanitarian groups lamented that the sole private rescue boat operating near the deadly central Mediterranean human trafficking route risked being put out of action by Italy's anti-migrant leaders.

Two humanitarian groups that operate the last private rescue vessel in the central Mediterranean, considered the deadliest route for trafficked migrants, said Panama had yanked the ship's registration following Italian complaints.

Panama's maritime authority said it has begun procedures to remove the registration of Aquarius 2 after Italy complained the boat's captain failed to follow orders.

Opposition hopeful claims win in presidential vote in Maldives

MALE, Maldives — Opposition presidential candidate Ibrahim Mohamed Solih, a longtime but little-known lawmaker in the Maldives, declared victory early Monday in a contentious election widely seen as a referendum on the island nation's young democracy.

Solih's win, announced at his party's campaign headquarters in the capital city of Male, was unexpected. The opposition had feared the election would be rigged in favor of strongman President Yameen Abdul Gayoom, whose first term was marked by a crackdown on political rivals, courts and the media.

Party leader and former President Mohamed Nasheed, in exile in Sri Lanka, had hoped to run again but was disqualified because of an outstanding prison sentence in the Maldives.

Tanzania mourns 224 deaths from capsized ferry at funeral

UKARA ISLAND, Tanzania — Relatives wept in grief Sunday at the mass burial in Tanzania of many of the 224 people who drowned when a ferry in capsized on Lake Victoria.

Colorfully painted coffins were lined up to go into graves on Ukara Island. Grieving family members placed wreaths of flowers on the coffins.

The overloaded boat tipped over Thursday as it got 55 yards from the island's dock. People carrying their goods from a busy market day prepared to disembark, unbalancing the ferry, which turned over. Horrified fishermen and others watched from the shore.

Identifications have been made for 172 people who died in the boat tragedy, Tanzania's Minister of Works, Transport and Communication Isack Kamwelwe said. The bodies of 37 others have not been identified, he told the broadcaster. At least 40 people were rescued, officials said.

"Our country has been hit by a big tragedy. We lost brothers, relatives and friends. Our call is for us to be united during this hard time and understand that our countrymen have been left by beloved parents, brothers, sisters, children and friends in this big tragedy," he said. "So we need to console them instead of feeding them with bad words. Let's leave the government and relevant authorities to do their work."

On Saturday rescuers found a survivor two days after the tragedy. The man was identified as an engineer of the ferry. His condition was not known.

Children's remains found in Mexican mass graves

MEXICO CITY — Tiny pants for a baby no older than 6 months and shiny pink sandals for a toddler are among the personal items that have turned up at mass graves in the Gulf state of Veracruz, driving home the brutality of rising violence in Mexico.

The National Commission of Missing Persons posted online hundreds of pictures of clothing Friday to give family members a tool to possibly identify missing loved ones.

Mexican authorities have found remains of children along with adults in the clandestine burial pits, a person with knowledge of the investigation confirmed Sunday. Each item of clothing was either found near a body or cut free from remains, the official said.

Authorities announced the discovery of the mass graves in early September after having counted skulls and bones of 174 bodies.

OPEC, allies agree not to further raise oil output

ALGIERS, Algeria — A meeting of OPEC and its allies ended without a decision to further hike oil output despite President Donald Trump's call for lower prices.

Members of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries met Sunday in Algiers with non-members. The committee said it was satisfied "regarding the current oil market outlook, with an overall healthy balance between supply and demand." It also urged "countries with spare capacity to work with customers to meet their demand."

Trump has been calling publicly for OPEC to help lower prices by producing more. "We protect the countries of the Middle East, they would not be safe for very long without us, and yet they continue to push for higher and higher oil prices!" he tweeted last week.

Gas prices: The average U.S. price of regular-grade gasoline has dropped a penny per gallon over the past two weeks, to $2.90. Industry analyst Trilby Lundberg of the Lundberg Survey says that's 28 cents higher than at this time last year. Lundberg said Sunday it's likely that gas prices will continue to drop slightly.

Weather watch: The National Hurricane Center in Miami said it was keeping an eye on fast-moving Tropical Storm Kirk in tropical Atlantic waters southwest of the Cabo Verd Islands still far from land. It said a newly formed subtropical storm in the North Atlantic, Leslie, was expected to dissipate in a few days.

Who wins the Trump-Obama debate on jobs? Almost everyone.

What keeps Americans up at night? Hmm, there are many contenders, but here's what's not a worry right now: the economy, and most people's ability to get a job, keep a job or anticipate a raise. Look around; notice all the Now Hiring signs?

Some evidence most of us didn't expect but ought to celebrate: The U.S. economy is growing at a 4.2 percent clip, far outpacing the 2 percent range of the post-recession era of Barack Obama's presidency. The unemployment rate is an astonishingly low 3.9 percent. That rate is at a near-record low for African-Americans (6.3 percent) and Hispanics (4.7 percent). Jobless claims, a proxy for layoffs, have tumbled to a 49-year low. Wages are rising, too. Median household income grew 1.8 percent in 2017 to an all-time high of $61,372.

Democrats and Republicans are squabbling about who deserves credit for the good times. Is it President Donald Trump or his predecessor? Both Obama and Trump claim they are responsible, which is how you know the country is doing well. Under Obama, the U.S. recovered from the 2007-09 Great Recession and continued to grow, but expansion has hit a higher gear under Trump. The combination of tax cuts and deregulation is driving business investment and hiring. When employers feel positive about the future, they bet money on it. That's what's keeping the economy speeding along.

Capital investment, which reflects spending on buildings and equipment, increased 19 percent in the first half of the year to $341 billion. R&D spending jumped 14 percent. "In the last 25 years, you've never had capital spending growth at that level," Goldman Sachs strategist David Kostin told CNBC.

You can find the same good feeling among small business owners. In July, a small business optimism index from the National Federation of Independent Business hit the highest level in its 45-year history. Shoppers seem happy, too. Consumer confidence is at the highest level since October 2000, according to The Conference Board. About 25 percent of households expect their incomes to rise in the next six months, also the highest level since October 2000.

The biggest worry we've seen among employers: Bosses are having trouble finding enough people to hire. Big retailers are starting the seasonal hiring process earlier so they can nab enough employees. Target wants to hire 120,000 seasonal workers, 20 percent more than last year. How big a headache is hiring right now? This comment about the economy jumped out at us: "I almost welcome a slowdown. I can't find enough workers," Dan Holtz, an Elkhart, Ind., RV industry supplier, told The New York Times.

Ah, but that which keeps Dan Holtz up at night allows millions of people to slumber. There are 6.9 million U.S. job openings, according to the Labor Department, while 6.2 million out-of-work people are looking for employment. There are skill mismatches, so not everyone will get his or her ideal job.

Still, the country is in excellent economic shape. When Gallup recently asked Americans to identify the most important problem facing the U.S., just 12 percent cite some aspect of the economy. Just 12 percent. If Americans aren't complaining they've got to be satisfied.

What's unclear is how expansion and job growth will factor into this fall's midterm elections. Republicans seem unable to galvanize behind a message that their tending of the economy is good for the country. Democrats want to change the subject, or relitigate the question of whether Trump or Obama should get credit. Come Nov. 6, American voters will have their say.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING

Green Bay leading 29-21 with 1:45 remaining in regulation, the Packers intercepted Kirk Cousins, effectively ending the contest. But Green Bay was called for roughing the passer; Minnesota retained possession and scored to force overtime, which ended in a tie. Why the penalty? Clay Mathews hit Cousins as the Minnesota quarterback released the ball, then they tumbled to the ground. The hit wasn't late and wasn't dirty. But quarterback and defender fell together. As of this season, that's a flag in the NFL. On opening day, Pittsburgh threw incomplete on third down; Cleveland's Myles Garrett hit Ben Roethlisberger as the pass was released, and they tumbled to the ground. Not a late hit and not a dirty hit — yet a penalty against the Browns. Neither hit was intended to harm. It was just football, which is a contact sport. They were moves that would be legal in tennis.

Gregg Easterbrook, The Weekly Standard

In the past Venezuela's combination of hyperinflation, economic collapse and an unpopular and now illegitimate government would have prompted a pronunciamiento (bloodless coup), with or without American help. According to The New York Times, a U.S. government official met three times in the past year with a group of army officers who planned such a power-grab. But in the end the Trump administration denied them support. Marco Rubio, a Republican senator, said recently that there was a case for military action to topple President Nicolas Maduro. Such hawks should be careful what they wish for ... Venezuela's top brass have much to lose, not least their cocaine business. There is no guarantee that a coup would lead to a swift and bloodless restoration of democracy. Were this indeed to happen, many in Latin America would doubtless breathe a quiet sigh of relief. But no government wants its fingerprints on a putsch. Many prominent Latin Americans still insist that the Venezuelan regime will collapse of its own accord.

Athletic doping: Russian chemists, on your mark!

Perhaps the most galling aspect of Russian cheating in past Olympics was the Kremlin's smirky insistence that it had done nothing wrong. Steroid-laced cocktails behind closed doors, doped-up Russian athletes pilfering Olympic glory ... and Potemkin denials at the lectern.

Acknowledgment of guilt was supposed to be a condition for Russia's reinstatement into the international sports community. Russia's anti-doping agency, deemed by investigators to be a key cog in the cheating, could not resume operations until Russia came clean about its state-sponsored doping program.

Last week, the World Anti-Doping Agency lifted a ban it imposed on the Russian anti-doping agency in November 2015. That clears the way for the agency to test again, for Russian athletes to compete under their own flag and for Russia to begin hosting international sports events. Chemists, on your mark!

The international sports community's reputation has been battered by years of performance-enhancing drug scandals. WADA's decision will only heighten doubt around the world about the fairness and integrity of competitions, and the resolve of sports officials to keep cheating out of sport.

Russia's reliance on systematic doping to win medals had the oily feel of East Germany's exploits in the 1970s, when the Soviet satellite's anything-goes thirst for victory included female swimmers as young as 11 being fed steroids.

Russia's methodology entailed athletes at the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi getting steroids stirred into either Chivas or vermouth. The Russian anti-doping agency carried out the effort, with the help of Russian intelligence agents who swapped out tainted urine samples with clean samples obtained from athletes months earlier. The dead-of-night exchanges were done at an Olympic testing laboratory, through a small cutout in the wall.

The International Olympic Committee left it to individual sports federations to decide whether Russian athletes could compete at the 2016 Summer Games in Rio de Janeiro. As a result, some athletes went, some had to stay home. Earlier this year at the Winter Games in South Korea, the Russian flag and anthem were banned, but Russian athletes could compete as "Olympic Athletes from Russia" if they were deemed clean.

Until last week, WADA had conditioned Russia's reinstatement on the government admitting that it oversaw a state-sponsored doping scheme. In the end, WADA settled for Russia's assurance that it would provide officials access to computer records that show which athletes cheated.

Sports officials hoping for earnest reform feel cheated, not just by Russia but by WADA. The New York Times quoted Travis Tygart, chief executive of the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency as calling WADA's decision "a devastating blow to the world's clean athletes."

It's also a devastating blow to spectators around the world who watch the Olympics because of its core ideal: Faster, Higher, Stronger — achieved not by taking drugs but through years of grit, sweat and sacrifice.

How many of those spectators will continue to watch if "Faster, Higher, Stronger" is determined by pharmacologists, the people with the pipettes?

ALEX BRANDON/AP

I know why Christine Blasey Ford didn't come forward earlier. I didn't, either.

By Eileen McClure Nelson

When I was a freshman in college, I locked eyes across a fraternity party with a blond-haired, blue-eyed boy with a magnificent smile, and when we refilled our beers, we started to talk. He was charming. It was exciting. When he asked if he could walk me back to my dorm, I didn't hesitate.

It was winter. He put his arm around me. My head was spinning from the beer and from the nearness of him. He pushed me up against the wall of a frat house. He kissed me, and it was nice. It was late. Probably after 1 o'clock.

Then, he reached inside my coat and for my jeans. I said no and pushed his hand. I said no again. He didn't listen. He put my arms behind my back and pushed his weight against me. He was strong. I kept saying no, but he wasn't being nice anymore.

That incident from long ago keeps replaying in my head now, as the nomination of Judge Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court could hinge on accusations that he assaulted Christine Blasey Ford in the early 1980s, when they were both in high school. I know how attacks like the one Ford alleged happen, because that's what happened to me. I understand why Ford kept it to herself for so long, because I did the same thing, and so have so many other women. And I understand why, even if Ford is telling the truth, Kavanaugh could honestly have forgotten about it.

What about the attackers?

Years later, victims like me live with the life-altering effects of sexual attacks. What about attackers? Do some of them carry secret apologies around in their hearts? Do some live in secret fear of being discovered? Do some truly forget about it because it was just an unsuccessful sexual conquest?

Up against the fraternity house wall, the man I met that night unzipped his pants and then my jeans. He pulled mine down. I said I didn't want to do this. I was a virgin.

I felt the cold bricks against my head, scratching my scalp.

He mumbled that I did want to do this, or I wouldn't have talked to him and left with him. He put his knee between my legs. I started to cry, and he told me to shut up or he would hit me.

I felt the brick wall scraping my back, and I waited to be hurt. I had heard it was going to hurt.

And then, a miracle: He wasn't able to rape me. I was 18 years old; I had no idea what alcohol did to a guy. He kept trying to force himself inside me, but he just couldn't. Instead, he shoved me, hard — so hard that my head banged the wall and my teeth clicked. Later, I found that the back of my head was bleeding.

He fell on the ground. I pulled up my jeans and ran.

Forced to compartmentalize

I sat in the dark on my bed, hugging my knees. Every time I thought about what had happened, my stomach tensed up. I thought I would vomit, but I wouldn't go to the bathroom, because I was afraid he was in the hallway.

I never told anyone in college about that night. Not even my best friend. He hadn't raped me, so was it really that bad? It felt bad. I felt bad. But he didn't rape me. Maybe he didn't attack me, I wondered: Maybe that's how I was supposed to be treated for letting him walk with me. I knew only that it was somehow my fault and that if I told anyone, I would be blamed for it. I would be the one who would be pointed at and talked about.

I wasn't going to tell anyone anything.

I didn't relax until I went home for the summer. But the dread never left me. Even years later, I can go from happy and laughing to scared and unsafe in a moment.

Great evenings out end with the ordeal of walking to my car with my keys clenched between my knuckles, listening for footsteps and waiting for my heart to stop racing after I drive out of the parking lot. When my old dog died, I swore I'd never get another, but two weeks later, after every noise in the house made my stomach contract, I adopted a hound. Unexpected knocks at the door make me jump; one time, my daughter had to say "It's me" three times as I looked at her face through a crack in the door before I let her in the house. That night changed who I am.

Spilling secrets

A few years after it happened, I was at dinner with several women. We started talking. Two had been raped. Each of the others had been attacked. I told my story for the first time.

I believe Ford. She knew that her motives would be questioned. She knew she would be vilified and called a liar. But I also believe that Kavanaugh might not remember hurting her if he did it. For Ford, it was a defining moment in her life. For Kavanaugh, though, maybe it was just a forgettable goof.

Most women never report incidents like what happened to me, despite President Donald Trump's declaration Friday morning that if Ford was really attacked, she would have told her parents and the authorities. Only about 30 percent of sexual assaults are reported to the police, according to the Rape, Abuse and Incest National Network.

But if she's anything like me, Ford felt compelled to speak out now because to do nothing would be to deny herself yet again. It would be one more time that she just let it go and he got away with it. And she can't let it happen again.

I know it seems easier and safer to stay silent. But it isn't, really. I have daughters. I don't want them to keep quiet if someone hurts them. I want them to fight for justice. I want those who hurt women to answer for it. They don't deserve to walk away and shirk it off as a youthful indiscretion. Men need to answer for events in the past because the women they harmed still live with what occurred. We can move forward only when we acknowledge what's already happened.

How much evidence do we need to destroy someone?

By Marc A. Thiessen
The Washington Post

Christine Blasey Ford has accused Brett M. Kavanaugh of attempted rape while they both were in high school — a charge he unequivocally denies. She can't remember the date the alleged attack took place. She isn't even certain about the year (although she reportedly thinks it may have been the summer around the end of her sophomore year when she was 15). She can't remember whose house she was in. She can't remember how she got there. She says she didn't tell anyone about it at the time, not even her closest friends — so there are no contemporaneous witnesses to back her claims.

No other women have come forward to say that the young Kavanaugh assaulted them. There is no pattern of bad behavior. Quite the contrary, by all accounts other than Ford's, he treats women with respect in his personal and professional life. (Full disclosure: I worked with Kavanaugh in the George W. Bush White House.) The gathering included just Ford and four others, according to her confidential letter to Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif. One man named by Ford as a witness has come forward and not only denied knowledge of the assault but also denied knowledge of the gathering in question. Another, who said he was the "PJ" mentioned in the letter, Patrick J. Smyth, has also denied being at a gathering like the one Ford described.

Ford deserves to be treated with dignity, not maligned or attacked. But let's not forget that Kavanaugh is human too. This ordeal affects not only him but also his family, including his two young daughters, who are hearing awful things said about the father they love. He cannot prove a negative. So far, there are accusations but no corroborating evidence. And accusations without evidence cannot be the standard by which a man's reputation and career are ruined.

Both Kavanaugh and Ford have been ill-served by Senate Democrats in this process. Feinstein, the Judiciary Committee's ranking Democrat, knew about Ford's accusation for about six weeks and did nothing. She never asked Kavanaugh about the allegations in private or in public. She did not use the confidential, bipartisan process that the Judiciary Committee uses every day to assess the credibility of allegations against hundreds of judicial nominees — which would have given Ford the chance to talk to the committee's professional investigators in a confidential setting. Bizarrely, to this day Feinstein has not shared a copy of Ford's unredacted letter with Judiciary Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa. But Democrats appear not to have been too scrupulous when it came to protecting her confidentiality.

Ford has also been ill-served by her lawyers, who initially stated that Ford "will agree to participate in any proceedings that she's asked to participate in." Then, when Grassley canceled the vote on Kavanaugh's nomination and scheduled a hearing where she could testify in public or private, her lawyers started echoing Senate Democrats' new message that a full FBI investigation was needed before she would speak to the committee — undermining the perception of Ford's independence.

It's not the FBI's job to investigate. There is no federal crime alleged. As Grassley explained in a letter, "We have no power to commandeer an executive branch agency into conducting our due diligence." Senate Democrats know this. They have turned down Grassley's offer to participate in interviews of Kavanaugh, Ford and other alleged witnesses. They are using Ford to demand an FBI investigation in the hope they can delay Kavanaugh's confirmation until after Election Day — when Democrats hope to take back the Senate and block him from joining the Supreme Court.

The #MeToo movement is a force for good in society. It has removed sexual predators from the workplace in politics, media, entertainment, religion and elsewhere. It has encouraged women and men who have been abused to speak up — and others to support their allegations. But allegations alone are not enough. There must be evidence.

With the evidence available right now, there is no chance Kavanaugh would be convicted in a court of law. Indeed, no reasonable prosecutor would agree to bring a case. But in the court of public opinion, the standards of evidence seem to be much lower. This much is certain: The standard of evidence to ruin a man's reputation cannot be zero.

PERSPECTIVE

Protect the right to speak against Israel

By Hussein Ibish

Campus fights about free speech and censorship tend to devolve into rage-filled deadlocks pitting "intolerance" against "political correctness," resolving nothing. One topic, though, has produced a depressing consensus: that it's acceptable to suppress speech advocating economic protests targeting Israel.

The pro-Palestinian movement promoting boycotts, divestment and sanctions to protest Israeli occupation of the West Bank and control of Gaza is being systematically targeted by campus authorities, and also by state governments and even Congress.

The administration of President Donald Trump, too, has demonstrated a remarkable double standard on this question.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions declared Sept. 17 that "freedom of speech and thought have come most under attack on the college campus," and vowed that the Justice Department would protect this "valued right" from being "attacked or eroded."

Yet almost simultaneously, the new head of civil rights for the Education Department, longtime pro-Israel activist Kenneth L. Marcus, reopened an old investigation into complaints by Jewish students at Rutgers University in New Jersey. The students had claimed that the university failed to protect them from harassment, and that they were discriminated against by being charged entrance fees to a public pro-Palestinian event in 2011. Those allegations were rejected by a 2014 investigation by the Education Department, which closed the case.

Marcus said he was reopening the issue based, in part, on the embrace by the Trump administration of a definition of anti-Semitism that includes "denying the Jewish people the right to self-determination" or holding Israel to a double standard.

The first effectively renders all non- and anti-Zionist perspectives "anti-Semitic" by definition, and the second could be applied to almost any strong criticism of Israeli policy or conduct.

Twenty-four state legislatures have adopted measures punishing advocacy and activism promoting boycotts of Israel, often foisting the same flawed definition of anti-Semitism on public schools and universities.

These efforts range from the sinister to the ridiculous; Dickinson, Texas, tried to make victims of Hurricane Harvey pledge not to boycott Israel as a condition for receiving government relief aid.

Worse still, Congress is considering "Anti-Semitism Awareness" and "Israel Anti-Boycott" acts that would expand the effort to suppress and even criminalize criticism of Israel to the national level.

The "Anti-Semitism Awareness Act" embraces the same language about "self-determination" and double standards that could easily be construed as barring all but the most mild criticisms of Israeli policies.

Like many of its state-level precursors, the "Anti-Boycott Act" aims at penalizing participation in, and even advocacy of, anti-Israel boycotts.

These laws not only conflate criticism of Israeli policies with discrimination against Jewish Americans, they also conflate Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories with Israel itself. The "Anti-Boycott Act" would apply uniformly to Israel and to "Israeli-controlled territories," laying out criminal financial penalties for those who engage in boycotting Israel or its settlements in occupied territories.

Such measures, whether at the state or national level, are plainly unconstitutional and ultimately unenforceable. But they contribute to chilling strong criticism of Israel.

The boycott, divestiture and sanctions movement itself is no friend of free speech. Many of its advocates promote academic and cultural boycotts of Israelis, and try to silence pro-Israel speech. Many of its most strident voices advocate a one-state agenda that imagines the Jewish state vanishing as the Palestinian population rises. But they've been singularly ineffective.

What has actually gained traction, particularly in Europe, are efforts to distinguish between Israel and the West Bank Jewish settlements, and to simultaneously promote engagement with Israel and disengagement with settlements.

Settlement activity is banned by international law as a human rights violation against the people whose territory is being taken away from them by an occupying army. The right not to be colonized is central to the system of human rights constructed since World War II.

That's the real target of these state and national laws, not generalized boycotts of Israel, which are marginal and ineffective. Efforts to boycott Israel's settlements and their products, on the other hand, are growing and potentially effective.

Both Israel and its supporters (to stigmatize all boycotts) and the strident BDS movement (to promote itself) conflate them as a single, unified campaign. And even when the call is precisely for a total boycott of all things Israeli, it's inappropriate and unconstitutional for state and federal governments to try to suppress such advocacy. Yet this issue is rarely raised in the raging debate about free speech, especially on campuses.

As a long-standing critic of one-state rhetoric and strident BDS advocacy, my own campus lectures have been repeatedly disrupted by anti-Israel protesters in recent years. And anti-Semitism is alarmingly extant among my fellow Arabs, and is the purest poison for the Palestinian cause.Yet calls to boycott Israel in general are usually not anti-Semitic as much as they are quixotic, confused and misguided. What we need is more engagement, not more alienation.

I'm disturbed that campus, state and national authorities are using their power to punish boycott-advocacy as hate-speech, in the process chilling many other valid criticisms of Israel.

People who really care about free speech should be prepared to defend it even for ideas they don't like. There can't be an exception to free speech for strong criticism and even boycotts of Israel.

Trucks prepare to haul overseas shipping containers this month at the Port of Los Angeles. Many of those goods stand to get more costly.

By Jon Healey

President Donald Trump announced last week that he's slapping a 10 percent tariff on $200 billion worth of Chinese goods, on top of similar tariffs imposed earlier this year on $50 billion worth of Chinese imports. Once the new tariffs are in place, Trump's levies will apply to almost half the value of the products we buy from China.

Too bad the president doesn't seem to understand who will pay these tariffs.

At an event earlier that day, Trump talked about the trade negotiations with Mexico and Canada, then said, "China is now paying us billions of dollars in tariffs, and hopefully we'll be able to work something out." That's exactly backward. The tariffs Trump imposed on Chinese goods are paid by the businesses and consumers in this country that buy them.

In other words, the tariffs are a tax on our people, not theirs. The pain ultimately is borne by U.S. consumers, as businesses pass along the tariffs they pay on the Chinese components and metals they buy. Alternatively, when businesses shift to higher-priced U.S.-made components and metals to avoid the tariffs, their costs go up, and their prices follow.

The New York Times offered a few examples: "Steel prices are up more than 10 percent since February, the month before Mr. Trump announced his long-awaited tariffs of 25 percent on steel and 10 percent on aluminum, from a wide swath of trading partners. Prices on washing machines jumped 20 percent in the months following Mr. Trump's decision to impose tariffs on imported washers."

The cost of goods in general is increasing slowly, but tariffs probably aren't a factor because they apply to a very small slice of the economy. That could change, though, if Trump follows through on the two threats he added to the announcement of the $200 billion in new tariffs.

First, the tariffs will go up from 10 percent to 25 percent on Jan. 1 — a clear effort to force China to the negotiating table. And second, Trump said he'll hit the rest of China's exports to the United States — about $267 billion worth of goods — "if China takes retaliatory action against our farmers or other industries."

Trump sees this as a contest he can't lose, given how much more Americans import from China than China imports from us. To many economists, this trade imbalance is a sign of the United States' low savings rate, the confidence and capability of U.S. buyers, and other factors that aren't necessarily negative. To Trump, it's a sign that China is defeating us in the competition for manufacturing jobs.

Referring to last year's $375 billion trade deficit with China, Trump said, "We're not going to lose that. We can't do that. We can't do that anymore. It should have been done many years ago. It should have been done by other presidents. And actually, it's a disgrace that it wasn't done."

The president is counting on China to cave in the face of the ever-widening penalties on Chinese exports. That hasn't happened yet; instead, China has been content to impose retaliatory tariffs on U.S. exports, hurting sales and raising anxiety levels across many industries. In fact, groups representing thousands of businesses banded together this month to lobby harder against the levies.

Safety first

Anyone who uses the lakefront trail owes Ken Griffin a huge thanks for pouring millions of his own dollars into separating the running/walking trail from the bike trail. I rode the length of the trail on a recent weekend and sang his praises on numerous occasions. Once that work is completed and the trails are fully separated, using the lakefront trail will be a much safer and fun experience for everyone. Casual dog walkers will no longer fear for their lives as speeding, spandex-wearing bike riders weave in and out of foot traffic. Thank you, Ken.

Chicago's next mayor

There are so many people running for mayor of Chicago that it is hard to keep track of them all. However, the best candidate has not announced — yet.

Of course, we all know who this person is: Barack Obama.

Former President Obama has the credentials, credibility and, no doubt, the consent of a majority of the people of Chicago.

The former community organizer and Nobel Peace Prize winner could end the hostility among the black, brown and white communities of Chicago. He could easily raise more money than all his opponents combined to fund his campaign. Most important, Obama would have a Democratic-controlled City Council and would not have to deal with people such as U.S. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell and U.S. House Speaker Paul Ryan.

I eagerly anticipate his run for mayor, and I cannot wait until he becomes the Man on Five.

— Stan Palder, Chicago

Following precedent

I don't understand the legal basis for the Protect Our Parks lawsuit attempting to block the Obama Presidential Center from being placed in Jackson Park. Protect our Parks claims that a private organization does not have a right to take city parkland.

But there is precedent for a private organization taking parkland. The Chicago Academy of Sciences built a nature museum in Lincoln Park, then moved to another Lincoln Park location where it became the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum. This museum is a great addition to the city and attracts many visitors, as I'm sure the Obama center would as well. Yes, the Obama center would take parkland for a minimal price, but in exchange the city would get a wonderful attraction for Chicagoans and tourists.

— Eleanor Hall, Chicago

Hollow promises

I read Illinois House Speaker Michael Madigan's statement Thursday regarding sexual harassment in Springfield. Madigan does not take any action of any kind unless it benefits himself, his family and his allies. This means that many people and organizations in Illinois can go pound sand.

In my opinion, his words are neither sincere nor caring, but rather politically expedient. He will continue to carry on his activities as he has always done. Marlins will be swimming in the Chicago River before Madigan would even have an inkling about doing something that benefits Illinois as a whole.

— Howard Herman, Skokie

Leadership material

One of the many, complex and demanding responsibilities of the president of the United States is that of "Consoler in Chief."

Time after time President Donald Trump has failed to meet this responsibility so successfully demonstrated by previous presidents. Actions and words from the White House have played a powerful role in the nation's healing after tragedies, crises and disasters.

Why is this president so incapable of being "consoler in chief"? To fulfill this role, one must be compassionate, possess empathy and show concern for those in distress, qualities of a mature and fully developed personality. Trump has none of these characteristics. A nation led by such a person should be a major concern and viewed as dangerous.

Lessons learned from financial crisis

This month marks a decade since Lehman Brothers went bust and taxpayers began the long process of bailing out big banks. It's a good time to review some of the big lessons learned from the financial crisis. Here are 10 to consider:

1. Get personal. When markets are in turmoil and you are scared, your personal situation should guide your decisions. The first step is to figure out where you stand and, more specifically, the status of your cash reserves, consumer debt and current retirement contribution level.

2. Develop a cash flow. When we feel out of control, the simple technique of identifying what is coming in and what is going out can help develop short, intermediate and long-term game plans.

3. Maintain a healthy emergency reserve fund. Bad luck can occur at any time, but an ample safety net (6 to 12 months of expenses for workers and 12 to 24 months for retirees) can help avoid selling assets at the wrong time and/or invading retirement accounts.

4. Balance fear and greed. At market tops, greed kicks in and we tend to assume too much risk. Conversely, when the bottom falls out, fear takes over and makes us want to sell everything and hide under the bed.

5. Maintain a diversified portfolio. One of the best ways to prevent emotional swings is to create and adhere to a diversified portfolio that spreads out your risk across different asset classes, such as stocks, bonds, cash and commodities. And don't forget to rebalance periodically.

6. Keep making retirement contributions. Amid uncertainty, this is hard to do, but if possible, stick to your plan and keep putting money away. If you need to reduce the amount due to unforeseen circumstances, try to at least capture any company match.

7. Manage cash. If you need money within a year or so, keep it in a safe place, such as a checking, savings, money market or short-term CD or bond. Do not tempt fate by putting money that you know you will need at risk.

8. Beware the sales pitch. When we are fearful, we tend not to make the greatest decisions. So if someone (a broker, salesman, etc.) pitches a brand new product, either when the bottom has fallen out or when markets are reaching new highs, take time to evaluate whether or not to take the plunge.

9. Be mindful about real estate purchases. Because housing was the spark that lit the financial crisis, you should follow these rules of thumb, if possible: Try to put down 20 percent for a mortgage and stick to plain vanilla home loans, such as 15- or 30-year fixed-rate mortgages, unless you really understand what you are doing.

10. Take a break. Every crisis is replete with scary music and graphics. Once you have assessed your personal situation and made some choices, it's smart to tune out from the 24/7 coverage. The reason is clear: The drumbeat of bad news can lead to negative thoughts. These can take over your brain and crowd out everything else, resulting in an endless loop, which psychologists say can distort reality, disrupt thinking and erode performance.

If you are starting to feel anxious, return to this list and remind yourself that you have a plan and are sticking to it.

JEHSOMWANG/DREAMSTIME

3 signs leaders are undermining their authority

BY JARED WEITZ | Inc.

Every boss wants to be trusted and obeyed. If employees are doing what you say and staying loyal to your company, you are very lucky.

Many entrepreneurs experience tremendous difficulty in both departments. So many things can undermine authority, which ultimately prevents employees from performing to the best of their abilities.

You may ask: Why aren't my employees going the extra mile? Why don't they listen to me when I say something is urgent? The most logical reason is that, whether you intended to do so or not, you have given your employees a reason not to trust you or take your words seriously.

Here are three commonly overlooked mistakes that may be undermining your authority.

1. Lack of professionalism

Does your company feel like a real company? Employees have regular paychecks and benefits (health insurance, retirement plans, etc.) and do not question their security. But pay and benefits aren't the only requirement for professionalism. The company must operate in a manner that suggests the boss and superiors know exactly what needs to get done and why.

Work is not assigned only to be forgotten shortly after. Superiors don't say one thing this week and another the next. When someone disagrees with a superior, the superior provides a valid explanation rather than simply telling employees to do what they are told.

A lack of professionalism makes employees uncertain about the future. They get the impression that their boss views them as expendable lackeys who do not deserve to be treated with respect. Teams should know their hard work is valued.

Employees might be willing to put up with unprofessional tendencies in a business's early stages. But that doesn't mean it can go on forever. So, rather than pretending the problem doesn't exist, acknowledge such errors to employees and let them know you are working on clearing them up.

2. Personal transparency

The increasing transparency between employers and employees is a blessing and a curse. It allows employees to get to know their bosses on a deeper level and connect as people. This can create problems, however.

You can't blame lower-level employees for not mimicking your work ethic when they won't reap the same rewards. Even the most visibly distressed bosses will have trouble garnering sympathy if it's widely known that he or she lives in a mansion and jets off to exotic locales every few months.

Many bosses try to avoid these outcomes by keeping their wealth a secret. But your employees know how well you're doing. Ignoring the elephant in the room will only insult them. Don't convince yourself that employees should be as motivated as you when some of them have very little to show for their work.

Provide room for them to move up the ladder and dole out regular raises and bonuses for stellar work.

3. Harshness as a motivational tool

Bosses who follow the old-school rule book like to be extra harsh on their employees for the sake of motivation. They might set unrealistic goals, make subtle threats or throw major tantrums over minor mistakes.

But once employees discover that there really isn't a valid reason for your behavior, they may dismiss any future notions of urgency, frustration or disappointment. They won't believe you when you inform them of an imminent danger to the company's survival and will ignore you when you pitch a fit over their work output.

There are much more effective ways to increase employee enthusiasm and output, all of which emphasize honesty. In the past, employees might have been grateful at times to have been pushed so hard, regardless of whether it was necessary or not.

But in 2018, this will only diminish the trust employees have in you and cause them to wonder what else you've said to them that might not be 100 percent true. Being hard on your employees when it's not warranted will not achieve the same results as in generations past.

Adapting to change means recognizing the new requirements for success. One of those new requirements in today's business world is trust. If your employees aren't working as hard as you'd like them to, put yourself in their shoes. Is there anything you are doing that would give them a reason not to see a future under your helm?

Prioritize strong leadership and you will never have to worry about not offering more glamorous perks again.

‘Crazy Ex-Girlfriend’ writer, star talks about being a boss, pay inequality and disagreeing with others

By Laynie Rose
FAST COMPANY

Eight years after she became a YouTube sensation with a satirical music video about Ray Bradbury, Rachel Bloom, 31, has been pulling audiences deeper into her musical fantasies through her Emmy-winning show, “Crazy Ex-Girlfriend,” which begins its fourth and final season this fall.

With Aline Brosh McKenna (“The Devil Wears Prada”) as producer and co-creator, Bloom writes, scores and stars in the genre-bending show, which blends drama, romantic comedy and earworm original songs.

TYLER GOLDEN/THE CW

Rachel Bloom in a scene from her Emmy-winning show, “Crazy Ex Girlfriend.”

Fast Company: “Crazy Ex-Girlfriend” is unlike anything else on TV right now. You play the lead, Rebecca, who is smart and accomplished, suffers from severe mental illness and expresses herself in musical numbers. When you and Brosh McKenna first started working together, did you have a sense of what you aimed to achieve with the show?

Rachel Bloom: I wanted to question expectations that women place on themselves based on what they see in the arts and in the media. The show was always meant to be a deconstruction of romantic comedies, princess narratives, hero narratives.

FC: How do you make a comedy about mental illness without poking fun at your character?

RB: The nature of the show was always that (Rebecca) was literally depressed. That was definitely autobiographical because I’ve had anxiety and depression. The show’s about finding what makes you truly happy, about inner happiness. We’re always coming at (Rebecca) with compassion and (trying) to understand why she’s doing what she’s doing. Every episode is an experiment. The tone is always the hardest thing to nail, and each episode there are definitely moments where we make a change when something feels totally off.

FC: Last season, your character tried to commit suicide, which unfortunately is something that has been in the news lately. Do you see the conversation around mental health starting to change?

RB: I hope so. In the research we did about people who want to commit suicide, (they) kept saying that they don’t want to die, they just want the pain to stop. When you’re in the middle of a depression, the words “mental health” are clinical words that just feel so separate from the way you feel. Along with talking about mental health, we should be talking about how it feels — about hopelessness, sadness, the feeling of being trapped in your life. We need to address that in the national conversation.

FC: You have a background in writing and performing, but this is your first time creating a show and leading a cast. How did you approach these responsibilities?

RB: I think a big challenge of this job is learning how to be a boss and to forgive myself when I disagree with (someone else’s) choice. That’s been something I (had to) learn as a young woman. I’m the second-youngest member of the cast and (one of the youngest) members of the writing staff. When you’re in production meetings and people are often 20 years your senior, you have to find that balance of being respectful, but also holding firm on what you want.

I try to treat everyone like collaborators. When I’m frustrated, I try to go somewhere where I can be frustrated alone. Every person who’s been in a supervising position has that moment where they feel like, “Ugh, why aren’t people getting it?” Or “Ugh, people are trying to sabotage my show!” You need to understand that everyone is just trying to make a good show.

FC: You’ve talked in the past about being in writers’ rooms where people are afraid to pitch their ideas. How do you and Brosh McKenna stop that from happening on “Crazy Ex-Girlfriend”?

RB: In every writers’ room, ideas are shut down, but I think it’s important not to look at people dismissively or derisively when one of their ideas isn’t going to work in the script. The role of a boss is to shut the idea down in a very calm and humane way. I reject ideas overly kindly. I’m like, “I understand where you’re coming from. I appreciate it.” (Rejection) is something you have to learn as a writer.

FC: You’ve been a vocal advocate for pay equality in the entertainment industry. How have you approached the issue on your own set?

RB: All of the heads of the show are women, and we’re very aware of pay disparity. We’re always monitoring that, especially during actor negotiations. I’ve learned to look at my own biases. Looking at a white person and a person of color, (I’ve learned to) ask why (is one of them) getting paid more? Is it because of their expertise or because they have a better lawyer? We need to give everyone the same chance and opportunity to succeed, and then the ball is in their court.

The 4 percent retirement strategy

Finding a reasonable income stream

By Eileen Ambrose
Kiplinger

How do you tap a nest egg without depleting it too soon?

To help new retirees navigate withdrawals, advisers often recommend the “4 percent rule” as a starting point. This strategy is designed to make a portfolio last 30 years, through bear markets and bouts of high inflation.

The rule is simple. Retirees in the first year of retirement withdraw 4 percent from their 401(k)s and other tax-deferred accounts, where most workers hold their retirement savings. Thereafter, retirees increase the dollar amount of their annual withdrawal by the previous year’s inflation rate.

For example, if you have a $1 million nest egg, you withdraw 4 percent — or $40,000 — the first year of retirement. If inflation that year is 2 percent, in the second year of retirement you boost your withdrawal to $40,800. If inflation jumps to 3 percent that year, the dollar amount for the next year’s withdrawal rises by the same rate, to $42,024. And so on.

This strategy has been a rule of thumb for millions of retirees, but it was considered radical when it was first proposed in 1994 by certified financial planner William Bengen.

FLYNT/DREAMSTIME

“I got some hate mail,” says Bengen, 71, now retired. Some of it was from financial advisers who had been telling clients they could safely withdraw much more.

But those high withdrawal rates ignored the impact of bear markets, which can devastate a nest egg if one appears early in retirement. Bengen looked at how portfolios would hold up under actual historical returns. He concluded that a safe initial withdrawal rate from tax-deferred accounts for a 30-year retirement is 4 percent, with subsequent withdrawals adjusted for inflation.

Bengen recalculated his numbers for a 2006 book and found that by adding small-company stocks (which have greater growth potential than large-company stocks) to a portfolio, a retiree could bump up the initial withdrawal rate to 4.5 percent. (He still recommends 4 percent for those who will likely live exceptionally long.) The rule assumes a portfolio made up of half stocks and half bonds and cash.

Bengen’s rule isn’t universally accepted. Some critics claim it’s too stingy; others say it’s too generous.

But the 4 percent rule still serves its purpose, “which is to help people translate a pile of money into a reasonable income stream,” says Stuart Ritter, senior financial planner at T. Rowe Price. “And it still serves as a good starting point for the first year of retirement.”

Ritter suggests that retirees review their withdrawals annually, because spending doesn’t always go up every year at the rate of inflation. And retirees should recalculate their withdrawal rate every five years to see whether adjustments are needed, he adds.

Freezing your credit now is free and easy

More than a year has passed since the massive data breach at Equifax that put highly sensitive information about 148 million Americans at risk. It sent many people scrambling to freeze their credit reports or place fraud alerts and subscribe to credit monitoring services.

Consumers no longer have to pay a fee to establish or lift a credit freeze. Thanks to Congress, freezing your credit — which lets you restrict access to your credit report, which makes it more difficult for identity thieves to open new accounts in your name — now is free and easy.

Applause is unnecessary. You would think that a system that could track hundreds of millions of Americans’ entire financial histories using computer programs also could figure out a way to limit access to that information. The fees simply rewarded bureaus for not doing their job well, engendering fear and encouraging people to pay to freeze their accounts.

A freeze keeps someone from accessing your information to create new accounts. If you’re applying for insurance or a mortgage, you will have to unfreeze your account. And you must enact a freeze at each of the three major credit bureaus: Experian, Equifax and TransUnion.

The freeze will last until you lift it. But that was not always the case, so if you froze your credit after the breach last year, make sure you check up on it at each bureau and, if necessary, reinstate it under the new rules.

Or you can place a fraud alert on your account. Under the new law, the alert must last at least one year (as opposed to the previous 90 days), and it requires the bureau to use extra diligence and to notify you if someone tries to open a credit account in your name. Set up an alert at one major bureau, and the other two will be notified automatically.

One less noticed feature of the new law is the ability to set up a freeze on your child’s credit report. No, infants and toddlers can’t get credit. But because most parents apply for a Social Security number for their child at birth and then never check on it until perhaps the teen applies for a driver’s license, there is plenty of time for an unscrupulous person to steal the information and start using it for credit fraud.

Note: There is no age identification on a Social Security number, so a new, fraudulent credit history could easily be built.

This is not a minor issue. According to Javelin Research, more than 1 million children — or 1.48 percent of minors — were victims of identity theft or fraud in 2017. Two-thirds of those affected were age 7 or younger. Experian estimates that one in four minors will become victims of identity theft before becoming an adult.

The new law that went into effect Sept. 21 allows a parent to set up an account for a minor child with the credit bureaus and then freeze the account. First, ask each bureau to run a manual credit report check using your child’s Social Security number — just in case someone else has used that number to establish credit.

If your child has become an identity theft victim, go to www.IdentityTheft.gov/steps and scroll down to the section on child identity theft. It will direct you how to get that account removed and report the fraud.

Consumer credit expert Gerri Detweiler of Nav.com, advises: “If it was too much of a hassle to freeze your credit last year, please reconsider. It will now be free, and hopefully a lot easier — and permanent.”

Good advice. And that’s The Savage Truth.

Top banks for millennials

Kiplinger’s top banks for millennials this year — both online only — make it easy to maintain accounts and handle cash flow remotely.

Ally Bank
This year’s best bank for millennials is Ally Bank, according to a recent Kiplinger survey. Ally Bank offers one checking, one savings and one money market account. There are no minimum deposit requirements to open an account and no maintenance fees, and you can earn decent rates even on low balances. For on-the-go banking, you can deposit checks remotely via Ally’s mobile app or website (by uploading or scanning a photo), send money to family and friends at no cost with Zelle, and link your debit card to any of the five digital wallets that Ally supports (including Apple Pay and Google Pay).

Discover Bank
Discover Bank is the runner-up in the Kiplinger survey. Like Ally, Discover Bank offers a single checking, savings and money market account. Checking and savings are fee-free, but the money market account requires $2,500 to open and an average daily balance of at least that amount to sidestep a $10 monthly fee. You will earn 1 percent cash back on debit-card purchases of up to $3,000 per statement cycle, up to a maximum of $360 in cash back each year. Discover doesn’t charge a fee to withdraw cash from any ATM in the world. You can deposit checks remotely with the app.

Camp allows adults to connect, without cell coverage

Something magical happens when entrepreneurs and investors unplug

ELVECTOR/DREAMSTIME

By Michelle Manafy
Inc.

I was one of those city kids whose mom packed her off to camp every summer for a few weeks. We moved a lot, and the camps varied from year to year.

At the best ones, I enjoyed a life entirely unlike my normal one. I could reinvent myself, if only briefly, and do things that were wholly unlike my day-to-day urban youth.

Some families make a next-level investment in the summer camp experience. Starting as young as 6 or 7, these kids make an annual pilgrimage to the same spot in the woods and spend a month or more, year after year (sometimes generation after generation).

Fellow campers and staff members become a second family, and the campgrounds grow as familiar as their own city streets or suburban back yards. I never understood this alien world, the profound allegiance to one particular sleepaway camp, the initial aching goodbyes with mom and dad that quickly evolved into annual anticipation and excitement.

I never understood until Fireside.

Two boys, Steven Pulver and Daniel Levine, grew up in this world, both having attended Camp Walden. Pulver even became a full-fledged counselor.

Then the two went off to college, eventually becoming lawyers and, like many former Camp Walden alums, they stayed friends. Sharing an interest in technology, the two traded stories of the many tech conferences they attended, where (unless they were pitching) everyone spent much of the time staring down at their phones.

The two wondered: Could there be a better way?

The pair, who stayed in touch with many members of the Camp Walden community as well as camp owner Sol Birenbaum, decided to try to transport the immersive, friendly experience they had growing up to the tech conference circuit.

Oh, and they had to convince entrepreneurs and investors that they needed to make this epic trek only to end up somewhere without cell coverage or WiFi. Three years ago, they launched their first Fireside with a crowd of about 100 bold souls. In year two, the audience more than doubled.

This year, in his keynote addressing the nearly 500 attendees of the Fireside Conference, Birenbaum explained that a subtle but significant thing that takes place for the kids who attend Camp Walden is the transformative power of discomfort.

Likening it to the micro-tears that allow us to build muscle, Birenbaum pointed out that being away from the safe and familiar surroundings of home helps campers build new strengths that empower them in whatever they do.

At Fireside, attendees not only have to live without the reassuring buzz of their phones, they also have to forgo hotels to share cabins with strangers, sleep on bunks made for kids, without heat in weather that dips into the teens at night. Despite good food, it is, without a doubt, physically and technologically uncomfortable.

Yet what occurs is nothing short of magic, warmed by campfire light and reflected in the kind of star-filled sky you only see far from the light of civilization.

People make eye contact. They introduce themselves. They watch speakers without the distraction of tweets or email. They walk and talk in twos and groups, reflecting on what they've seen and heard.

In this lovely, odd, uncomfortable, disconnected place, people take risks: professional (pitching for formidable accelerators, venture capitalists and angel investors); personal (heart-rending group discussions about the mental health of founders); and even physical (ax throwing and blindfolded nature walks).

Fireside demands that attendees disconnect, with the promise of connecting. Without a doubt, there's something to that. All of us, in search of our next big thing, big break or big investment, need to take big risks.

While a few days in the woods without a phone hardly qualifies, getting far away from the glare of the screen might be just what's needed to really see the stars.

OBITUARIES

C. PAYNE LUCAS 1933-2018

Founded group to lead relief efforts in Africa

By Emily Langer
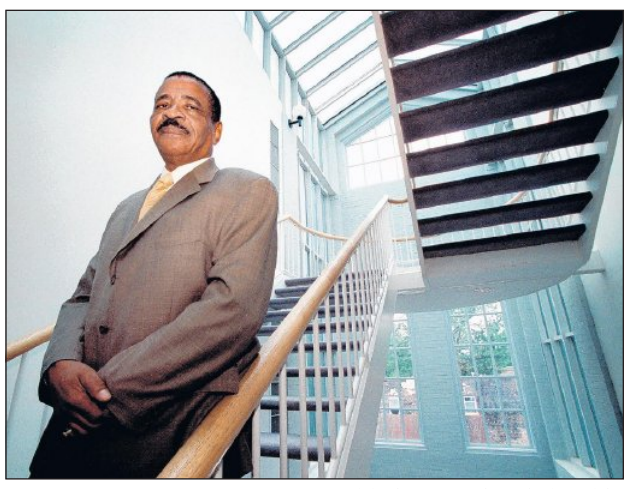
The Washington Post



DUDLEY M. BROOKS/THE WASHINGTON POST

C. Payne Lucas led Africare for more than three decades, building infrastructure and improving health care in Africa.

C. Payne Lucas, who was credited with improving lives across Africa as a founder and longtime president of the Washington, D.C.-based Africare organization that has constructed roads and wells, established schools and improved health care in some of the neediest countries in the world, died Sept. 15. The Silver Spring, Md., resident was 85.

The cause of death was advanced dementia, according to his wife, Freddie Hill Lucas.

Lucas was one of 14 children born to a lumber mill worker and his wife. He grew up in poverty, achieved an education through scholarships and rose through the ranks of the fledgling Peace Corps before helping to found Africare in 1971.

By the time Lucas stepped down as president in 2002, the aid organization had directed $400 million to 27 countries for drought and famine relief, agricultural initiatives, environmental work, and HIV/AIDS prevention, among other efforts.

"C. Payne was really a pioneer in all the work with Africa," Dorothy Height, longtime president of the National Council of Negro Women, said in a tribute when Lucas retired. "He had the vision and really set the pace. He was one of the first to call for people to pay attention to Africa — and gave them a channel to do it."

Lucas sought in particular to involve black Americans in his organization's efforts. He recalled with pride the donations that Africare received not only from the U.S. government and corporations but also from private individuals. Lucas became an influential force, at times appearing on television or testifying before Congress to force attention on humanitarian crises overlooked by the international community.

"You're seeing a whole nation destroyed," he said on CNN during the famine in Somalia in the early 1990s. "You have people eating human flesh in Somalia. How can you permit that to go on? How can we claim to be civilized and permit that? We should be in the street."

He called for a program in Africa similar to the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe after World War II, and he called on private citizens — especially the wealthiest among them — to support such an effort.

"Every black athlete in the NBA who is not concerned about the AIDS epidemic in Africa, he'd better get his head examined," Lucas told The Post in 2001, "because these are our people."

Cleotha Payne Lucas was born in Spring Hope, N.C., in 1933. In his youth he made money by picking cotton and shining shoes, according to a biography on the HistoryMakers website, an online collection of oral histories from prominent African-Americans.

He received a bachelor's degree in history, pausing his studies to serve in the Air Force, from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore in 1959 and a master's degree in government from American University in 1961.

After graduating, he interned for the Democratic National Committee before receiving a job with the Peace Corps under founding director Sargent Shriver. He later served in positions including regional director for Africa and director of the office of returned volunteers before helping found Africare. He was a longtime Washington resident before moving to Louisburg, N.C., then recently to Silver Spring.

Survivors include his wife of 54 years, the former Freddie Hill, and their daughter Hillary Lucas, both of Silver Spring; two sisters; and two grandchildren. His son, C. Payne Lucas Jr., died in 2013, and his daughter Therese Lucas died in 2017.

Death Notices

Cadigan, William Joseph '"Bill"'

William Joseph "Bill" Cadigan, aged 91, formerly of Arlington Heights, died September 22 at his home at the Resurrection Retirement Center surrounded by his family. A man rooted in his Roman Catholic faith, he is remembered for his good humor, big-heartedness, and devotion to family. Born on the South Side of Chicago to Irish immigrant parents, Bill grew up in St. Rita's Parish. He had to miss his high school graduation and the valedictory address he would have given when he joined the Navy in the closing months of World War II, serving as an aviation radio technician. With the encouragement of his Navy friends and the support of the GI bill, he received his degree in civil engineering from Illinois Institute of Technology. As a civil engineer at Consoer Townsend, and Associates, he designed and oversaw the construction of infrastructure projects in the Middle East, the planned city of Columbia, MD, levees on the Mississippi and numerous suburban communities around the Chicago area. A beloved and respected boss, he was named the Chicago Civil Engineer of the Year in 1990 and was president of the Illinois chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers. Deeply proud of his Irish heritage, he served as the Cadigan family historian, maintaining the family tree and building connections between relatives on both sides of the Atlantic. He founded the Irish American Engineering Society which still provides scholarships to students in the Chicago area each year. He was preceded in death in 2014 by his wife, Mary, whom he adored. He was a steadfast and loving caregiver to her for years as she battled Alzheimer's. A loving father, he is survived by his six children, Mary Clare, Catharine, Anne, Sheila, Bill, and Eileen. As a father, he served as a role model for hard work and always approached difficulty with a sense of humor. He raised his family in Arlington Heights, a city he helped to design in the 1950's and 60's and was an active member of St. James parish. Known for his booming laugh and joyful zest for life, his happiest role was as a grandfather to his nine grandchildren (Michaela, Dante, Liam, Isla, Terra, Joe, Cecilia, Nadia, Billy), by whom he is beloved and remembered as a purveyor of fun, a great story teller, and a role model. He frequently traveled to visit them, getting to know the smallest details of each of their lives, and sent each grandchild a meticulously handmade personal valentine every year. In addition to his six children, sons-in-law Mike and Pat, daughter-in-law Beth, nine grandchildren, and many nieces, nephews and cousins, he is survived by his sister Rita Koutnik. A video commemorating his life can be found here: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Rx_k8LSpztA. Visitation will be held from 3:00 to 9:00 pm Tuesday, September 25, 2018, at Glueckert Funeral Home, Ltd., 1520 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights. The funeral will begin at the funeral home on Wednesday with prayers at 8:45 am proceeding to Our Lady of the Wayside Church, 440 S. Mitchell St., Arlington Heights, IL 60005 for Funeral Mass at 9:30 AM. Committal service 12:15 pm, graveside at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, 6001 W. 111th St, Alsip, Ill. ## Cubs ruin Hawk's storybook finish

'Spoilers' win easily, then pay respects to Harrelson

The City Series is all about the fans, and on Sunday there was nothing Cubs fans wanted more than to send White Sox broadcaster Ken "Hawk" Harrelson into retirement with a loss.

Paul Sullivan
On the City Series

And naturally, an emotional Harrelson was just as excited about the possibility of ending his career with a Sox win over the hated Cubs.

"Right now it hasn't hit me," Harrelson said before his final broadcast. "It'll hit me later on in the game. The only thing I want to do is take this game and kick the Cubs' ass."

But the storybook finish wasn't to be for the Hawk, as the Cubs solved Sox left-hander Carlos Rodon early on their way to a 6-1 victory that reduced their magic number to five with seven home games remaining.

"It was a good road trip, right?" Anthony Rizzo said of the 4-2 swing through Phoenix and the South Side. "This was a tough series for us, playing here. We matched the intensity of the series, so it was nice."

Rizzo's RBI double in the first started it, and after he took third base on a grounder to third, Rizzo scored on an infield hit by David Bote to make it a 3-0 game. Rodon didn't have it again on a cool afternoon and left in the third

Emotional Woods back on top again

Legend earns first title in more than five years

By Doug Ferguson

Woods

ATLANTA — Tiger Woods, in his Sunday red shirt, both arms raised in victory on the 18th green.

For so many years, the scene was familiar.

This time, it was surreal.

"I can't believe I pulled this off," Woods said Sunday during the trophy presentation at the Tour Championship, where he gave thousands of delirious fans at East Lake, and millions more around the world, what they wanted to see, and what they thought they might never see again.

And at that moment, Woods was overcome with emotion and paused.

After two back surgeries six weeks apart, he couldn't lie down, sit or walk without pain. Golf was the least of his concerns, so much that he once said anything else he achieved would be "gravy."

One year ago, while recovering from a fourth back surgery, he still had no idea if he could come back to the highest level of golf.

"Just to be able to compete and play again this year, that's a hell of a comeback," he said.

Woods delivered the perfect ending to his amazing return from back surgeries with a performance out of the past. He left the competition feeling hopeless as he built a five-shot lead early and then hung on for a 1-over 71 and a two-shot victory

Bryce Callahan rushes in to congratulate defensive back Sherrick McManis after McManus makes an interception in the third quarter against the Cardinals on Sunday in Glendale, Ariz.

Crucial turnovers enable Bears to recover, take NFC North lead

Brad Biggs
On the Bears

The teams are the same. The Bears' defense, once again, looks darn good with a chance to get a lot better. The Cardinals' quarterback situation was messy 12 years ago and is just as messy today.

But the Bears' offense? It doesn't compare to the one that took the field on the night made famous by Dennis Green's postgame rant. The Cardinals didn't "let them off the hook" this time in the Bears' 16-14 victory Sunday afternoon in front of 62,163 at State Farm Stadium. It's more like the Bears' defense put itself on that hook and had just enough time to wiggle off it.

A pressure-filled effort during the final three quarters catapulted the Bears into first place in the NFC North at 2-1. It's obviously very early, but they're in that position for the first time since Week 16 of the 2013 season, when they were hanging on to the final remnants of the once-dominant Lovie Smith defense.

This Bears bunch doesn't look like the one in 2006, not on offense, and at this early juncture

Play it again, Mack: Forced fumble saves day for Bears

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Cardinals quarterback Sam Bradford should have known better. His offensive coordinator, Mike McCoy, probably should have too. The Cardinals held a 14-13 lead early in the fourth quarter Sunday and had moved into field-goal range. Against a sputtering Bears offense, the threat of padding that lead from one point to four might have proved imposing.

Dan Wiederer

Run the ball three times and send Phil Dawson in for a routine kick? Force nervy Bears quarterback Mitch Trubisky to lead a late touchdown drive?

Probably a logical formula to up the pressure on an offense that hasn't yet proved it can shoulder the load.

Yet on second-and-8 from the Bears 21, the Cardinals elected to pass. Bradford took a shotgun snap. And, well, we all know what happened next.

Feeling pressure in the pocket, Bradford shuffled around for a second or two, then decided to scamper forward. Like a naive swimmer splashing into the ocean on Amity Island.

You could almost hear the deep tuba playing the warning of Bradford's demise. Suddenly,

In 1st, despite Nagy, Trubisky

That might have been the worst-looking move into sole possession of first place I've ever seen.

Mitch Trubisky, supposed Bears franchise quarterback, looked like he regressed, and he wasn't so great entering Sunday's game in Arizona.

The defense, the best part of the team, was stung for two touchdowns early by a team that had scored just one in its first two games. The Cardinals' first drive took five plays. The second drive, if you can call it a drive, took one.

Bang, 14-0 Cardinals. Yeesh.

But then the defense started looking like the one we've seen. Vic Fangio's unit took the ball away and took the ball away and took the ball away until the offense and special teams did something, anything, with it.

The defense came up with four takeaways in the second half. The Cardinals' five second-half drives ended interception, interception, fumble, interception, sack to end one of the most aggravating performances against one of the NFL's worst teams.

The Bears' 16-14 win came despite their coach, what with the way Nagy burned timeouts at the worst times for the worst reasons, calling them on fourth-and-short but then sending out the kicker.

Trubisky was blitzed to death early and failed to find his hot read. On one blitz, Trubisky lost 15 yards. On another, he lost the ball inside the Bears 25. Later he threw an interception and nearly launched another one while throwing back across his body.

I don't know what the Nagy "process" is, but can the Bears change to the "process" that Pat Mahomes is using?

Most disturbing, Trubisky was inaccurate deep again, overthrowing receivers several times while throwing behind receivers at other times, and that when he was aware of his proper targets.

Remember how the Bears couldn't stop touting his accuracy when they drafted him? Did he leave it in college? Did the Bears know what they were seeing? Is this fixable quickly?

Trubisky looked like a rookie, which he somewhat still is, playing in just his 15th game. But Mahomes, drafted after Trubisky last year, has played in far fewer games, and there he was Sunday, flinging touchdowns everywhere. Again. Still. On end. And Bears fans are still cowering while watching Trubisky in the pocket.

ARMANDO L. SANCHEZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Like this, for example. The Bears defense made a play with 1:35 to go in the first half when Akiem Hicks strip-sacked Sam Bradford on third-and-12 at the Cardinals 23 to force a punt. But on second-and-3 from his 44, Trubisky failed to get the ball over Cardinals pass rusher Chandler Jones, who tipped the pass that was intercepted by Tre Boston.

Trubisky's first half was Mike Glennon bad. Trubisky doesn't have Jay Cutler's arm, but he has Cutler's issues with ball security and some bad decisions.

Trubisky needed a second half to prove this wasn't going backward, to show he wasn't getting worse, to stanch the feeling he was creating hopelessness. First series, he was sacked on third-and-6 after dancing around, holding the ball and looking down.

Trubisky rallied himself and the Bears with a 39-yard bomb down the right sideline to Allen Robinson to key a nine-play, 67-yard touchdown drive to make it 14-10. That's the kind of pass we were sold on. He dropped in it perfectly, hitting his target in stride.

But later on during the same drive, continuing the maddening bad play and bad decisions, Trubisky was nearly picked off trying to throw back against his body.

The Bears followed the TD drive with a couple of possessions that led to field goals. It was enough. With that defense overcoming the Cardinals, its own coach and its quarterback, it was enough to vault the Bears into sole possession of first place in the NFC North after the Vikings were humiliated by the Bills and the Packers stunk in Washington.

You heard me. The Bears. First place. Alone. A feat they hadn't accomplished since Week 16 five seasons ago.

OK, so it's only a 2-1 record. It's still the best in the division. Off one of the worst-looking performances.

Packers, Vikes fall; Lions jar Patriots

Associated Press

Packers linebacker Clay Matthews can't understand why he was flagged — yet again — for roughing the passer, this time while sacking the Redskins' Alex Smith on Sunday. Matthews said it's an indication the NFL is "getting soft."

Even Smith wasn't quite sure about the call that came with 48 seconds left in the Redskins' 31-17 victory in Landover, Md. Matthews broke free into the backfield, grabbed Smith with both arms and took down the quarterback in a seemingly straightforward manner.

"When you're tackling a guy from the front, you're going to land on him," Matthews said. "I understand the spirit of the rule. When you have a hit like that, that's a football play. I even went up to Alex Smith after the game and asked him: What do you think? What can I do differently?" Matthews said.

Smith's take on the hit ?

"I'm glad I don't play defense," he said.

Adrian Peterson ran for 120 yards and a pair of 2-yard scores, Smith threw two touchdown passes and the Redskins (2-1) held off Aaron Rodgers and the Packers (1-1-1). Rodgers finished 27 for 44 for 265 yards with two TDs and was sacked four times.

Bills 27, Vikings 6: Josh Allen played with the poise of a veteran quarterback for the Bills (1-2) by accounting for three touchdowns in his first road start. Allen made Kirk Cousins look like the raw rookie in a stunning upset of the Vikings (1-1-1) in Minneapolis. Cousins had three turnovers, including a lost fumble on a sack inside the Vikings' 20-yard line, on each of the first two possessions. The Bills turned the recoveries into 10 points and were on cruise control midway through the second quarter.

Lions 26, Patriots 10: Matt Patricia beat mentor Bill Belichick as the Lions (1-2) suddenly looked like a team with a plan on offense and defense under their first-year coach and former Patriots assistant. The Patriots (1-2) have lost two of their first three games for the first time since 2012. Lions running back Kerryon Johnson had 101 yards rushing on 16 carries, becoming the first Lions player to reach 100 yards since 2013.

Defense carries Bears to top of NFC North

it's not close. Rex Grossman was named the NFC's Offensive Player of the Month in September of that season before coming here and laying an egg with four interceptions that forced the defense and special teams to bail out the team.

Grossman was making his 13th career start that night. This was the 15th career start for Mitch Trubisky, meaning he's one week away from having the equivalent of an entire season of action under his belt. He was underwhelming again, mixing a couple of solid throws with too many missed open targets and two turnovers. An opponent that wasn't switching from Sam Bradford to rookie Josh Rosen probably would have put the Bears away after two early blown plays dug a substantial hole.

Trubisky (24 of 35, 220 yards) took a sack that knocked the Bears out of field goal range on their first possession. On the next series he was stripped by Robert Nkemdiche, setting up the Cardinals with a short field and a second touchdown.

The defense uncharacteristically left tight end Ricky Seals-Jones uncovered for a 35-yard touchdown and then had busted coverage on running back David Johnson for a 21-yard passing touchdown. Just like that, it was 14-0.

"It wasn't like they were out there beating us," nickelback Bryce Callahan said. "We were kind of beating ourselves in the beginning. It's not too hard to bounce back."

It didn't look good, but the Bears clawed away. With the Cardinals easily in Phil Dawson's field-goal range with 45 seconds remaining in the second quarter, Khalil Mack sacked Bradford to force a punt. The Cardinals (0-3) didn't move back into Bears territory until the fourth quarter when Mack struck again, stripping Bradford for a fumble that Danny Trevathan recovered. Four sacks gives the defense an NFL-high 14, three of which have resulted in a turnover.

Takeaways were the primary theme. The defense ended four consecutive Cardinals possessions by taking the ball, and a fifth — an interception returned for a touchdown by free safety Eddie Jackson — was negated because Mack was offside.

That was OK because two plays later, with the Cardinals left to pray for a Hail Mary from their own 46-yard line, Rosen was swarmed by a group led by blitzing defensive back Sherrick McManis. It was the second big play on defense for McManis, the former Northwestern player known more for his special-teams prowess. He picked off Bradford in the third quarter, his first interception since his 2010 rookie season with the Texans.

JOHN J. KIM/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Linebackers Khalil Mack, right, and Danny Trevathan tackle Cardinals running back David Johnson in the first quarter.

Callahan and Jackson also picked off Bradford, giving Cardinals coach Steve Wilks a quarterback dilemma. It doesn't seem that hard, really, because Bradford was that bad, particularly on plays in which the Bears didn't leave targets uncovered.

"We knew we were going to have a little adversity," Jackson said. "We came out and held everybody together on the defensive side and just told them, 'It's on us. We've got to pick the offense up, put them on our back.' That's basically what we did."

The Bears' ground game never really got going, and while Jordan Howard finished with 61 yards on a season-high 24 carries, including a 1-yard touchdown in the third quarter, coach Matt Nagy seemed almost bored with run calls.

After McManis' pick late in the third quarter, the Bears threw on four straight plays, with an offside call on the Cardinals' Haason Reddick helping to move the chains. A 13-play, 44-yard drive that produced Cody Parkey's 43-yard game-winning field goal with 4:31 remaining took nearly seven minutes off the clock.

The defense did the rest from there, a theme we might get used to. The good thing is that the defense, with five interceptions and eight takeaways through three games, looks like it will be good enough to carry the offense for a while.

"Three weeks in a row now they've done some special things," Nagy said of the defense. "Offensively, we understand that we can be a lot better in so many different areas. Really, in the end, there's only one thing that matters: the win."

Bears unsung cornerbacks McManis, Callahan make their marks vs. Cardinals

By Colleen Kane | Chicago Tribune

GLENDALE, Ariz. — It had been eight years, but Sherrick McManis could still recite the details Sunday night in the locker room after the Bears’ 16-14 victory over the Cardinals at State Farm Stadium.

McManis was a rookie playing for the Texans in 2010, and in an October game against the Giants, he picked off quarterback Eli Manning for his first interception in the NFL.

On Sunday night, 105 career games later, McManis recorded his second interception.

The 30-year-old Bears veteran, who is counted on mostly as a special teams stalwart, dived in front of Cardinals quarterback Sam Bradford’s pass to Chad Williams with 3 minutes, 47 seconds to play in the third quarter. He held on to the football as he hit the field beneath both Williams and Bears cornerback Kyle Fuller.

The interception was the second of three by the Bears in the second half — and the second of four straight Cardinals turnovers — to help fuel a victory that put the Bears above .500 for the first time since 2014.

“It was a great time then,” McManis said of his rookie-year interception. “It’s a great time now.”

McManis’ locker was right next to cornerback Bryce Callahan, and as they shuffled their belongings into travel bags for the trip home, reporters and camera people entered the room and headed straight for the duo.

On a Bears defense stacked with playmakers such as Khalil Mack, Akiem Hicks and Danny Trevathan, the backup cornerbacks are not usually the first to receive attention. But with starting cornerback Prince Amukamara sidelined in the second half with a hamstring injury and backup cornerback Marcus Cooper inactive with a hamstring injury, they played important roles Sunday.

JOHN J. KIM/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Sherrick McManis holds the ball and celebrates after his interception in the third quarter.

Callahan, in his fourth season in the NFL, faced the media circle first after his fourth-quarter interception of Cardinals rookie quarterback Josh Rosen helped preserve the Bears’ lead.

The Cardinals put in Rosen after Bradford also threw an interception to safety Eddie Jackson and fumbled on a strip by Mack in the second half. Rosen drove his offense to the Bears 45-yard line, but on fourth-and-5, Callahan stepped in front of Rosen’s pass intended for rookie wide receiver Christian Kirk.

“We came out with a fire under our behind,” Callahan said. “We let a couple of mental errors go in the first half, so we know we had to step up and come back from that. ... Letting two touchdowns go like that, that’s not going to sit right with us, so we had to come out and put our foot down.”

The Cardinals got the ball back for one more attempt at a winning drive, but McManis sacked Rosen for a loss of 7 yards on the final play.

When it was his turn to face the media circle, McManis was asked about making the big plays on defense when he so often is “pigeonholed” on special teams, and he quickly jumped in.

“I wouldn’t say pigeonholed,” McManis said. “I take pride in special teams. I don’t look down at it. That’s me. That’s what I do. I’m a special teams player. I’m proud of it. And when I’m out there on defense, I take pride in doing my job.”

The defense helped the Bears avoid a third NFC North upset after the Vikings lost to the Bills and the Packers lost to the Redskins on Sunday. The Bears also moved into first in the division, and while both offensive and defensive players acknowledged it wasn’t always pretty, they were happy to celebrate with a dance party.

“We had a game where we figured out how to win at the end,” McManis said. “That’s always a positive. We have a lot of growth to do as a unit — defense, offense and special teams — but it’s always better to learn on a win.”

THREE KEYS

Well, how about this, Chicago? The Bears are back in first place in the NFC North. By themselves. For the first time since December 2013. A 16-14 victory over the Cardinals on Sunday, coupled with losses by the Packers and Vikings put another charge of energy into an emerging young team intent on speeding up its return to relevance. Here’s our Three Keys.

1 Strike early

Postgame recap: Any hopes the Bears had of quickly demoralizing a desperate Cardinals team went out the window on the game’s first series. A busted coverage allowed Sam Bradford to hit tight end Ricky Seals-Jones for a 35-yard touchdown pass. And suddenly, a Cardinals team that hadn’t led all season and hadn’t scored in the first half of either of its two losses, had life. Later in the first quarter, the Cardinals needed only one play to turn a Mitch Trubisky fumble into points with Bradford hitting David Johnson on a 21-yard touchdown pass. Right away, it was clear the Bears would be in for a 60-minute fight. To their credit, they overcame the slow start by showing their knack for finishing. The defense created four takeaways and didn’t allow a point after halftime.

2 Handle the pressure

Postgame recap: The Cardinals’ three biggest defensive plays of the first half all came on blitzes that the Bears failed to thwart. On the Bears’ first possession, on third-and-6 from the Cardinals 13, cornerbacks Bene Benwikere and Brandon Williams each blitzed off the edges, chasing Trubisky into a costly 15-yard sack. On the next snap, kicker Cody Parkey missed a 46-yard field-goal attempt. Trubisky’s two first-half turnovers — a lost fumble and an interception on a screen pass — also came with the Cardinals bringing extra pressure. Trubisky and his offense are fortunate to be paired with such a relentless, game-changing defense. As the offense moves forward, Sunday will provide another example of a need to make improvements against the blitz.

3 Be special

Postgame recap: The Cardinals were a nonfactor in the return game. Cardinals rookie Christian Kirk, who has game-breaking potential, had only one punt return but was tackled immediately by Sherrick McManis. Cody Parkey’s missed field-goal try was the only major special teams miscue for the Bears. To the veteran kicker’s credit, he regrouped by making kicks from 20, 41 and 43 yards. Parkey’s final make, with 4:31 to play, goes down as the game-winner. The Bears’ Tarik Cohen, meanwhile, provided a nifty 21-yard punt return in the second quarter that helped with field position. The Bears followed with an 11-play, 71-yard field-goal drive to get on the scoreboard before halftime. — Dan Wiederer

ROUNDUP

Allen, Bills beat odds, crush Vikings

Associated Press

Bills rookie Josh Allen played with the poise of a seasoned quarterback, accounting for three touchdowns in his first road start in the NFL in a stunning 27-6 upset of the Vikings on Sunday.

The Vikings (1-1-1) were 16½-point favorites, allowing the Bills (1-2) to become only the sixth such underdog to win in the NFL's last 81 games with point spreads that big.

Saints 43, Falcons 37: Drew Brees' 1-yard run capped an 80-yard touchdown drive to open overtime to lift the Saints. Brees passed for 396 yards and three touchdowns, ran for two scores and set the NFL record for career completions with his 6,301st, passing Brett Favre.

Chiefs 38, 49ers 27: After winning his first three starts all away from Arrowhead Stadium, Patrick Mahomes finally made his regular-season home debut and torched the 49ers for 314 yards and three touchdowns. Mahomes' 13 touchdown passes are the NFL record in the first three weeks of a season.

Panthers 31, Bengals 21: Cam Newton threw for two touchdowns and ran for two, while Christian McCaffrey racked up a career-high 184 yards rushing.

Eagles 20, Colts 16: Carson Wentz threw for a touchdown on his first drive in nine months, and the Eagles got stops on Andrew Luck twice in the final 90 seconds.

Bills rookie Josh Allen looks to pass during a decisive upset against the Vikings in his first career road start.

Dolphins 28, Raiders 20: Receiver Albert Wilson threw a 52-yard touchdown pass to put the Dolphins ahead in the fourth quarter, then turned a short reception into a 74-yard score that sealed it.

Redskins 31, Packers 17: Adrian Peterson ran for 120 yards and a pair of 2-yard scores, and Alex Smith threw two touchdown passes for the Redskins.

Ravens 27, Broncos 14: Joe Flacco picked apart the Broncos' depleted defense for 277 yards and a touchdown, and the Ravens twice stopped drives inside their 15 in the fourth quarter.

Seahawks 24, Cowboys 13: Russell Wilson threw for two touchdowns in the first half, Chris Carson added a 5-yard scoring run in early in the fourth quarter, and the Seahawks avoided an 0-3 start.

Titans 9, Jaguars 6: Marcus Mariota came off the bench and directed three scoring drives after Blaine Gabbert was knocked out of the game in the first quarter with a concussion.

Giants 27, Texans 22: Eli Manning threw for 297 yards and two touchdowns, and rookie Saquon Barkley added 82 yards and a score.

Bears 16, Cardinals 14: Cody Parkey kicked his third field goal of the game, a 43-yarder with 4:31 remaining, to lift the Bears in a game they trailed 14-0.

Rams 35, Chargers 23: Jared Goff passed for 354 yards and three touchdowns, and Todd Gurley rushed for 105 yards and another score, leading the Rams over the Chargers in their first meeting since their relocations to Los Angeles.

Lions 26, Patriots 10: Matt Patricia beat mentor Bill Belichick for his first win with the Lions. Rookie Kerryon Johnson rushed for 101 yards on 16 carries. The Patriots have lost two of their first three games for the first time since 2012.

AROUND THE NFL

■ Falcons: Calvin Ridley set a Falcons rookie record with three touchdown receptions in a bittersweet afternoon. After barely factoring in the Falcons' first two games, he was targeted a team-high eight times, caught a team-best seven passes and registered a game-high 146 yards, but all in a 43-37 loss to the Saints. "I'd really rather have the win, but it means a lot," Ridley said. "It feels pretty good."

■ Colts: Adam Vinatieri kicked field goals of 35, 31 and 28 yards to match Morten Andersen for the most in NFL history with 565. Vinatieri, 45, added an extra point to finish with 10 points in the game, putting him 33 shy of matching Andersen (2,544) for the most scored in NFL history. Andersen needed 709 attempts to set the field goal mark; Vinatieri just 670 in 23 seasons to tie.

■ Packers: Clay Matthews does not understand why he was flagged — yet again — for roughing the passer, this time while sacking the Redskins' Alex Smith. He thinks it's an indication that the NFL is "getting soft." Even Smith wasn't quite sure about the call after Matthews broke free into the backfield, grabbed Smith with both arms and took down the QB in a seemingly straightforward manner. "Nine years, I've been doing it one way in the NFL, successfully, and now it just seems as if that way doesn't work anymore," Matthews said. "And that's frustrating. ... Unfortunately, this league is going in a direction that a lot of people don't like."

BEARS 16, CARDINALS 14

Mitch Trubisky fumbles the ball during the first half against the Cardinals on Sunday. "I know I can play a lot better," Trubisky said.

Keeping the faith

Nagy backs Trubisky after another shaky, uneven performance

By Rich Campbell | Chicago Tribune

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Matt Nagy smiled the smile of a man who knows something no one else does.

Against a new wave of outside doubt and skepticism triggered Sunday by Mitch Trubisky's latest uneven performance, that's how the first-year coach expressed his faith in the second-year quarterback.

A grin, a chuckle, and a challenge to every fan who cursed Trubisky or delivered a "bust" verdict during the Bears' 16-14 comeback victory over the Cardinals.

"I'm telling you," Nagy said, the victory shaping his face. "I know people don't understand this: It takes time. We will get this."

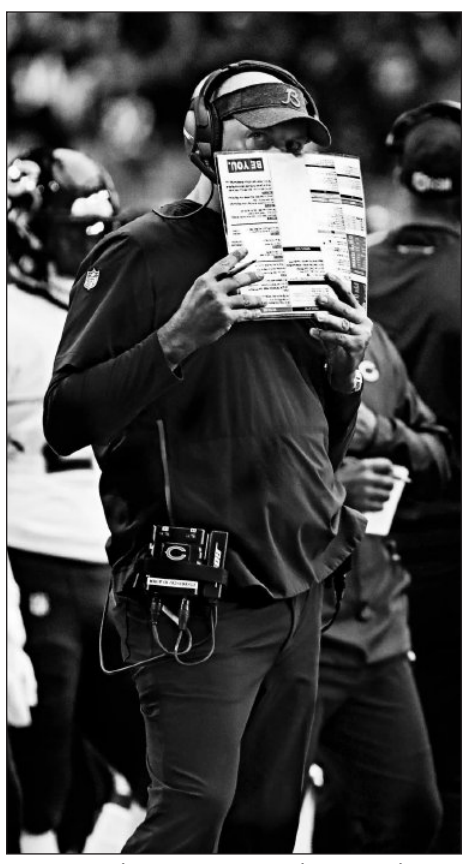
That familiar request for faith, though, is becoming a tougher sell with each game devoid of standout, significant winning plays by the former second overall draft pick.

Sunday's game lacked even the few Trubisky made against the Seahawks last Monday. Two first-half turnovers, three sacks, several other jittery moments in the pocket and some inaccurate downfield misses of open receivers required the defense to again throw a life preserver to the offense.

The Bears' four second-half takeaways relieved some of the offensive growing pains because they turned a loss into a victory. But Trubisky felt the weight of his performance even as he celebrated the final score.

"We know we're not even close to where we want to be on offense," he said. "I'm really tough on myself. I know I can play a lot better. Coach Nagy just keeps telling me: trust the process."

Regardless of whether fans choose to believe Nagy, Trubisky maintains his faith. There is no other option, of course, for a quarterback around whom the franchise was retooled last offseason.



Bears coach Matt Nagy: "It doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize the defense is winning games for us right now."

"He said the offense will have a breakthrough point," Trubisky said. "I believe in Coach all the way."

Nagy promised reporters a more thorough breakdown of Trubisky's game Monday after he re-watched it. Specifically, how Trubisky did recognizing the Cardinals' troublesome blitzes and going through his progressions.

But Nagy has a good idea what the video will show.

"It doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize the defense is winning games for us right now," he said. "But that doesn't mean the offense isn't a huge part of this."

The coach lauded specific plays, such as Trubisky's 39-yard completion to Allen Robinson on a double move early in the third quarter. He completed 4 of 5 passes for 54 yards on that touchdown drive, a boost to his final line of 24 of 35 for 220 yards, no touchdowns, one interception and a 73.5 passer rating.

However, Trubisky's incompletion on that drive was a dangerous throw late and back across the middle that was nearly intercepted by safety Tre Boston. Once again, there was Trubisky, mixing a white-knuckle, head-scratching play with the infrequent crisp ones.

As Nagy lamented the Bears' failure to score touchdowns on two of three red-zone possessions, Trubisky's inaccuracy was a painful subtext.

Before the Bears settled for a 20-yard field goal in the second quarter, Trubisky overthrew an open Taylor Gabriel on a deep shot from the Cardinals' 36. He threw behind Robinson in the end zone on a post route from the Cardinals' 21. And he was off-target on a fade to Robinson in the end zone from the 2.

Those are missteps that challenge outsiders' belief. They help set the shelf life on Nagy's vow about his offense's potential with Trubisky running it.

"It's a frustrating process," running back Tarik Cohen said. "But you're patient with it. Mitch doesn't mess up on the same thing twice. That's what you like to see out of somebody that's just now getting the reins of the offense. We're very optimistic about what it's going to be when he finally controls the whole thing."

Mack saves Bears again

there was a dorsal fine with a navy No. 52 stamped onto it.

Out of nowhere, Bears outside linebacker Khalil Mack darted toward Bradford's lower body and arrived with such force that his right elbow jarred the football loose.

Bears 16, Cardinals 14.

Once again, Khalil Mack had been Khalil Mack. Once again, Khalil Mack had saved the day.

"I just saw 52 making a play," Trevathan said. "And I was just trying to make another one, hopping on that ball. The man is a highlight reel. He plays his tail off. He appreciates the game. And he has that leadership factor to him. It's hard to explain the feeling. But it rubs off on everyone."

Yes, this is getting a bit ridiculous. But only because it has been so much fun for the Bears. The Khalil Mack experience has been everything it was advertised to be. And then some.

When September began, the Bears had a promising defense that was looking to identify its game-changing playmakers. Now they're talking about becoming the No. 1 defense in the league. Right now. And such vows don't even warrant an eye-roll.

The energy Mack has injected into an already talented and hungry Bears defense has been eye-opening. The entertainment Mack has provided for Bears fans has been off the charts.

And keep in mind, as of Sunday afternoon, Mack had only been with the franchise for 23 days.

With as many gifts as the Cardinals provided Sunday — four turnovers, three personal-foul penalties — nothing has been more exciting for the Bears than the present general manager Ryan Pace gave them on Labor Day weekend with the trade that changed everything.

Just like that, the Bears have themselves an All-Pro playmaker, an every-week game-changer, a generational talent who certainly looks like he has Hall of Fame potential. And he's under contract through 2024.

For the third consecutive game this season, Mack forced a fumble Sunday. For the third consecutive week, he also collected a sack. His first came in the final minute of the second quarter and may have proved just as important. Three plays after a costly Mitch Trubisky interception in Bears territory, Mack completely overpowered guard Mike Iupati — a 331-pound, four-time Pro Bowl selection — and pounced on Bradford for a 7-yard loss.

It backed the Cardinals up from the Bears 32 to the 39. Out of field-goal range. Potential points again taken off the board.

This has become the expectation. This is how turnarounds accelerate. The Bears have proved that they have a big-time defense with one-big time headliner to jump-start everything.

On his way out of the locker room, Mack was asked what gratification he took out of providing such a significant immediate impact with his new team, delivering exactly the kinds of contributions the Bears needed. He smiled.

"God is good," Mack said. "God is good, man."

BEARS NOTES

'Short memory' helped Parkey hit winner

By Colleen Kane | Chicago Tribune

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Cody Parkey figured he was part of the reason the Bears fell behind the Cardinals early Sunday at State Farm Stadium, so he needed to come through at crunch time.

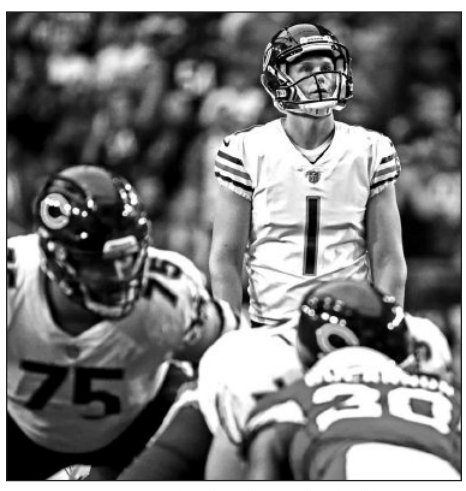
The Bears kicker said a "short memory" helped him bounce back from a first-quarter miss to hit the winning field goal — a 43-yarder with 4 minutes, 31 seconds to play — to lift the Bears to a 16-14 victory.

Parkey missed a 46-yard field-goal attempt wide right with 4:59 left in the first quarter. The Bears had reached the 13-yard line on the drive, but quarterback Mitch Trubisky was sacked by Budda Baker and Bene Benwikere for a loss of 15 yards on third down. The Bears then went to Parkey to try to get on the board.

"Obviously it's crappy to miss, and it's crappy to start with a miss," Parkey said. "Mentally, you go out there and I had support from the whole team. That felt good. I just knew I had to go out to make the next one. I'm human. Perfection is what you want. Unfortunately, you don't always get it, so you just go out and try to make the next one."

Parkey, who joined the Bears in the offseason on a four-year, $15 million contract, also made a 20-yard field goal in the second quarter and a 41-yard field goal in the third.

He was 4-for-4 on field-goal attempts over his first two games.



ARMANDO L. SANCHEZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Bears kicker Cody Parkey focuses on the goalposts before kicking a field goal in the second half Sunday against the Cardinals.

In his hands: Running back Jordan Howard said coach Matt Nagy's halftime message was in part directed at him after the Bears went into the locker room trailing the Cardinals 14-3.

"The offense needed to get it together," Howard said. "We stepped up. He said he was putting it on the O-line and the run game to get things started. We did the best we could."

Howard finished with 24 carries for 61 yards, including a 1-yard touchdown run with 6:16 left in the third quarter that was the only time the Bears found the end zone.

Howard netted 17 yards on six carries during the winning drive to set up Parkey's field goal. Bears running back Tarik Cohen had five carries for 53 yards. It wasn't a great outing for the offense, but Howard said the Bears would take it.

"It definitely wasn't pretty, but we bear down," Howard said. "A win is a win, so that's all that matters. At halftime we were down, but we fought through adversity, so I thought that was big for us."

Bears cornerback Prince Amukamara left the game in the third quarter with a hamstring injury and didn't return.

Inactives: Cornerback Marcus Cooper (hamstring) and safety DeAndre Houston-Carson (forearm) were inactive for Sunday's game, as expected. Linebackers Isaiah Irving and Kylie Fitts, offensive lineman Rashaad Coward, defensive lineman Nick Williams and wide receiver Javon Wims were healthy scratches.

CITY SERIES

For teary Hawk, it's finally 'ovah'

Phil Rosenthal
On media

When it was "ovah," it was Ken Harrelson's silence more than his words — the great gaps between sentences coupled with audible sniffles as he stood and waved to well-wishers — that said everything Sunday.

"I've enjoyed, very much I have enjoyed, I have loved it and I will never forget it," he said after the final out on his final official day as a White Sox announcer after 33 seasons, struggling to utter the words. "Oh man. Oh man. Oh boy. Wow."

The tears couldn't have been more predictable if Tom Skilling's WGN-9 Technicolor radar showed them bearing down on the South Side.

What was unexpected, and doubly moving as such, was that both the Cubs and Sox emerged from their dugouts, turned toward the NBC Sports Chicago booth and joined the fans bidding adieu to Hawk after the Cubs' 6-1 victory.

Moments earlier in Hawkspeak the Sox had, as always, been the "good guys" and the Cubs "bad guys."

Now they were just a reminder of one of the last yarns Harrelson repeated Sunday about how opposing players were always his enemy, at least until the final out.

Harrelson's last game — as if he'll never score an invite to return as a guest announcer — was nothing special in and of itself.

It was just another Sox loss, peppered with Hawk talking about better days to come for the rebuilding franchise and guests to remind everyone of the more pressing personnel change.

Ald. Ed Burke gave Harrelson a proclamation from the city in his honor, the presentation interrupted by a home run by the Cubs' Kyle Schwarber, eliciting a groan from Hawk.

Mostly, it was typical Hawk. He said "he gone" a bit. He recalled meeting legendary football coach Vince Lombardi once. He asserted former Sox manager Robin Ventura knows baseball as well as anyone, but a leader of players has to "know how to get what's in them out of them."

Hawk canceled the postgame show — not really, of course — on Sox catcher's Welington Castillo's single at 1:52 p.m., with two out in the second inning.

Alas, there were no rants about umpiring. But he spoke about what a great city Chicago is, though of course he doesn't live here.

You know, typical Hawk stuff.

There has been a lot of discussion over the last few days — actually the last few years of reduced workload building up to this swan song for Harrelson, 77 — about how he has embraced his role as a "homer," the nicknames he coined, the old-timey terminology he kept alive, catchphrases he employed and how people seemed either to love or loathe him.

What's truly unique about Harrelson in vacating his perch is how he is doing it in a way that has enabled his departure to be so celebrated, including the loving TV special, Hawk Day at the ballpark and all the other buildup.

Harrelson may have talked not so long ago about trying to hang on to this job until 2020, but the way this long farewell was orchestrated proved to be quite a pageant.

Try to think of the sendoff, say, Jack Brickhouse, Bob Elson, Harry Caray or other beloved Chicago announcers might have merited under similar circumstances.

NUCCIO DINUZZO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Hawk Harrelson waves to White Sox players and coaches after his last game in the broadcast booth.

"I love our White Sox fans and I always will," Harrelson said, tearing up in the bottom of the ninth inning. "It's like I said on Hawk Day, when you take a man's money, you take a man's money, but when you take a man's time, you take a part of his life. And I want to thank the Sox fans for giving me almost 35 years of their time."

Hawk almost didn't make it to the ninth. Analyst Steve Stone tugged on his emotions a tad early, asking Harrelson what he planned to do next.

It was an innocent question but left Harrelson overcome and at a loss for words, forcing Stone to broadcast solo for a moment while Hawk composed himself.

The answer, incidentally, was spend time with the grandkids and watch Sox games on his iPad through MLB's At Bat app, which he said is quite good. Not exactly the stuff sobs are made of, but the seventh-inning stretch apparently hit him hard.

He may be gone, but he'll be long remembered. And on a day in September, he brought the "good guys" and "bad guys" together to say farewell. For the Hawk, after circling for seasons with his talons on the mic, it was time to fly away.

City Series goes to Cubs

trailing 6-0. That would be more than enough for Cubs starter Kyle Hendricks, who cruised to his 13th win with another gem, allowing one run on four hits in 7 2/3 innings.

Kyle Schwarber homered and doubled to lead the Cubs, then tried to multitask afterward, stopping his postgame news conference to watch Tiger Woods down the stretch of his Tour Championship victory.

The Cubs and Sox had never played a City Series this late in the season before, and hopefully the schedule-makers won't make them do it again next year. It turned out to be one of the least interesting City Series in memory, unless you spent more time watching the fights in the stands than the one-sided games on the field.

The Cubs have bigger fish to fry, and more important trophies in mind than the Crosstown Cup, as they enter the final week of the season with a chance to clinch and rest up a few days before the postseason. With the Sox in rebuilding mode, the Cubs looked at this series as a speed bump on their way to the playoffs, despite the hype that usually greets these Cubs-Sox get-togethers.

The Sox, meanwhile, will play out the string in Year 2 of the rebuild, trying to avoid the 100-loss mark before they begin their offseason next Sunday. Nothing was expected from them this year, and unless they invest in another starter, a third baseman, a left fielder and a bullpen overhaul, next year will see more of the same.

Baby steps.

The good news is Eloy Jimenez should arrive in late April when the Sox are assured a seventh year before free agency, and Reynaldo Lopez has emerged as their best starter.

The Addison Russell situation may have helped the Sox in the opener of the series, causing a distraction in the Cubs clubhouse.

"It's hard to say that it didn't," manager Joe Maddon said. "You walk into the locker room, there's a much different buzz going on outside of the game itself. We did have to meet as a group to talk about things, and again, we did get in at 6 o'clock in the morning the day before, so (it) was just one of those days. What it really comes down to is you either have trust and faith in your guys or you don't. It was a tough day."

NUCCIO DINUZZO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Anthony Rizzo puts the Cubs on the board with an RBI double in the first inning Sunday.

But Jon Lester begged to differ, suggesting the Cubs have been through worse.

"I would hope that didn't distract guys," Lester said. "We've had plenty of other distractions in this clubhouse to kind of take us away from baseball. ... This clubhouse has been through enough adversity in the four years I've been here to move on from anything that goes on outside this clubhouse."

Either way, another City Series has ended and normalcy returns Monday for both teams.

After the final out Sunday, the Sox players and coaches lined up on the field to give Harrelson one last salute, and several of Cubs, including Rizzo, also stopped and waved to the Hawk on their way to the clubhouse.

Though Harrelson delighted in ripping Wrigley Field and was ecstatic whenever the Sox beat the Cubs over the years, everyone understood it's just entertainment.

That's why the Cubs joined the Sox to give Harrelson his props.

"That's a Hall of Fame career he had," Rizzo said. "It's a voice a lot of us grew up listening to.

"You pay respects when respects are due."

Kyle Hendricks is in control against the White Sox on Sunday. Hendricks allowed four hits, no walks and one run before leaving in the eighth.

A big whack attack

Cubs crank out 15 hits as Bryant rests fatigued shoulder

By Mark Gonzales
Chicago Tribune

The health of Kris Bryant's left shoulder was one of the only suspenseful matters this weekend at Guaranteed Rate Field, where all three games were decided by at least five runs, including the Cubs' 6-1 win against the White Sox on Sunday afternoon.

While Bryant rested his fatigued shoulder, his teammates carried the freight as the Cubs cut their magic number for winning the National League Central title to five.

If the Cubs clinch, they will do so at Wrigley Field, where they play their final seven games of the regular season. It could come as soon as Wednesday. The Cubs (91-64) open a four-game series Monday night against the Pirates, while the second-place Brewers (89-67) visit the third-place Cardinals (87-69) in a three-game series between the teams currently in line to claim wild card berths and potentially face the Cubs in the NL Division Series.

In taking two of three from their city rivals, the Cubs moved closer to seizing home field advantage throughout the NL playoffs. In the process, they'd gladly welcome a return from Bryant, who missed nearly six weeks with shoulder pain before returning Sept. 1.

Cubs manager Joe Maddon said he planned to talk to Bryant about another day of rest, but Bryant replied "I already told him I feel good."

The Cubs felt even better after a 15-hit attack that featured six runs in the first three innings in an array of methods that pleased Maddon.

Ben Zobrist produced three hits from the No. 2 spot in the lineup, and Kyle Schwarber — who earned a rare start against a left-handed pitcher because of Bryant's ailment — ripped a home run and RBI double off Carlos Rodon in his first two at-bats.

Kyle Hendricks thrived on the early cushion while pitching 7⅔ innings of four-hit ball.

"It's going to be a fun week for us, but it starts Monday," Hendricks said. "Nothing is done yet. We got to focus at the task at hand."

Bryant admitted looking at the scoreboard Saturday for one of the few times in his career to see how the Brewers were faring. They defeated the Pirates 13-6 in Pittsburgh to maintain their 2½ game division deficit.

"We still have some work left to do," Bryant said. "The Brewers are a good team. We got to keep winning and playing hard. Hopefully we can go on a nice run of wins and hopefully (clinch) in front of our fans. But it's one game at a time."

White Sox relievers Aaron Bummer, Ryan Burr, Jeanmar Gomez and Thyago Vieira blanked the Cubs in the final six innings, as all of the damage came against Rodon.

Rodon was visibly displeased when Sox manager Rick Renteria pulled him after Schwarber's double expanded the Cubs' lead to 6-0, and Renteria followed Rodon into the clubhouse.

"I was definitely frustrated," Rodon said. "I just got a little the best of me, but Ricky being the good manager he is, he helped me calm down. It was good. I probably should work on harnessing the frustration and the emotion."

Said Renteria: "One has to be the parent, one is the child. You have to understand it, you take into account everything that's going on."

Meanwhile, the Cubs seek to sustain Sunday's method of hitting to all fields, putting the ball in play with two strikes and hitting in clutch situations.

"This always is a fun part of the year, especially once it comes down to the end and October is around the corner," Schwarber said.

"It's a brand new season after the season is over. It's all about winning. That's why I love it."

Rodon's September easily one to forget

After dominant July, August, pitcher has another rough outing

By Phil Thompson
Chicago Tribune

Sunday's 6-1 loss against the Cubs was far from meaningless for the White Sox, at least not as far as Carlos Rodon was concerned.

The left-handed hurler was dominant in July and August (1.84 ERA in nine starts) but has tailed off in September (6.84 in five). His strikeout rate is one sign of his slippage, falling from 20.1 percent of batters in July and August to 13.4 this month.

On Sunday, Rodon exited in the third inning after allowing nine hits and six earned runs with three strikeouts and no walks in 2⅓ innings.

The Sox want to see Rodon finish strong. His importance to the future rotation increased significantly when Michael Kopech suffered an arm injury that required Tommy John surgery and will sideline him for all of 2019. Reynaldo Lopez has had his peaks and valleys as a 24-year-old in his first full season, and the same goes for Lucas Giolito, also 24 and experiencing his first full slate.

So as the most senior member of the staff's future core and frontrunner for 2019 opening-day starter, Rodon is being counted upon for consistency, leadership and the ability to be the team's workhorse.

"We've been really happy with how he has progressed," manager Rick Renteria said before the game. "Hopefully (he'll) have a good outing, give us a chance to put some points on the board and win a ballgame."

That wasn't the case Sunday.

Things went south for Rodon early when David Murphy and Ben Zobrist opened the game with singles, but he went upstairs on Javier Baez to strike him out and appeared to find his form. Then Anthony Rizzo sent Rodon's first-pitch slider to right field for an RBI double. Albert Almora Jr.'s groundout pushed across another run, and David Bote's single scored Rizzo for a 3-0 Cubs lead.

In the second inning, Kyle Schwarber jacked Rodon's first-pitch 92 mph fastball 444 feet to right-center field to make it 4-0. Murphy and Zobrist singled again, but Rodon got Rizzo swinging at a high fastball to end the inning.

The third presented a similar scenario. Once again, the first two Cubs reached (Almora singled and Bote was hit by a pitch), and Rodon faced Schwarber with one out. Rodon fell behind 3-1 with mostly sliders, and then tested Schwarber again with a fastball middle in. This time Schwarber tagged an RBI double that ended Rodon's outing.

Rodon threw 66 pitches, 41 for strikes. His strikeout percentage was 17.6, but the Cubs were dialed into Rodon's fastball and slider no matter where in the zone he placed them.

Renteria said before the game he wasn't concerned about Rodon's strikeout numbers.

"I think he's trying to make pitches, get contact, get outs and help us," Renteria said. "He knows he has defense behind him. I'm glad he's not thinking about that. (Strikeouts) just happen through sequence of execution."

Schwarber regains his stroke, hits 444-footer

By Mark Gonzales
Chicago Tribune

A return to National League play means no more designated hitter, which allowed the Cubs to get Kyle Schwarber extra at-bats against the White Sox.

But Schwarber regained his stroke as he capped an impressive weekend by smacking a 444-foot home run and an RBI double off Carlos Rodon on Sunday in helping the Cubs coast to a 6-1 win over the Sox.

"That home run was classic Schwarber," said manager Joe Maddon, who elected to start Schwarber in the outfield only because Kris Bryant was sidelined with left shoulder fatigue.

Nevertheless, Schwarber is 4-for-5 with two walks in his return after missing nine games with back tightness.

Schwarber hit his 26th home run of the season and first off a left-hander.

"It's not a big deal," Schwarber said. "I'll take a home run and a double if it's off a sidearm right-hander or standard pitcher."

Schwarber's improvement over last season caught Bryant's attention.

"Last year was a little different, but he's put in the work and got his body and mind right and came up on top," Bryant said. "It's nice to see him turn it around. I'm super happy for him."

Innings eater: By going 16⅓ innings over his last two starts, Kyle Hendricks has reached a career high of 191 innings this season.

"This has been a different end of the season for me, going this deep into games back to back," Hendricks said. "It's a product of having a good lead and making good pitches, and pitching to contact is a priority of mine."

Hendricks did not walk a batter for the 10th time in 32 starts. Maddon credited Hendricks' use of a curve to make his fastball and changeup more effective. Hendricks is 3-1 with a 1.68 ERA over his last five starts.

Extra innings: Reliever Pedro Strop remains optimistic he could rejoin the Cubs before the end of the week. Strop has continued throwing despite suffering a left hamstring injury Sept. 13, and Maddon said Strop is "a lot better than we thought to this point." ... Ben Zobrist is batting .385 (20-for-52) over his last 17 games.

Renteria: Plenty to play for before '18 is history

By Phil Thompson
Chicago Tribune

The White Sox need to win six of their final seven games just to match last year's record of 67-95.

They lost Sunday's City Series finale 6-1 to drop the home series to the Cubs 2-1. The Sox also have lost 12 of their last 17 games.

Sunday's loss, in front of their second sellout crowd of the season, marked the 27th time the Sox have scored a run or fewer. That's a bit of a downer, even when acknowledging the Sox are rebuilding.

So, does the manner in which each player finishes the season for a 90-loss team have any impact on the next season?

"It does," Sox manager Rick Renteria said before the game. "They probably can equate some significant change in their routine or consistency in doing things to validate their outcomes and then everybody can put their heads together and evaluate what they need to do to repeat that."

Cubs 2.0? The Sox certainly have had their struggles this season. They've had many highlights and a few winning stretches, too, particularly since the All-Star break.

Renteria acknowledged he sees some similarities from when the Cubs were rebuilding their franchise into a World Series champion. He should know, since he was the Cubs' manager in 2014, their last losing season before their current run of four straight years of 90-plus wins.

"To say no would be foolish, for me," he said. "I'm looking at what is coming, the guys we have, and yeah, there is a sense of confidence with the direction we're moving in."

After the game, Renteria pointed to other teams that endured a few bumps on their way to becoming consistent contenders.

"We see it not only in the Cubs, we've seen it with the Astros, the Indians, a multitude of clubs that have gone through that process. The Braves. It took the Braves four years. It took the Astros four or five years," Renteria said.

"It's hard for me to explain to the fans other than my own belief that what we have coming is going to be something that is going to be very fruitful in the near future."

Long relief: Starting pitcher Carlos Rodon lasted just 2⅓ innings, and the Sox had to burn through five relievers.

In the fifth, Burr walked Kyle Schwarber with two outs, and with two outs the sixth he gave up a double to Javier Baez and intentionally walked Anthony Rizzo. But in each case, he struck out the final batter swinging.

Vieira gave up three hits and no runs in the eighth and ninth.

Gregorius has torn cartilage in wrist

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The playoff-bound Yankees blew a three-run lead against the worst team in the majors Sunday — and then came the really bad news.

Shortstop Didi Gregorius has torn cartilage in his right wrist and is unsure whether he will be able to play in the AL wild-card game on Oct. 3. Gregorius, who has 27 homers and 86 RBIs, got injured Saturday when he slid headfirst on Aaron Hicks' 11th-inning double to score the run that clinched a postseason berth for the Yankees.

"It feels a little bit better now," Gregorius said after missing a 6-3 loss to the Orioles in New York's final home game of the regular season. "I slid into home plate, my right hand got stuck. We were celebrating, everything was fine. I went home, fine. I woke up this morning, it wasn't feeling good."

Gregorius had an MRI that revealed a small tear, he said. He received a cortisone shot and will be re-evaluated soon.

"We'll know a lot more in a few days," manager Aaron Boone said.

Gregorius said the injury is "really frustrating" but he has some mobility in his wrist and is very optimistic he'll play in the postseason.

"They say things like this happen to other players but some of them play through it," Gregorius said, explaining he feels soreness but not sharp pain.

If Gregorius is unavailable, the Yankees could turn to Adeiny Hechavarria, especially if they're concerned about defense. Or they could slide Gleyber Torres over from second base and put Neil Walker's bat at second.

"Didi's a great player and everyone in this room understands how important he is to our team," Boone said. "... Hopefully we get some good news here in a few days."

AROUND THE HORN

■ Dodgers: LHP Hyun-Jin Ryu pitched six scoreless innings and tied a career high with three of the Dodgers' 16 hits and the NL West leaders beat the Padres 14-0 in Los Angeles. The Dodgers' division lead over the Rockies remained at 1½ games. Ryu allowed four hits, struck out eight and walked none. Matt Kemp went 3-for-4 with a HR and three RBIs and scored twice.

■ Rockies: LHP Kyle Freeland pushed his unbeaten streak to 10 starts, and the Rockies beat the host Diamondbacks 2-0. With the three-game sweep, the Rockies kept pace with the Dodgers in the NL West and stayed within striking distance of the Cardinals in the wild-card hunt.

■ Cubs: Kyle Schwarber had a HR and two RBIs, RHP Kyle Hendricks allowed just one run in 7⅔ innings and the visiting Cubs beat the White Sox 6-1 to lower their magic number for winning the NL Central to five. ... 3B Kris Bryant didn't play due to fatigue in his left shoulder. He was on the DL from July 26 to Sept. 1 with left shoulder inflammation, and missed time earlier in the season with the same issue.

■ Brewers: Christian Yelich hit his 32nd HR to help the Brewers rout the Pirates 13-6 in Pittsburgh. The Brewers stayed with 1½ games of the first-place Cubs in the NL Central and stayed two games ahead of the Cardinals for the first NL wild card.

■ Cardinals: Matt Carpenter hit his NL-best 36th HR and the host Cards beat the Giants 9-2 to cap a three-game sweep. The Cards, whose win eliminated the Pirates from playoff contention, stayed 1½ games ahead of the Rockies for the second NL wild card.

■ Astros: RHP Charlie Morton left the AL West-leading Astros' 6-2 home win over the Angels after one inning because of discomfort in his pitching shoulder. Morton recently did a short DL stint with the same issue. He's not expected to miss his next start.

■ Athletics: The A's failed to clinch at least a wild-card berth and fell 4½ games behind the Astros in the AL West with a 5-1 loss to the visiting Twins.

IN BRIEF

BASKETBALL: Timberwolves owner Glen Taylor wants a trade of All-Star G Jimmy Butler done in the next several days, ESPN reported. Butler requested last week that he be dealt soon and was excused from the team's media day Monday and the start of training camp. ... Breanna Stewart scored 21 of her 23 points in the second half and A'ja Wilson added 20 to help the U.S. beat China 100-88 in group play at the Women's World Cup in Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Spain.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL: Fresh off its 28-7 upset of then-No. 14 Mississippi State, Kentucky entered the The Associated Press Top 25 poll for the first time since 2007. The 17th-ranked Wildcats are unbeaten and 2-0 in the SEC for the first time since 1977. The top four remained the same with Alabama at No. 1, followed by Georgia, Clemson and Ohio State. LSU moved up one spot to No. 5, swapping places with Oklahoma. Duke entered the poll at No. 22, its first ranking since October 2015. ... Notre Dame coach Brian Kelly said he expects senior RB Dexter Williams to make his season debut Saturday night against No. 7 Stanford. Williams sat out the eighth-ranked Irish's first four games, but Kelly has declined to say whether it was because of injury or suspension. ... Virginia Tech coach Justin Fuente announced in a statement that the team had dismissed junior DE Trevon Hill for "not upholding the high standards that we have for our student-athletes." Fuente didn't give details for the dismissal. ... Ohio State AD Gene Smith disputed a report by The Athletic that said the school was in discussions with offensive coordinator Ryan Day to make him the Buckeyes' head coach-in-waiting. On Twitter and later in a text to ESPN, Smith said Urban Meyer will be the Ohio State coach "for a long time."

GOLF: Tom Lewis fired a final-round 5-under 66 to earn a three-stroke victory at the Portugal Masters in Vilamoura. Lewis finished at 22-under 262 in winning the European Tour event for the second time in his career. ... U.S. Ryder Cup vice captain Steve Stricker shot a final-round 3-under 67 to claim a four-stroke win at the inaugural Sanford International in Sioux Falls, S.D. It was the third PGA Tour Champions title of the season for the 51-year-old Stricker.

NHL: The Canadiens and F Paul Byron, 29, agreed to a four-year contract extension with an annual average salary of $3.4 million. ... The Devils announced Saturday that they re-signed F Miles Wood, 23, to a four-year, $11 million contract.

SOCCER: Lionel Messi of Argentina set the record for the most Spanish league appearances by a non-Spaniard with 423 and scored, but 10-man Barcelona dropped its first points of the La Liga season with a 2-2 draw against visiting Girona. ... Chelsea dropped its first points of the English Premier League season in settling for a scoreless draw with host West Ham.

TENNIS: No. 1 seed Dominic Thiem of Austria routed Slovakia's Martin Klizan 6-3, 6-1 to win the St. Petersburg Open in Russia. ... Gilles Simon of France earned his third Moselle Open title with a 7-6 (2), 6-1 win over German qualifier Matthias Bachinger in Metz, France. ... No. 2 seed Kiki Bertens of the Netherlands beat Australia's Ajla Tomljanovic 7-6 (2), 4-6, 6-2 to win the Korea Open in Seoul. ... Team Europe retained the Laver Cup with a 13-8 win over Team World in Chicago.

Woods gets 1st title in 5 years

over Billy Horschel.

It was the 80th victory of his PGA Tour, two short of the career record held by Sam Snead that is now very much in play. And it was his first victory in more than five years, dating to the 2013 Bridgestone Invitational.

And that brought a new version of Tigermania.

After he hit his second shot to the par-5 18th safely in a bunker in front of the green, the crowd came through the ropes and followed behind in a chaotic celebration. It was like that when he walked from the left side of the 18th fairway at the 1997 Masters he won by 12. It was reminiscent of that walk up the 18th fairway later that summer at the Western Open in Chicago.

This was pure pandemonium. Fans chased after any inch of grass they could find to watch the ending.

"I didn't want to get run over," Woods said with a laugh.

All that was left was the 42-year-old Woods in that red shirt, blazing brighter than ever, and a smile he couldn't shake walking up the 18th to collect another trophy.

"The 80 mark is a big number," he said. "It's a pretty damned good feeling."

He finished at 11-under 269 and won $1.62 million, along with a $3 million bonus for finishing second in the FedEx Cup.

The only disappointment — a minor one under the circumstances — was realizing as he came down the 18th that Justin Rose had made birdie to finish in a three-way tie for fourth, which gave him the FedEx Cup and the $10 million bonus.

BLACKHAWKS

BLACKHAWKS NOTES

Hayden's solid camp impresses Quenneville

By Jimmy Greenfield
Chicago Tribune

Blackhawks forward John Hayden made a nice poke-check, burst up ice, where he took a pass for a breakaway, then put a sweet deke on goalie Collin Delia before gently pushing the puck into an empty net.

Hayden accepted congratulations from his teammates then skated past his side's bench for the type of high-five you get after scoring in a game.

This was just practice. But the only thing missing was Chelsea Dagger playing over the loudspeakers.

"Yeah, it's just fun," said Hayden. "All the guys have fun in practice and off the ice. Little moments in practice. It's good to have a laugh with the guys and keep it light."

It has been an enjoyable camp for Hayden, who came in as part of a large group of young forwards competing for jobs and has impressed coach Joel Quenneville.

"I thought he was excellent (in practice) coming off a great game in Ottawa," Quenneville said. "He's had a great camp and today was a continuation on how he's been."

Hayden, who broke in with the Hawks two years ago, had four goals and nine assists in 47 games last season. Quenneville said Sunday he'd prefer to keep the roster at 22 to open the season, which would leave room for only 13 forwards.

Hayden has played on the fourth line most of camp with Marcus Kruger and Andreas Martinsen — they each scored a goal in the third period of Friday's 5-2 win against the Senators — but it won't matter to him who he plays with.

"Everyone knows what game they should play and their job," Hayden said. "So for me that doesn't change regardless of the linemates I'm with. Everyone here at camp's a good player. Guys make it easy so if I stick with my game it really doesn't matter who my linemates are."

Boqvist making his case: For Hawks fans hoping to get a glimpse of first-round pick Adam Boqvist, this is the week to do it. Quenneville said there's a "good chance" he would play in all three preseason games at the United Center.

Quenneville didn't back off his comments after Friday night's game that the 18-year-old defenseman could make the Hawks' opening-night roster. If that happens it would mean the Hawks have a pair of teenagers on the blue line, assuming Henri Jokiharju, 19, also makes the team, which seems likely.

There's a school of thought that bringing up players too soon can hamper development, particularly defensemen.

"You have to look at each individual case and each individual player and then give them an opportunity to play to their game," Quenneville said. "They've done some neat things so far and (they have) skill. I think they're definitely going to absorb a lot from being around here and how we play."

Kahun moves up: With the season opener a little over a week away, Quenneville is starting to tinker with the lines. At Sunday's practice, he put Dominik Kahun on the top line with Jonathan Toews and Alex DeBrincat, who have been playing with Chris Kunitz throughout camp.

"(Kahun) sees plays, makes plays," Quenneville said. "We'll see how well he complements them."

Crawford getting closer? Corey Crawford's on-ice session Sunday went about 35 minutes, roughly the same as most of his previous sessions during camp, but the drills he did with goalie coach Jimmy Waite had a faster pace and energy to them.

Quenneville said he continues to be pleased with Crawford"s progress but isn't sure when he will practice with the team. Crawford's sessions are tightly controlled while a practice lends itself to uncertainties. Backup goalie Delia appeared to be stunned after taking a hard shot off his mask.

"Could happen," Quenneville said of Crawford practicing with the team. "But I'm not saying if it will or not."

LAVER CUP

CHRIS SWEDA/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Captain Bjorn Borg congratulates Roger Federer for his Team Europe win over Team World's John Isner on Sunday at the United Center.

COMMENTARY

Love it: We want more

Team Europe, Chicago win big at the Laver Cup

By Teddy Greenstein
Chicago Tribune

The Laver Cup was so gripping Sunday, people at the United Center forgot about their fantasy football teams and likely reacted to a news alert on their phones with: Tiger Woods did what?!

This was unforgettable stuff. An American doubles duo took down Roger Federer, the living legend, by winning the final four points of a tiebreaker. The on-court celebration was raucous.

"That was epic!" Nebraska native Jack Sock told the packed house.

The guy next to me in the press box broke etiquette by applauding after players struck crisp winners — and no one gave him the stink eye. We all considered it a privilege to witness this.

Something about tennis brings out the fanboy in all of us.

Team Europe brought the higher-ranked players and the G.O.A.T. in Federer, who helped to create the Laver Cup as a tribute to idol Rod Laver.

But Team World, captained by John McEnroe and led by both Americans and Illinois alum Kevin Anderson of South Africa, put up a spectacular fight. Trailing 7-1 in points, they took an 8-7 lead Sunday after Sock and John Isner thumped Federer and Germany's Alexander Zverev.

One funny moment: Zverev hit a winning volley with such a sharp angle, it bounced into a container of drinks near Europe's bench. Sock, smiling, walked over and began to rearrange the furniture. His teammates loved it.

Federer and Isner returned for singles. Isner is the 6-foot-10 Georgia alum whose voice cracked a bit Saturday after he failed to cash in on a match point against Zverev. Reminded that his Dawgs had thumped Missouri in football, he smiled and said: "That helps. A little."

Isner had a match point against Federer on Sunday, but the champion of 20 grand slams ripped a backhand winner to stave it off. After they split sets with tiebreakers, Federer won the final one 10-7.

His European teammates and captain Bjorn Borg celebrated by doing pushups — one for each point.

Asked to comment on his thrilling match, Federer quipped: "I didn't want it to be quite that exciting."

And then he thanked Chicago for coming out in droves and providing an incredible atmosphere for the Laver Cup, which debuted last year in Prague.

United Center was retrofitted to accommodate 20,000 fans. Saturday's afternoon and evening sessions drew 19,756 and 19,346 spectators at lofty prices; Sunday's attracted 19,804. The five-session total was 93,584.

I asked Federer if the Laver Cup could return to Chicago in two years.

"I don't exactly know what the mindset is, whether they want to move it away from America," he replied. "The world is a big place (but) you can always come back. This was a great win for tennis and for us at the Laver Cup, and we realize there is a huge appetite in Chicago. There are a lot of cities that want to host. We will see.

"My vision was maybe to bring the Laver Cup to places which haven't seen so much tennis. Chicago is one of those places, of course."

The Chicago market figures to treat tennis as it does golf. Borrowing from the Mercedes slogan: The best or nothing.

Champions Tour events are all but ignored. Women's majors do quite well. Fans have flocked to BMW Championships, PGA Championships and, of course, the Ryder Cup at Medinah. Those feature the best in the world, as did the Laver Cup.

Just how long did Chicago go without championship tennis? Consider this: I love the sport. I attended every U.S. Open in New York from age 2-17, and yet I had to wait 22 years at the Tribune to cover a match here.

Zverev beat Anderson in the deciding one, after the former Illini's backhand return sailed long. Final score: 6-7, 7-5 and 10-7 in the tiebreak.

He added: "I hope one day the Laver Cup will come back to Chicago."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Happy Valley set for a case in points

Teddy Greenstein
On the Big Ten

Five things we learned about Big Ten football, which deserves the Saturday night spotlight. (Put Stanford-Notre Dame on your second screen.)

1. Three yards and a cloud of dust? Try 30. Penn State leads the nation in scoring, thanks to its 35-point fourth quarter in Champaign. The Nittany Lions are averaging 55.5 points. Ohio State is at 54.5 per. The two are the only FBS teams to score at least 30 touchdowns.

Dennis Dodd of CBS Sports asked me Sunday when was the last time the top scoring teams in the nation met — and any chance they were from the Big Ten? Yeah, Iowa and Wisconsin last Saturday. OK, not quite.

Ohio State is fourth nationally in total yards and Penn State is 14th, by the way. ABC/ESPN executives should be doing a celebratory floss (not the teeth one; ask your kids) over this prime-time matchup, which will bring "College GameDay" to State College.

2. Dwayne Haskins is the Big Ten's Tua Tagovailoa. Tua this. Tua that. Yeah, we know he is great. His 32 drives this season have resulted in 20 touchdowns, two field goals and a per-play average of 9.32. His QB rating is an FBS-best 230.5. Second is West Virginia's Will Greer (215.8). Third is Haskins (207.0).

Haskins, the first-year starter, is completing 75.7 percent of his passes with 16 touchdown passes and one interception. Only one Big Ten quarterback has fired more TD passes in the first four games of a season — our old friend Kyle Orton of Purdue. He had 17 after four games in 2004.

Remember when two Ohio State recruits took to Twitter last year to say that Haskins should be playing instead of J.T. Barrett? One was Jackson Carman, an offensive tackle who chose Clemson. The other was Micah Parsons, a linebacker already balling out for Penn State. Maybe they were on to something.

Just as Tagovailoa is making Alabama look like an NFL team, Haskins has taken Ohio State to another level. Sixteen Buckeyes already have scored touchdowns, matching the 2017 season total. Now let's see what Haskins can do at a Penn State Whiteout.

3. Penn State has not maxed out. The Nittany Lions have made 22 red-zone trips and cashed in 22 times — 21 touchdowns and a field goal. And as mentioned above, the Nittany Lions are averaging 55.5 points.

But here's the weird thing: Trace McSorley ranks 72nd in QB rating, completing just 53.8 percent of his throws, down from 66.5 percent last year. The Nittany Lions have turned it over five times, with McSorley getting picked on an ill-timed deep ball at Illinois. At least two touchdowns have been nullified by penalty. Penn State's defense also has been flawed, as its first and second units got gashed by Illinois' rushing attack.

So the questions: Is Penn State susceptible? Or is this a team with enough skill to mask its deficiencies? And will Beaver Stadium prove to be the great equalizer? Remember when Tamba Hali sacked Troy Smith to seal the 17-10 victory in 2005?

4. Wisconsin travels well. Not just its fans. Iowa should not feel bad about losing to Wisconsin at Kinnick Stadium. The Badgers are 15-1 in true road games under Paul Chryst, who gets about as flustered as a professional poker player facing a $1 raise.

His team reflects that. Down 17-14 with less than six minutes to play, the Badgers embarked on an 88-yard touchdown drive. Garrett Groshek's fingertip catch on a third-and-5 was key. Alec Ingold scored the clinching touchdown and said, "I think when we're on the road, we know we've got each other's backs."

The Badgers are now an absurdly safe bet to make it to Indianapolis and appear in their sixth Big Ten title game in the event's eight years. Who in the West could possibly challenge them? The only other 1-0 team is Northwestern, which couldn't beat Akron.

5. Be glad you're not Chris Ash. OK, the $2 million-plus salary would be nice, but Ask is stuck in football hell. The New York/New Jersey market actually is paying attention to the Scarlet Knights, who got drubbed at home by Buffalo a week after getting crushed by Kansas.

Blustery radio host Mike Francesa chimed in with this Sunday: "If you're Rutgers, how do you show your face? You give up 35 points and 350 yards in the first half? In your building? Are you serious? The score was 35-6 at the half. Buffalo called the dogs off. ... They were gracious. They could've scored 70. If you're Rutgers, what is going on?"

BIG TEN POWER RANKINGS

2. Penn State (2): Are you ready for some football?! Shoot, wrong song to welcome ESPN's "College GameDay."
3. Michigan State (3): Sweet fake field goal when up 21-7 on Indiana. No one saw that coming.
4. Wisconsin (5): Fox Sports' Gus Johnson after Alex Hornibrook fires the game-winner at Iowa: "Ice water in his veins!"
5. Michigan (6): Northwestern has a gimpy offensive line and Michigan registered 14 tackles for a loss against Nebraska? Oh, boy.
6. Iowa (4): Are the Hawkeyes trying to trump Notre Dame as Tight End U?
7. Maryland (9): Formula for manly victory over the Gophers: 315 rushing yards on 37 carries.
8. Minnesota (8): With all those freshmen the Gophers have, we should have seen this coming.
9. Indiana (7): Tough to win when you average less than 1 yard per carry (32 rushes for 29 yards against Michigan State).
11. Purdue (13): Hey, a Big Ten team other than Ohio State beat a ranked opponent! Nice work, Boilers.
12. Illinois (11): Another three (quarters) and out for the Illini.
13. Nebraska (12): Scott Frost: "I'm kind of excited because it's not going to get worse than this."
14. Rutgers (14): Speaking of worse than this ...

In world of auto racing, Deegan fast on the rise

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

GRANITE CITY, Ill. — There are three questions that Hailie Deegan gets from everybody she comes across, and while she insists they're not necessarily annoying, they certainly are persistent.

The first is about NASCAR star Kevin Harvick, who gave the young driver a shout-out after they raced against each other in a small event earlier this year. The second is about her favorite driver, and the last is about what it's like being the next coming of Danica Patrick.

First, she explains, there is little in common between Deegan and the most well-known female driver in motorsports. Deegan is the daughter of motocross legend Brian Deegan, which means she grew up on dirt — not in IndyCar — and is trying to work her way through stock car's lower levels.

Busch is loathed by many NASCAR fans for his bad-boy attitude, but the 17-year-old Deegan loves that the 2015 Cup Series champ brings an edgy, almost heel-like quality to racing.

And finally, she thought it was pretty cool that Harvick thought so highly of the teen from Temecula, Calif.

"It was crazy," she said during a break between recent practice sessions at Gateway Motorsports Park near St. Louis, where Deegan was preparing for that night's race in the K&N Series.

"He was one of the first to talk about me publicly in the NASCAR world," Deegan said, "so that was cool. But I'm with Toyota, so my favorite drivers have to be Toyota drivers."

Yes, it was officials from the auto manufacturer that decided there was enough promise in Deegan to lure her away from a promising off-road truck career to the world of stock cars.

Deegan spent some time testing last year with Bill McAnally, and a deal was struck to race a full K&N schedule this season.

And while she's racing against other drivers with years of experience on ovals and road courses, Deegan has more than held her own, leading laps last week at the Las Vegas dirt track and twice finishing second while building a strong case for rookie of the year.

"It's funny," Deegan said, "because coming into this year we were like, 'OK, our goal is to run top five.' And now it's like, 'I want to win.' It's fun to see how your goals change so quickly."

Then again, moving quickly is part of Deegan's DNA.

She grew up going to motocross races with her dad, a 10-time X-Games medalist and founding member of the Metal Mulisha. Brian Deegan became a cult icon for the crazy stunts he pulled on a motorcycle, to say nothing of the devastating crashes that left him with broken bones too numerous to count. Eventually he moved from two wheels to four, embarking on a successful off-road truck career.

While other little girls were playing with dolls, Hailie Deegan was always in dad's back pocket at the track, and it seemed almost inevitable that she would end up behind the wheel.

She was 8 when she climbed into her own truck the first time. She won a championship and quickly moved up the ranks, reaching the pro level a couple years ago — which meant young Hailie was at the same start line as her old man.

There was no trash-talking, though. Good-natured ribbing, maybe, but mostly just support.

"He's the reason I'm good at this," Hailie Deegan said. "He's always like, 'If you're not 110 percent into this you're not going to make it.' So I train my butt off when I'm off the track. I work out all the time. I'm always watching film. I practice all the time. I have a dirt oval in my backyard that I practice on, and a road course. I race late models, go karts. Anything I can get in."

Her workout regimen is documented on Deegan's social-media accounts, where she has about 13,800 followers on Twitter and 216,000 followers on Instagram. Her hectic schedule is summed up by this: After leaving Gateway last month, she hopped a plane to sponsor appearances, than jetted to Wisconsin to run her truck in one of the biggest races of the season at Crandon International Off-Road Raceway.

Then it was back to a late model on pavement, and another K&N race a couple weeks later.

"She's just got a great knowledge of racing," McAnally said. "Her dad has done an amazing job building a foundation. She can tell you what she needs out of a car to feel comfortable, to go fast. We have kids who have won some big races, and have years and years of experience, and this is her first season, so to do what she's done this season is quite impressive."

Her dedication is evidenced by the fact she graduated high school with straight-As at 16, allowing her to spend more time racing. Deegan and McAnally both pump the brakes when it comes to a rapid rise in NASCAR, though. Deegan is still the new kid in the garage, and in an age when sponsorships are drying up and finding a competitive ride is harder than ever, the road to racing's pinnacle has never been tougher.

"She's used to driving through it and over it, and quite successfully, but this is different," McAnally explained. "She's learning. She's paying her dues."

She doesn't mind, either.

Deegan knows NASCAR is a more lucrative career path than off-road trucks, which is a big reason why she made the leap. But she also transitioned to pavement because it's something new.

At truck races, she's Brian Deegan's daughter. At stock car races, it's almost the opposite.

"Coming here, it's like, people don't even connect it," she said. "Some people say, 'I didn't realize you were Brian Deegan's daughter.' It's my own world and it's my own racing."

That may be why she bristles, ever so slightly, when Patrick's name is brought up. Patrick retired earlier this year.

"Yes, I'm a girl. Yes, we're some of the only girls in racing," Deegan said, "but I came from a different racing background. I have family in a different racing world. I'm a different personality on the track. We have different driving styles. The only thing that compares us is we're girls."

In other words, she's OK being the next Deegan. Not the next Danica.

Deegan isn't sure where her career goes next, though the natural arc would be another year in the K&N or ARCA series, then a jump to the Truck Series and eventually the Xfinity Series. Maybe in five or so years, everything will align and she'll be racing alongside Harvick in the Cup Series.

But at the moment, she's simply just enjoying herself.

"This stuff is just fun," Deegan said. "I'm the person who likes to try new things. This is a new thing. I've been racing off road for seven or eight years, and I feel like I've enjoyed that a lot, but I wanted to try something new and this is all new to me."

Steelers' Williams keeps his underdog mentality

By Chris Adamski
Pittsburgh Tribune-Review

Vince Williams doesn't know how his stall ended up in the far corner of the Steelers locker room a few years back. It's prime real estate: a coveted "corner lot," close to an exit and away from the heavy foot traffic in those busy times after practice.

But to Williams, what made the positioning most fortuitous wasn't the view of the whole room, nor the ability to stretch his legs onto a makeshift folding-chair ottoman.

"I was blessed by my locker position because I am by a guy like AB," Williams said, referring to Antonio Brown, "and I was next to a guy like James Harrison. So all we ever talked about was all of us had similar paths finding success."

Harrison went from an undrafted rookie to an All-Pro linebacker. Brown became a likely future Hall of Fame receiver from humble beginnings as a sixth-round pick.

Also a sixth-round pick, Williams isn't quite on Brown's Hall of Fame track. But he has come a long way as his career with the Steelers has evolved.

The 6-foot-1, 233-pound Williams has always been a well-respected and liked teammate, as well as a favorite of coach Mike Tomlin and his staff. But as recently as two years ago during his fourth NFL season, Williams' role was that of core special-teams player and backup to Lawrence Timmons and Ryan Shazier.

Now, he's the Steelers' longest-tenured linebacker and has become an indispensable part of their defense. He calls out the signals, plays in all situations and almost never comes off the field.

Williams has missed just one of the Steelers' 147 defensive snaps this season. Through two weeks, just three linebackers across the league played more.

"I never had to prove to anybody what my role was; I always knew what my role was on this team — now my role is just expanded," Williams said.

"We all knew what I was capable of — we just had Ryan Shazier. If it's who do you want on the field, Ryan or Vince, you're picking Ryan."

Now, it's Williams who's the centerpiece — literally and figuratively — of the Steelers linebackers corps.

"He's in the prime of his career, I think, because he knows the game, he knows what we are doing, he knows where everybody is supposed to be, he knows all of that stuff," defensive coordinator Keith Butler said. "So, if he knows all that and with the speed he's got and the natural football ability he's got, then he can accentuate that with his knowledge."

Butler was Williams' position coach when he was drafted out of Florida State in 2013. His status as a low-round pick didn't preclude him from starting 11 games that season after an injury to veteran Larry Foote and when veteran replacement Kion Wilson was ineffective.

But the Steelers drafted the speedy Shazier a year later and paired him with an in-his-prime Lawrence Timmons to create a dynamic pair at inside linebacker. That left Williams as the odd man out; he started just six games between 2014-16.

Still, Tomlin and the Steelers' brass liked him enough they gave him a contract extension the summer before his rookie deal was set to expire two years ago — a rarity for a non-starter. And when Timmons left in free agency in March 2017, Williams was promoted to starter.

But Shazier's spinal injury in December, coupled with a premium $20.6 million, four-year contract last month, signifies Williams is now the man in the middle of the Steelers defense.

"He does everything they ask him to do," said Jon Bostic, the Steelers' junior starting inside linebacker. "He goes in there and makes plays and keeps making plays. He brings a unique skill set and does different things for the defense. And, of course, he's the guy we're all looking to."

For so long Williams used the I'm-a-sixth-round-pick, I-have-to-prove-everyone-wrong card as motivation. But now that he has everything he's always wanted in regards to respect — a prominent role in the defense, a starter's salary, the play-calling responsibility — what will drive Williams?

"The question with what I'm doing right now is, 'Can I do it without Ryan?' " he answered, referring to Shazier. "I played with a superstar talent beside me — a lot of people felt like that contributed to my success.

"So now I am missing my brother, can I go out there and compete at a high level without him?"

Williams insists he hasn't changed his game nor his persona now that he carries more unofficial titles associated with a unit leader.

"You don't do things differently," he said. "I just think I've always been myself. You don't need to be exceptional. Being a leader is just being yourself."

True to form, don't expect the big contract or role to alter how Williams finds his motivation.

"You always still see the 'Underrated Vince' and the "Everybody is against Vince Vince,' " defensive end Cameron Heyward said.

"And that's the way Vince wants it."

A shattering 'Babi Yar' sends a message

Muti opens CSO season with solemn 'call for peace'

By Howard Reich
Chicago Tribune

Shostakovich's Symphony No. 13, "Babi Yar," looms large in the orchestral repertory of the 20th century and in the art of Chicago Symphony Orchestra music director Riccardo Muti.

He first conducted the 1962 epic in Rome, in 1970, marking its Western European premiere at a time when few orchestras anywhere were playing Shostakovich's shattering indictment of anti-Semitism, genocide and the despair of life in the Soviet Union.

So by opening the CSO's subscription season Friday night in Orchestra Hall with the same work, Muti was sending a message. For anyone who doubted it, he prefaced the performance of "Babi Yar" with a few well-chosen words.

After acknowledging the presence of Irina Shostakovich, the composer's widow, Muti told the audience that in July he had been to Babi Yar, the ravine outside Kiev where 33,771 Jews were executed by machine gun on Sept. 29 and 30, 1941. The toll had continued in coming months, with about 100,000 Jews and other Nazi targets murdered there by German troops and their collaborators.

Shostakovich's "Babi Yar" Symphony — based on Yevgeny Yevtushenko's searing poems — addressed head-on both the Holocaust's bloodshed and the moral culpability of Soviets who later denied or ignored it.

The work "will remain eternal not only because it's a great piece of music," Muti told the audience, "but because it's a deep warning, a document that's important for us and the next generation that ... every form of dictatorship should be banned. ... It's about time that we find peace in this tragic world."

Then Muti urged listeners to follow the text's translation in the program book and proceeded to lead the orchestra, the men of the Chicago Symphony Chorus and bass Alexey Tikhomirov in the work's solemn opening pages.

"There is no memorial above Babi Yar," the choristers sang, their pitches low and dark, the orchestral accompaniment spare and ominous. "The steep ravine is like a crude tombstone."

As this first movement unfolded, the sorrow of the scene and the anger of the poem's protagonist deepened.

"I am behind bars, I am encircled/ Persecuted, spat on, slandered," sang Tikhomirov, robustly, to the accompaniment of Shostakovich's slashing strings.

'Grocery Store Joe' reflects on TV fame

CRAIG SJODIN/ABC

"Grocery Store Joe" Amabile's quick rise to stardom of course began at a grocery store.

The West Town resident said he was approached in Whole Foods by a casting representative who encouraged him to sign up for "The Bachelorette." His appearance did not go well. Becca Kufrin sent him home on the May season premiere after he tripped over his words when he got out of the limo to meet her.

Yet those few, awkward TV minutes launched the Summer of Joe. Fans immediately fell in love with his sincerity, and he scored an invitation to join "The Bachelorette: The Men Tell All" special and "Bachelor in Paradise." Now he's competing on Season 27 of "Dancing with the Stars," which is scheduled to premiere at 7 p.m. Monday on ABC.

"I never even expected to get the call for 'Bachelor in Paradise,' so yeah, it was all very unexpected," Amabile told the Tribune by phone.

Though this will be Amabile's third TV show in four months, there's a mystery about him. He didn't have much of a digital footprint when he began his "Bachelor" journey so fans have raised questions about him on social media. Where is his grocery store? Who has he dated? And is he really that nice?

Depending on who you ask, Amabile was always destined for fame. The 32-year-old was born

'The City' tells sordid tale of illegal dumping on West Side

By Steve Johnson
Chicago Tribune

Amer

"Anytime you see anybody drive over (to) a vacant lot in a limo, you know it's no good."

When you're a reporter trying to bring a complicated story to life, quotes like that — wry, sharply worded, evocative of a much larger scenario — are pure gold.

And in the promising, new Chicago-focused podcast "The City," chronicling the battle over vacant lots in North Lawndale that became illegal dumping sites in the 1990s, lead reporter and narrator Robin Amer recognizes that quote for the gem that it is.

And Amer, a former WBEZ-FM producer and a former editor at the Reader who has worked for years to get "The City" made, puts that quote into her opening, the podcast equivalent of a book's epigraph, to help set the hook.

The first episode of "The City" debuts Monday, under the auspices of USA Today Network and available there and on iTunes, Stitcher and the like. In it, the host promises the first season's Chicago illegal dump story will be one of "corruption, apathy and greed," a story dark enough to stun even hardened city dwel-

Meghan reveals 'something blue' she wore at wedding

It's an old tradition that a bride should have something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue on her wedding day, and the Duchess of Sussex followed at least part of that when she married Prince Harry.

The former Meghan Markle has revealed in a television documentary that she had a piece of blue fabric from the dress she wore on her first date with Harry sewn into her wedding dress.

She made the comments while discussing the dress in a documentary about Queen Elizabeth II called "Queen of the World." She didn't say whether she also embraced the rest of the tradition.

The clip was made public Sunday. The documentary will be broadcast at a later date. It deals with the queen's role as head of the Commonwealth.

The American actress who starred in "Suits" married Harry on May 19 on the grounds of Windsor Castle.

Grandma feels trapped in her home

Dear Amy: My 36-year-old daughter and 8-year-old granddaughter live with me. My daughter has a small business that brings in barely enough income for her to survive; it would be difficult, if not nearly impossible, for her to get her own place.

She seems to get involved in one bad relationship after another, pays minimal attention to her child, drinks excessively, relies on me for child care, rarely helps around the house and frequently cannot give me the agreed-upon rent of $300 a month.

I am approaching retirement age but feel I can't actually retire, as it will mean selling my house and finding something smaller that I could afford. I would be OK with telling my daughter that she needs to paddle her own canoe, but I'm reluctant to abandon my granddaughter.

I've suggested, begged and hinted that my daughter get counseling. She has depression and anxiety and takes medication, which doesn't seem to help much. Any ideas?

— In a Tough Spot

Dear Tough Spot: Your daughter cannot reach her potential, as a person and a parent, until she stops drinking. Her alcohol use interferes with her judgment, triggers her depression and affects her ambition — and the efficacy of her medication.

And you cannot get out from under this without professional and therapeutic coaching about how to stop enabling your daughter without abandoning your granddaughter. Suggestions, hints and begging are not going to cut it. You have to create and maintain enough pressure and workable consequences to try to force your daughter toward change.

You also need to fully absorb the very real possibility that your daughter will not change. Will you try to force her out of your home? This might be a challenge, certainly if she refuses to go (I have read of parents actually selling their homes and moving in order to force out a resident family member).

You should contact your local Family and Children's Services department to connect with a social worker who could help you develop a plan and help your family. If your daughter refuses to attend sessions, go on your own. You also should attend a "friends and family" support group (check al-anon.org).

For inspiration, read "Don't Let Your Kids Kill You: A Guide for Parents of Drug and Alcohol Addicted Children," by Charles Rubin (2007, New Century Publishers).

Dear Amy: I recently got married to the man of my dreams! Now I'm having problems with my mother.

Mom has always struggled emotionally (in my opinion) with letting me grow up (upon graduation, or moving out), and has pushed away from me during those times. The same has happened here. I call her two to three times a week, as always, but the conversations are shorter and I don't feel we are connecting like we used to.

I know she likes my husband, so I don't think this is disapproval. But I wonder how I can nurture my relationship with my mom: Should I just let this go until she comes to terms with our new roles, or should I confront her and risk having her shut me out even more?

— Confused Daughter

Dear Confused: Your insight about what lies behind your mother's distance sounds correct. You are both in an emotional and relational transition. You want your mother — and she's right there, same as always. She wants her daughter — but your status has changed.

Give her time. Don't let her emotionally manipulate you, but do let her adjust.

Dear Amy: I disagree with your recommendation to "Reluctant," that she and her husband should take in his sister's children.

I grew up in a home where my mom literally said to me, "I wish I did not have kids." And I always felt her resentment throughout my childhood.

I've forgiven my mom and have a "regular" relationship with her. However, we are not close.

I've never wanted kids. And taking in kids I don't want wouldn't be healthy for me or them.

— Childless by Choice

Dear Childless: "Reluctant" seemed to accept both her reluctance and her choice to take in these children. I hope she is able to embrace parenthood; I do believe she is trying.

IN PERFORMANCE 'Frankenstein' ★★★

Adaptation an allegory for loss

By Kerry Reid

The Modern Prometheus is getting quite a workout on Chicago stages this year, with three adaptations of Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein" opening this fall and a fourth in the spring. The obvious reason is that it's been 200 years since the 18-year-old prodigy published her classic tale. Since then, it's been worked over and re-imagined countless times, with fans of horror, gothic and science fiction all laying equal claim to it as an early progenitor of their respective genres.

The less obvious reason for its appeal is something that Robert Kauzlaric's adaptation for Lifeline Theatre (the first to open) gets right. In some regards, it's quite faithful to the outlines of the original. But Kauzlaric's approach is to treat the story primarily as an allegory for unnatural grief and how it isolates us even from those we love most. As Shelley wrote, "Nothing is so painful to the human mind as a great and sudden change."

Here, that change comes for Victoria (Ann Sonneville), a university student thrown into a maelstrom of mourning by the death of her father, Alphonse (Chris Hainsworth). No one can pluck her from that vortex — not her mother, her siblings, her best friend or her lover. Victoria's desire to re-create what she's lost ends up costing her everything she still has.

Kauzlaric hasn't just given us a feminized Victor Frankenstein, though. Sonneville's Victoria isn't motivated by the scientific hubris often associated with the original maker of the monster. She just wants to gather up the scraps of detritus left behind by her father and bring him back. (In this, she may not be so different from pet owners who clone the furry loved ones they've lost.)

Early on, after returning to school (where she steadfastly avoids answering letters from home), she notes how odd it is to see strangers moving around her when her own life has stopped in its tracks. It's a simple but profound encapsulation of how grief feels for those in the midst of it.

Director Paul S. Holmquist's staging initially presents Victoria's family and friends as a sort of stylized Greek chorus, each representing a different aspect of what she's shutting out of her life. Mother Caroline (Risha Tenae) is the keeper of the past who writes to her daughter that Alphonse was a man with great flaws as well as great attributes. Her young brother, William (Trent Davis), is innocence personified, while her adopted sister Justine (Emily Ayre) represents faith. Friend Helena (Rasika Ranganathan) is the repository of Victoria's joy, while lover Erich (Ty Carter) is her future.

The declamatory intonations of the supporting characters as they implore Victoria to reconnect with them stand in stark contrast to Sonneville's febrile and impassioned volubility as she dissects the bones of loss. But once the monster/father is animated — and threatening them — they become more than allegorical figureheads. Ranganathan and Carter in particular bring notes of sympathy to their portrayals. We see them throwing lifelines to Victoria even as they struggle with their own confusion and grief.

The monster is a marvel of puppet design by Cynthia Von Orthal, worked initially by Hainsworth, with assists from the other cast members as, one by one, they die at his hands. It's evocative of Handspring Puppet Company's collaborations with William Kentridge. (Von Orthal worked with the late great Hystopolis Productions and has designed for many companies locally and abroad.) The glowing "heart" at its center — a simple lantern — reminds us that the creature is alive and yearning, even as it tears Victoria's world to shreds.

The other production elements in Holmquist's staging also work together to suggest the atmosphere of despair driving Victoria's actions. Joe Schermoly's rickety-attic set, Jordan Kardasz's chiaroscuro lighting, and Barry Bennett's music and sound (elegiac, with well-placed moments of dissonance) capture the brokenness of her world.

Sonneville's performance meshes beautifully with Kauzlaric's thoughtful (if at times a tad mannered) adaptation — emotionally engaging without falling into rote histrionics. The truthfulness of her Victoria's journey through the stages of grief recasts one of the most well-known monster fables into an authentic and sometimes profound portrait of monstrous loss.

Regal Theater owner says Kanye is real when it comes to renovation

By Darcel Rockett
Chicago Tribune

The hype that Kanye West is coming back to Chicago may be dying down, but the hope that his name brings to the reopening of the Avalon Regal Theater is not.

Yes, West made a stop in his hometown at the beginning of the week, touting his return at Chance the Rapper's open mic event at Harold Washington Library for high schoolers, and that was after he tweeted about restoring the Regal.

And while the Tribune earlier debunked some of West's Twitter comments, we were curious about the rapper's commitment to the cause of the South Shore structure. The landmark property personifies history in its own right, but the building has also been touted as one of a number of hologram venues across the country that would "beam" artists performing elsewhere into the existing auditorium space on 79th Street for the masses. In 2015, a hologram concert featuring Chief Keef was attempted in the city but didn't come to fruition.

In pursuit of figuring fact from fiction, Avalon Regal Theater owner Jerald Gary answered some questions about West's connection to the construction. This interview has been condensed and edited.

Q: Do you have any concerns that Kanye won't come through with his plans to help restore the Regal?

A: I can tell you that it is 100 percent true that we have Kanye's commitment to help fund the remaining repairs to get the venue opened. I'm not at liberty to talk too many details. ... It's not something that's impulsive, as many people perceive it. It's been months in the making. We're very grateful to have finally received a public display of his support for the project, and we're still in the process of doing repairs on the property until Kanye comes in with his commitment to fund the remaining repairs necessary.

Q: Realistically speaking — when would the renovations be done to let people come in?

A: Frankly, we've got about 30 days of work to do, so if the money is there, we're looking at a fall opening of this year.

A: We have our GoFundMe page set at $150,000 and that's frankly what it has been for the past four years, and that's what we're looking to raise on what is hopefully the last campaign to open the doors for Avalon Regal Theater. This is about the sixth or seventh GoFundMe campaign that we've done, and most folks will tell you that the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results. However this time we have Kanye, so I'm hopeful that the community and the city of Chicago can wake up and realize what a wonderful project this is to support.

Q: Given the Kanye news, is the Sept. 29 hologram event with Chief Keef still planning on happening?

A: Absolutely. We're either going to do it inside or outside, we've got a hologram truck, so it's no problem. We did this back in 2015, and we'll do it again if we have to. Tickets haven't gone on sale yet, because we're waiting for support to come in from the community for the project.

CRAIG SJODIN/ABC

"I never danced, like ever. Even at high school dances and stuff, if I danced, it was very minimum. It was just something I've never felt comfortable doing," says Chicago's Joe Amabile, who also appeared on "Bachelor in Paradise."

'Grocery Store Joe' ready to dance

and raised in Melrose Park. He graduated from Holy Cross High School in 2004 shortly before the all-male River Grove school closed because of declining enrollment.

"Joe was a charmer. He was like the kind of student that would try to use his charm to kind of get out of a lot of things," said Marilyn Skowron, who taught at Holy Cross for 22 years and now teaches English at Guerin College Preparatory High School. "He was an average student, but he would try like batting his eyelashes at you and try to make you feel like, 'Oh yeah, I'll give you a break.' "

Amabile was a member of futures giant CME Group from 2005-2010. He said he clerked there as a teenager and later worked as an equities trader.

He also got into the family produce business. He said his uncle John, who died this year, worked on Maxwell Street. The Tribune asked him about his grandfather, Joseph "Joe Shine" Amabile, a reputed crime syndicate figure who died in 1976 — about 10 years before Amabile was born. "My father was a police officer. My brother's a police officer, and I was raised not like that," Amabile said of the Outfit.

He eventually became a part owner of Eric's Food Center in the Hegewisch neighborhood on the South Side. That's where he filmed his "Bachelorette" intro video. He figured he would give the show a try because he had been "single for the majority of my life" and the timing was right.

Eric's Food Center was recently sold so "Grocery Store Joe" — a moniker given to him by fans — is without a grocery store, but he said he's still a produce buyer. For now, he's learning how to dance for "Dancing with the Stars."

"Bachelor" host Chris Harrison extended the show invite to Amabile so he could be closer to his girlfriend, Kendall Long, whom he met and dated this summer on "Bachelor in Paradise." The dancing competition tapes in Los Angeles near where Long lives.

"I never danced, like ever. Even at high school dances and stuff, if I danced, it was very minimum. It was just something I've never felt comfortable doing," Amabile said.

His mom, Gina, confirmed this. "I'm like a nervous wreck because he can't dance. ... I mean, he's never danced."

Amabile's family plans to be in the audience Monday as he dances the quickstep to Leo Soul's "Fish Out of Water" with his professional partner, Jenna Johnson. On Tuesday, the pair dances the quickstep to "Check It Out" by Oh the Larceny. They need good marks from the judges and viewer votes to advance to the next round.

Amabile may be able to win over viewers with just his megawatt smile, which is a huge hit with his fans. His dentist, Oak Park Dr. Anthony Ponzio, said he's always smiling.

"He's just one of those types of people that everyone in the office likes, from the time he walks in to the time he leaves. He's one of those guys like nothing is fake about him. He's just a friendly, engaging person," said Ponzio, adding that he has known the Amabile family for years and has worked with a few of Amabile's relatives.

Amabile isn't sure what's in store after his stint on "Dancing with the Stars." His mother, of course, hopes he comes home to Chicago. The way things are going though, he could find a spot on another TV show. His fate is in the hands of his fans, again.

"Vote for me, I guess, if you want to keep seeing me on TV," Amabile said.

Theresa Bautista made her Harvest Festival debut with "I am a Pretty Girl," a powerful solo performed alongside poetry.

IN PERFORMANCE

Everything from high-energy jazz to grunge at Harvest Fest

By Lauren Warnecke
Chicago Tribune

Harvest Chicago Contemporary Dance Festival

When: Sept. 28-29 (new lineup of performers)

Where: Ruth Page Center for the Arts, 1016 N. Dearborn Parkway

Running time: 1 hour, 45 minutes

Tickets: $25 at www.hccdf.com

A few years ago, producers Nicole Gifford and Melissa Mallinson expanded by adding a fourth performance and splitting invited artists into two separate lineups across two weekends. It was a critical change, moving HCCDF from an unwieldy, overlong single bill to a proper festival format. It's one of the only ones left of its kind, after a slew of contemporary dance festivals closed shop in the last decade. HCCDF keeps going, and has become a reliably good way to discover new artists or see familiar ones in new ways.

For example, the first weekend featured Corinne Imberski, who also performed the closing number as a regular performer in RE/Dance. Also on the bill: Michel Rodriguez Cintra, best recognized for his work with Lucky Plush Productions and as one half of The Cambrian's inaugural "The Nexus Project" with Benjamin Wardell. Here, Cintra performed with Jordan Reinwald in a work called "Give and Take," an aptly titled duet for the married couple. They took turns moving and listening, partnering one another and, in "Give and Take's" best moments, dancing side-by-side in unison. It's a reminder that, despite all the talking and singing Cintra does in his current gig, he's still one of the most satisfying dancers in this city to watch.

Imberski performed "Into Second Self" with fellow RE/Dancer Daiva Bhandari, a duet with a feel similar to that of "Give and Take." Despite the charming, free flowing, rough-and-tumble feel of the RE/Dance rep (of which the closer, Michael Estanich's "The Biggest Wail from the Bottom of my Heart," is no exception), Imberski's work was carefully controlled. Her cautious sensitivity and keen sense of weight and energy shifting through the body created an infectious dynamic between her and Bhandari — like that of a woman chasing her shadow, or maybe her memories.

Opening the evening was a new work from Jessica Miller Tomlinson called "Speak to Me Only with Your Eyes." Tomlinson's aesthetic waxed and waned between super-serious and quirky wit; "Speak to Me" was a healthy blend of the two, a grungy-hippy group dance performed in jeans and T-shirts to music by Led Zeppelin, "Black Country Woman" and "The Rain Song." What's a grungy-hippy, you ask? Remember the '90s, when bell-bottoms came back, ripped shirts and flannel were still in, nonchalance ruled the roost and life was all about the music? It's that. Tomlinson's cast of three women and two men danced with an aloof, be-cool nature, switching partners willy-nilly, unemotionally mouthing the music and intermingling aqueous dancing with sharp, spastic gestures.

Santa Barbara, Calif.-based Weslie Ching offered her exacting solo "Invincible Summer," while Giordano II made its regular appearance in HCCDF with Joshua Blake Carter's "Late Night Tales," a distinctly different take on his usual go-to power plays. Don't get me wrong, there was plenty of full-tilt, high-energy jazz dancing here, but also something fascinatingly weird about the opening solo featuring Mariterese Altosino. Dancing to Benedict Cumberbatch's voice set to swanky, elevator schmooze, Altosino relived a former life twirling under a disco ball (haven't we all been there?), while four others faced upstage, frozen, waiting for their cue to go there with her.

Making their festival debuts were Eric Mullis of Charlotte, N.C., and Theresa Bautista, hailing from Louisville, Ky. In Mullis' ongoing investigation of Appalachia and the South, he employed "Sherman's Neckties" as fodder for dancing, a "scorched-earth" Union Army tactic of tangling railroad ties, which left only one Confederate line intact during the Civil War. Saxophonist Brent Bagwell panned the back of the house, playing as though his instrument was equally bent and blocked. He blew air through the horn and smacked the reed, contrasting the quiet with dissonant squawks and screeches. Mullis spent much of his time on the perimeter of a center spotlight on stage, bending and folding his long and lanky body every which way, alluding to the same sense of stuck-ness. This went on for a while — maybe longer than it needed to — but Mullis' keen balance between chaos and control, and his gorgeous long lines and finite articulations of the hands and arms tempering all that entanglement, were captivating.

I first saw Bautista's "I am a Pretty Girl" at the Midwest RAD Fest last March, a powerful solo performed alongside poetry by Shayla Lawson made ever more poignant by its parallels to the #MeToo movement. As a self-described "pretty girl," Bautista's portrayal lays out every woman's Catch-22, in which being "too sexy" serves, according to some, as an invitation to objectify them, while donning a more masculine appearance does little to desexualize them in the eyes of others. "I'm a pretty girl who says no. ... I'm a wrecking ball with nice legs," said the voiceover as the petite Bautista looked us straight in the eyes from her perch atop Ruth Page's stage, and walked away.

While a city like Chicago is happy to show off the shiny things it builds, "it doesn't always want you to see how those things got built or who got hurt in the process," says Amer, who is not afraid of setting the stakes high and seems en route to proving her point.

The narrative podcasts that have most caught people's attention have tended to involve more lurid crimes, with the re-investigated murder case in the first season of "Serial" setting a kind of template.

WBEZ-FM 91.5 and the Chicago Tribune are taking a bold step onto new turf with the current, compelling "16 Shots," which is both recounting the police shooting of Laquan McDonald and telling the tale of the trial of Chicago police Officer Jason Van Dyke for McDonald's murder in almost real time.

"The City" is staking out its own territory too. It aims to draw its audience by going back in time to pull back the curtain on how a big city, in its worst moments, works, but with a less sensational crime at the core.

Instead of dead bodies, there are people having trouble with their respirators because of all the dust the dumping operations kick up. There are people worried about property values. But even in Monday's first half-hour, there are good, common-folk characters aplenty and a fellow, in a limo, who seems like a central-casting villain. (Beyond USA Today, additional support, the podcast says, came from the Fund for Investigative Journalism and the Social Justice News Nexus at Northwestern University. In disclosure, my wife, Chicago journalist Louise Kiernan, was co-director of the News Nexus until early 2016.)

Episode 1, of course, can only be a kind of preamble, but Amer and her team get far enough in to set the scene deftly and economically. Woodson and neighbors began noticing dump trucks emptying construction debris into a vacant lot in the neighborhood all day and all night. They took down the license plates on the trucks, and some trucks, they noticed, had different plates on the front than on the back.

> "I could see a mountain growing."
> — An elementary school teacher who noticed trucks dumping debris into an empty lot off of Roosevelt Road

She and fellow block club leaders got together and wrote to official agencies in protest. "We wrote letters to everybody from Who's Who to Who's That," she says.

Nearby, a teacher in an elementary school noticed more trucks dumping more debris into an even bigger empty lot off of Roosevelt Road. "I could see a mountain growing," she says.

Both lots, it turned out, were being run by the fellow with the fancy car and the "Cosby sweater," one John Christopher, who had permits not for a dump but for a gravel crushing business. " 'I'm a recycler and I'm a beautifier,' that was his claim," says one former official in still another stellar quote.

Of course, with the re-examination of an old story like this, you can simply look up old news articles to find out what happened to Christopher and the dumps he imposed on neighborhoods far from the city's clout centers. The search term "Operation Silver Shovel" would be a good place to start.

But why would you want to cheat yourself out of getting to know these characters and what they might tell us about Chicago, of the, yes, pleasure of a sordid story unfolding vividly?

‘Gut Rehab’ connects trans bodies, queer architecture

By KT Hawbaker
Chicago Tribune

WESTERN EXHIBITIONS

A detail from Edie Fake’s “I.O.U.D,” an autobiographical painting.

It’s Virgo season, baby.

According to the stars, Aug. 23 through Sept. 22 is the time to lean into solid organization, good judgment and the details; an earth sign, Virgo is about groundedness and deliberate moves, putting away summer cutoffs and zipping up a sensible jacket.

Virgo season also marks Edie Fake’s return to Chicago, with his new show “Gut Rehab” at Western Exhibitions. In fact, astrology catalyzed the paintings curated here, the artist’s second solo show with the gallery. Fake just also happens to be a Virgo.

“I saw an ad in an old magazine for a gay bar in Chicago called the Virgo Out,” Fake said in a phone interview. “I was like, ‘Oh, my God, there’s a bar called the Virgo Out? I’m a Virgo — how did I not know?’ I went to go find it. Of course, it was long gone, but that’s sort of what started the project.”

With the earlier “Memory Palaces” series, Fake recreated the facades of abandoned or demolished queer spaces, borrowing the precision and angles of architecture while retaining the cartoonish sensibilities that saturate his comics practice. It’s one part ancient history, another part organized chaos, zero parts white space.

“My interest with these architectural forms began in Chicago, with researching queer histories and communities in the city,” Fake said. “So much has happened, but it also seems so transitory — things came and went. I started by drawing buildings that remembered those spaces. And, there’s some power in redesigning these spaces. Not for the sake of nostalgia, but for the idea that there can be lineage.”

This series forms the backbone of Fake’s newest work. After moving from Chicago to Los Angeles to Joshua Tree, Calif., he isn’t flanked by high-rises, sirens and towers. In this wide-open space, he’s looking inward, now using architectural metaphor to explore and express his own trans autobiography.

“It morphed into using architecture or the forms of architecture to speak about contradictions, particularly in like trans identity, like the building of ‘impossible’ buildings as a metaphor for trans bodies,” Fake described. “It’s saying, ‘This sounds impossible but it can be visualized, it can be realized.’

“I wanted to do a painting about what it felt like to bind my chest for so long and eventually having masculinizing chest surgery,” he said. “I began to think, ‘Oh! This language could be in these architectural structures that I am painting and these colors that I am using. I could make this connect to my body.’ ”

Fake’s gouache and ink images are an amalgamation of his other histories: The particular combination of media is frequently used in the comics and zine community, where Fake emerged with the series “Gaylord Phoenix” in “2001 or 2002.” The rigorous, if bombastic, organization of his paintings isn’t just a Virgo tick; it could also be read as an instinct borne from reading narratives in neat, paneled sequences.

“My impulse is to take these architectural forms and push them into more euphoric, ecstatic visions. I feel so vulnerable about this work, but it feels like I’ve been painting little love letters to myself and the way my body has changed in regards to gender.

“Not to sound corny, but there’s a lot of meditating on ‘What does it mean to be in this body of god?’ and ‘How can that visually be portrayed?’ ”

‘Babi Yar’ sends message

As this opening movement reached its climax, vocalists and instrumentalists joined forces in passages both tragic and heroic.

“There is no Jewish blood in my blood,” Tikhomirov sang, soon joined by the chorus, “but I feel the loathsome hatred/ Of all anti-Semites as though I were a Jew/ And that is why I am a true Russian!”

This movement alone would have been enough to ensure the immortality of Yevtushenko’s words and Shostakovich’s embodiment of them, but the Symphony No. 13 expands upon both men’s unblinking criticism of life in the USSR. The acidic dissonance, mocking character and circus-like passages of the “Humor” movement suggested that sarcasm offered Soviet dissidents their only defense against state oppression.

The bleakness and rage that coursed through “In the Store” (a poignant portrait of long-suffering Russian women), the terror that radiated from “Fears” (menacingly evoking life in a police state) and the indictment of lies that can propel “A Career” (which salutes persecuted truth-tellers) were sharply drawn by Muti and colleagues.

And yet after all this anguish, the score ended with a slender ray of light, not only via Yevtushenko’s final lines but also Shostakovich’s serene writing for strings. Muti brought extraordinary tenderness to these last pages, in effect giving listeners a desperately needed reason to hope.

The all-Russian evening began with the CSO’s first performance of Prokofiev’s Sinfonietta, Op. 5/48, an embryonic piece most valuable for the ways in which it foreshadowed the breakthroughs of his beloved “Classical” Symphony. As such, the Sinfonietta offered a gentle prelude to the ordeals yet to come.

Kartemquin Films announces $150,000 grant initiative

By Michael Phillips
Chicago Tribune

Not since “Hoop Dreams” in 1994 has Kartemquin Films, Chicago’s venerable nonprofit documentary powerhouse, enjoyed this kind of national profile.

“America to Me,” director Steve James’ 10-part nonfiction series about a year in the life of Oak Park and River Forest High School, continues on the Starz network through Oct. 28. One of that project’s three segment directors, Bing Liu, came through Kartemquin’s Diverse Voices in Docs mentorship program four years ago. Earlier this summer, Liu’s Rockford-focused documentary feature, “Minding the Gap,” opened to exceptional reviews and is currently streaming on the Hulu network.

On the heels of those two projects: On Nov. 1 at the downtown Chicago Union League Club, Kartemquin will hold a fundraising luncheon presentation featuring James, Liu and a host of Midwestern filmmakers whose projects are receiving Kartemquin financing.

The $150,000 initiative is backed by the Sage Foundation, the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, Voqal Fund and the Forum Fund, Part of the money goes to Kartemquin’s Diverse Voices program; the rest of it supports first-time or emerging directors who are among Kartemquin’s rangy network of nearly 500 filmmaking alums.

WATCH THIS: MONDAY

Jay Hernandez

"Magnum P.I." (8 p.m., CBS): It's been a "few" years since the first version, plus original star Tom Selleck is occupied elsewhere (in "Blue Bloods," of course) ... so someone else drives the cool car in this new reboot of the detective series. In "I Saw the Sun Rise," Jay Hernandez assumes the title role of the military veteran who works for an unseen employer in Hawaii, via an intermediary named Higgins (a female this time, portrayed by Perdita Weeks).

"The Resident" (7 p.m., FOX): In the Season 2 premiere, "00:42:30," after a power blackout forces the Chastain Medical Hospital staff to treat their patients without technology, Bell (Bruce Greenwood) orders them to stop admitting new patients and transfer out any who are on life support. When a child in distress is rushed to the ER, however, Conrad and Devon (Matt Czuchry, Manish Dayal) shrug off that mandate.

"Jane Fonda in Five Acts" (7 p.m., 2:20 a.m., HBO): An actress dons many different hats as she tackles assorted roles, but two-time Oscar winner Jane Fonda has been a chameleon in her own life as well, reinventing herself here and there as a political activist, fitness tycoon and — oh, yes — lightning rod for controversy. Filmmaker Susan Lacy's new documentary takes an intimate look at this complex woman who began life as the daughter of movie star Henry Fonda.

"Young Sheldon" (7:31 p.m., CBS): "The Big Bang Theory" long ago established that Dr. Sheldon Cooper doesn't cope very well with any unexpected change in his life, and we see that trait in his childhood as well, as this companion series opens Season 2 with "A High-Pitched Buzz and Training Wheels." That title references an annoying noise the family refrigerator starts making.

"Bull" (9 p.m., CBS): It's doubtful many fans of "Bull" lost much sleep during the summer hiatus over whether the title character's Season 2-ending heart attack would prove to be fatal, and look! Dr. Jason Bull (Michael Weatherly) indeed is back, if somewhat sobered by his ordeal, in "The Ground Beneath Their Feet," the Season 3 premiere.

"The Good Doctor" (9 p.m., ABC): Dr. Shaun Murphy (Freddie Highmore) finds himself sorely tested as this hit medical drama enters its sophomore season. At the end of Season 1, a preoccupied Shaun made an uncharacteristic surgical blunder that nearly cost a patient his life. That incident leaves Shaun stricken with guilt and also vulnerable to his frequent nemesis, Dr. Andrews (Hill Harper).

Bridge

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ K 8 ♥ K 10 9 ♦ A Q 3 2 ♣ A 9 7 6
Partner opens 1D and right-hand opponent passes. What call would you make?

A.1—You will probably end up in 3NT, but why not make a forcing diamond raise on the way. For most modern players, that is an inverted raise to 2D.

Q.2—North-South vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A K J 6 4 ♥ 7 ♦ A K 8 6 2 ♣ A 8

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♠ | 2♥ | Pass | 3♥ |
| ? | | | |

What call would you make?

A.2—Don't even think about passing. There is too much to be gained by bidding. Bid 4D.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A Q J 9 6 ♥ A K 10 ♦ K J 9 2 ♣ 4

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♠ | Pass | 4♠ | Pass |
| ? | | | |

What call would you make?

A.3—Partner's bid is pre-emptive — classically five trumps, a side ace, and a side singleton. Bid 4NT to make sure he has an ace, and then bid 6S if he does.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ 4 2 ♥ Q J 10 2 ♦ A J 10 ♣ A K 6 3

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1NT | Pass | 2♥* | Pass |
| ? | | | |

Transfer to spades

What call would you make?

A.4—You have double stoppers in every other suit, but you must accept the transfer unless you love spades. Bid 2S.

CHICAGO WEATHER CENTER

chicagoweathercenter.com | By Tom Skilling and WGN9

MONDAY, SEPT. 24 NORMAL HIGH: 72° NORMAL LOW: 51° RECORD HIGH: 93° (2017) RECORD LOW: 35° (1989)

LOCAL FORECAST

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 73 | 64 |

■ Clouds may limit viewing of tonight's full Harvest Moon

■ Morning sunshine quickly fades as clouds roll in.

■ A mostly cloudy afternoon with scattered showers developing late.

■ Highs reach the lower 70s. Southeast winds 10-18 mph.

■ Overnight lows in the lower and middle 60s.

NATIONAL FORECAST

One year ago, the Chicago area was in the midst of an unprecedented late-September heat wave when the city logged seven consecutive record highs, with temperatures reaching the lower and middle 90s from Sept. 20-26. Nothing even close to that is in sight this September, with temperatures in the upcoming week expected to fluctuate between the 60s and 70s as a series of cold fronts pass through the Midwest. Temperatures should climb into the 70s on Monday and Tuesday as south winds not only bring in a surge of warmth, but also moisture that will trigger some showers late Monday and Monday night and a round of stronger, potentially severe thunderstorms late Tuesday, especially in areas just east and south of Chicago. Cooler weather will follow during midweek, relegating highs to the 60s before a weekend warmup.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 25

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 78 | 55 |

Mostly cloudy, warmer and more humid with scattered showers and thunderstorms developing in the afternoon and evening. Highs reach the middle and upper 70s. Turning cooler overnight.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 26

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 66 | 50 |

Any lingering clouds and showers depart early, then skies become mostly sunny dotted with passing cumulus clouds. Cooler with fresh north winds 10-18 mph. Highs only reach the middle 60s.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 27

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 69 | 50 |

An abundance of sunshine. A bit milder as highs close in on 70. South winds increase to 10-15 mph in the afternoon. Cloud increase overnight with scattered showers possible.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 28

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 65 | 53 |

SATURDAY, SEPT. 29

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|
| 70 | 59 |

Early sunshine fades as clouds increase through the day. Strengthening southwest winds boost highs to around 70. Chance of showers late in the day and at night.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 30

| HIGH | LOW |
|---|---|

ASK TOM

Dear Tom,

Please settle a dispute between two stubborn friends. What were the dates of the first and last measurable snowfalls in the past three winters?

— M. Tasmin Thoren

Dear M.,

Despite the fact that we've just passed the autumnal equinox, we are rapidly approaching the earliest dates for the start of a Chicago snow season.

While the city has recorded a trace of snow as early as Sept. 25 in two years — 1928 and 1942 — the city's earliest measurable snowfall (0.1 inches-plus) occurred Oct. 12, 2006, when 0.3 inches fell.

The city's latest trace of snow was observed on June 2, 1910, and the latest date for measurable snow was 0.2 inches on May 11, 1966.

The first and last measurable snowfall dates for the past three snow seasons: 2015-16, Nov. 20-April 8; 2016-17, Dec. 4-March 14; and 2017-18, Nov. 10-April 19.
