Chamira Williams, 26, rests on the roof at Schwab Rehabilitation Hospital in Chicago last month. She was shot Aug. 5.

UNSOLVED 75 SHOT, 3 CHARGED

For 1 victim, response from cops took 2 weeks

BY ANNIE SWEENEY AND JEREMY GORNER
Chicago Tribune

The wounded kept coming in. Every few minutes, it seemed, paramedics would bring in another person who was shot. Detectives followed, hustling in and out of Stroger Hospital.

Lachaka Hobson waited hours for one of them to stop and talk about her 26-year-old daughter, Chamira Williams, who was shot on the West Side while in a car with her boyfriend. But no one stopped.

"My baby's here too," Hobson remembers thinking. "Why hasn't anybody come here to even say anything?"

It turns out no one from the hospital staff apparently called police after Williams was brought there by friends. Hospital policy requires staff to report so-called "walk-in" gunshot victims to Chicago police, but the department said it has no record of being notified about Williams until Aug. 21.

The hospital would not discuss the unusual lapse, citing laws that require Williams to sign a consent form in front of hospital officials. Williams was shot on Aug. 5 during the most violent weekend in the city in years when 75 people were shot and 13 of them were killed. Stroger bore the brunt of it.

Hobson said she contacted police herself several times in the days ahead, but detectives did

Uncertainty looms as court sways to right

Confirmation battle puts cloud over future cases

BY MARK SHERMAN

ALEX BRANDON/AP

Brett Kavanaugh was sworn in as a justice on Saturday.

WASHINGTON — The moment conservatives have dreamed about for decades has arrived with Brett Kavanaugh joining the Supreme Court. But with it comes the shadow of a bitter confirmation fight that is likely to hang over the court as it takes on divisive issues, especially those dealing with politics and women's rights.

With Kavanaugh taking the place of the more moderate Anthony Kennedy, conservatives should have a working majority of five justices to restrict abortion rights, limit the use of race in college admissions and rein in federal regulators.

The newly constituted court also might broaden gun rights, further relax campaign finance laws and halt the expansion of the rights of LGBT people, who three years ago won the right to marry nationwide with Kennedy in the majority.

Yet Kavanaugh may have a hard time putting behind him the tumultuous confirmation process, which ended with the Senate voting 50-48 to confirm him Saturday, the narrowest margin of victory for a Supreme Court nominee in 137 years.

"In the public mind, there will always be this dark cloud hanging over the court, even if Kavanaugh is eventually embraced by all his colleagues," said Elizabeth Wydra, president of the liberal Constitutional Accountability Center.

That cloud stems from allegations of sexual assault and other inappropriate behavior by Kavanaugh while he was in high school and college, along with his politically charged testimony that labeled the look into his past a political hit job by Democrats.

Kavanaugh has forcefully denied any inappropriate behavior with women. He also acknowledged in a Wall Street Journal column that some of his testimony went too far, but did not apologize for anything he said.

The bitter partisan fight over the confirmation could continue in another form if Democrats take control of the House after the Novem-

Bridge lifts in Chicago are declining, and here's why

MARY WISNIEWSKI
Getting Around

CHRIS WALKER/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Fog sets the scene for a lifted State Street Bridge, foreground, and Wabash Avenue Bridge in spring 2016.

It's bridge-lifting season in Chicago — time for one of the few downtown traffic holdups that can inspire a little wonder, instead of aggravation.

Every spring and fall, bridges along the Chicago River downtown are raised to allow sailboats to pass. In the autumn, the boats head to winter storage along the river's South Branch; in the spring, they go back toward Lake Michigan.

In decades past, the Chicago River was a regular passageway for commercial shipping, and bridges needed to be lifted often to accommodate the traffic. But declining use of the river by industry, a change in federal regulations and the migration of more sailboats to yards along the Calumet River mean the need for raising downtown bridges has decreased.

So if you want to increase your chances of seeing bridges go up and down, or viewing bridge machinery from beneath the street, you need to plan.

"It is an event. ... People do stop and watch because it is pretty amazing when the bridges open," said Patrick McBriarty, author of the illustrated history "Chicago River Bridges."

Autumn lifts happen most Saturdays and Wednesdays through mid-November, starting around 9 a.m., with 27 bridges being raised one at a time, going west from

Will women's wave affect 14th District?

Ex-aide to Obama getting attention in strong GOP area

BY PATRICK M. O'CONNELL
Chicago Tribune

With the emerald fairways of the Pinecrest Golf Club in Huntley serving as a serene backdrop through the picture windows behind her, Lauren Underwood held a conversation centered on Social Security issues with a crowd of potential suburban voters.

The group assembled for the wide-ranging policy discussion with the Democratic nurse from Naperville consisted mostly of people 65 and older and primarily women.

A special guest at the recent Wednesday morning event, Jon "Bowzer" Bauman — a former member of the band Sha Na Na, who is now president of a Social Security political action committee — noted the record number of women running for political office this year. The small crowd burst into applause.

"No more old white men!" someone shouted.

Underwood, a 32-year-old black woman who worked as an adviser in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services under President Barack Obama, is attempting to unseat Republican U.S. Rep. Randy Hultgren of Plano, who is 52 and white. The vast 14th Congressional District, a mix of western and northern suburbs, exurbs and farmland, has typically been a strong base of support for the GOP and was once represented by Dennis Hastert, who served as U.S. House speaker.

Underwood, buoyed by robust fundraising and an increasing national spotlight, is trying to change that.

"We've been talking to farmers who tell us, like, no Democrat has knocked on their door in 10 years," Underwood said. "Not congressional. Just no Democrat, right? And so the opportunity to show up in places that have been ignored, overlooked, where African-Americans cannot rejoice too long over this victory because another case looms in the horizon.

ARMANDO L. SANCHEZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Protesters march on Michigan Avenue after Chicago police Officer Jason Van Dyke was convicted of murder on Friday.

Officer Van Dyke's conviction cannot fully heal our city

Dahleen Glanton

Let's not pretend that the conviction of Officer Jason Van Dyke will heal our broken city. It will not.

Let's not act as though sending a police officer to jail for murder absolves us of the long history of police misconduct that has recklessly taken lives and ruined so many others. It does not.

And by all means, let's not convince ourselves that the conflicts between African-Americans and law enforcement officials have been solved. They have not.

Indeed, this is the first time during our lifetime that a white police officer has been convicted of killing an African-American in Chicago. Black people, no doubt, find some solace in breaking through a barrier that once seemed impenetrable.

But it is not enough.

The line of demarcation between the police and African-American communities was drawn before most of us were born. And it has solidified through each generation.

Some of our communities have been damaged too deeply to mend so easily. It will take much more than vindication for a single police misdeed to repair years of injustice.

Before the verdict was delivered, Chicagoans were on edge, fearful that the city would erupt in violence. Deep inside, many of us likely knew that African-Americans had a legitimate reason to be angry if Van Dyke was acquitted.

If we were to be honest, we would also acknowledge that each of us, of every race and social status in the city, would be partly to blame.

After Laquan McDonald's shooting, the U.S. Justice Department gave us a clear explanation as to why African-Americans in Chicago had reason to be upset.

The 17-year-old's murder is about much more than the death of one teenager. It is about a law enforcement system that historically targeted minorities, particularly African-American males, as though they were every officer's worst enemy.

It is about our acceptance of a Police Department that federal investigators found is flawed to the core. And it is about our city's willingness to close its eyes and cover its ears every time its citizens tried to warn that things were afoul.

It is about the scores of husbands, sons, brothers and uncles who have been racially profiled for generations and further victimized by a code of silence that shielded unscrupulous police officers from punishment.

Yes, the hearts of African-Americans are a little less burdened now that Van Dyke is being held accountable for shooting McDonald 16 times. But many blacks still harbor pain over the death of 22-year-old Rekia Boyd, one of many victims who will never see justice.

Some African-Americans cheered when Van Dyke's guilty verdict came in. But as soon as the disgraced cop was led from the spotlight, a harsh reality set in.

African-Americans cannot rejoice too long over this victory because another case looms in the horizon. Harith Augustus, a 37-year-old barber, was fatally shot by police in July as he left work in South Shore.

And despite newly adopted reforms, there will be other incidents in Chicago or elsewhere, for sure.

This kind of systemic police misconduct doesn't just bruise the surface of minority communities. The pain goes deep into the soul and passes from grandparents to parents, and on to their children.

We cannot move forward as a city until we address the sins of the past. And healing cannot begin until we acknowledge the severe damage that has been done.

Teen slain at vigil 'was becoming a man'

By Hannah Leone
Chicago Tribune

Cropped curly hair and a little scruff framed the young man's smile, which seemed to involve his whole face. James Garrett had been working toward a goal that was coming to fruition.

"He was becoming a man," said his adviser at Butler College Prep, digital arts teacher Dyryl Burnett.

In the fall of his senior year at Butler, with college acceptance letters rolling in, Garrett, 18, was fatally shot Saturday night at a vigil on Chicago's Far South Side for a 25-year-old Chicago woman killed in a car crash.

An argument broke out around 7:35 p.m. Saturday at the outdoor gathering in the 13200 block of South Prairie Avenue in the Eden Green neighborhood, police said. More than 100 people were at the vigil, a source said. Witnesses told police two people took out guns and started shooting, wounding three people.

One bullet hit Garrett in the middle of his back and killed him. A 48-year-old man and a 20-year-old woman were also wounded, each shot in an arm. The men were taken to University of Chicago Medical Center, where one was stabilized and Garrett was pronounced dead. The woman was stabilized at Advocate Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn.

James Garrett

The Cook County medical examiner identified Garrett on Sunday morning, listing his address in the 5600 block of South Mayfield Avenue, in the Garfield Ridge neighborhood.

No one had been arrested Sunday morning as Area South detectives continued to investigate.

On Sept. 20, Garrett stood in front of the Talladega College table in his school uniform — orange collared shirt under a dark blue sweatshirt, khaki pants, black shoes, student ID on a lanyard around his neck — and beamed. That Thursday, he became the first of Butler's class of 2019 to be accepted to college, and he was excited, said Christopher Goins, Garrett's principal at the charter school in the far southern Pullman community area.

He'd been accepted to a historically black college — several colleges by now — and though he hadn't yet announced where he intended to go, the history was an important factor for him, Goins said. Garrett had a plan: Go to a historically black college and become a teacher.

"He wanted to be a role model for other young men who grew up in situations like he did, on the South Side of Chicago," Goins said.

At Butler, he was taking the "Intro to Urban Education" class, which starts training black high school students to teach. His siblings and cousins have also gone to Butler, Goins said.

"They have an amazing family," Goins said. "This shouldn't have happened to them. It's not in the playbook."

Saturday night, teachers, administrators and classmates of Garrett's lined the sidewalk outside University of Chicago's emergency department, standing against the wall or holding one another as they cried.

"He was probably the most popular kid in the building," Goins said. "Everybody loved him."

A basketball player who like to play around, Garrett was serious about his academics, earning early college credits through a summer intensive at Boston College, Gains said.

During Garrett's sophomore year, he became an "advisee-son" to Burnett, a relationship the adviser deeply appreciated, he said.

"I thank God I was able to have his ear," Burnett said. "I was able to be mad at him, I was able to be happy with him, I was able to talk with him, and unlike most folks, he actually listened."

Recently, Burnett gave Garrett advice on a relationship, and the teen listened and immediately did what his mentor had suggested, Burnett said. When Garrett knew he did something wrong, he tried to resolve it right away, Burnett said.

"He wanted someone to tell him the right thing to do," Burnett said. "When someone was able to do that, he appreciated it."

In moments, Burnett could just look at Garrett, and he would straighten right up. At times Burnett was down, Garrett and his classmates would pick him up.

It was always Garrett with the witty comment, Garrett trying to make others laugh, Garrett wanting everyone to be happy. But more than his comments, Garrett, a relational personality, was defined by his interactions, Burnett said.

He'd take Burnett's phone and fill it with pictures, recently smiling and sticking out his tongue in a light gray Adidas T-shirt, leaving his adviser with a burst of selfies.

Frequently during morning homeroom in Classroom 301, across a sea of 30 other teens, Garrett and Burnett would catch each other's eyes and burst into laughter.

"About nothing, a comment that I said, a comment that he said, a joke," Burnett said. "A room full of students, him and I just had our own moment."

Goins said they're planning a vigil Monday at the school. On the high school's Facebook page, a tribute to Butler gave his GPA — 3.9 — and stated the school would never forget how he loved everyone he met.

The day before he was shot, Garrett went to a family meeting for seniors at the school, his adviser said. As usual, he said, Garrett was joking around — not interrupting anything, but talking uncontrollably, being a goof.

Naperville District 203 weighs prospect of arming teachers in Illinois schools

By Suzanne Baker
Naperville Sun

Rural Illinois school officials say arming staff members is necessary to protect students, and they want school districts like Naperville 203 to join a push for a law change to allow it.

Each November the Illinois Association of School Boards gathers for a conference in Chicago at which a delegate from each school board votes on issues the organization will pursue in the upcoming legislative session.

This year school boards from rural districts are advocating three plans that call on the IASB to advocate for legislation giving school districts the option to have armed administrators, faculty or staff in their buildings.

The plan, which received the endorsement of the IASB resolution committee, would require staff members to complete a state-approved training course to be eligible to carry a gun in school.

Members of the District 203 school board last week briefly discussed what they must consider before taking a position. The board is expected to decide Oct. 15 who will be the District 203 IASB delegate and how the delegate will vote on the various resolutions at the conference.

Board member Terry Fielden said arming staff will be a hot topic before the delegate assembly.

Fielden, who also serves as the DuPage representative on the IASB resolutions committee, said the logic behind the push to arm school staff is because most rural school districts don't have student resources officers or anyone from law enforcement who can arrive at a school immediately should there be a violent intruder.

"There's a great distance, and it could be 35 or 40 minutes for law enforcement to arrive, so they want to be able to protect themselves in certain situations," he said.

What's different this year from resolutions presented in past years, Fielden said, is that school districts are given the option of including arming teachers in their Student Safety and Protect Plans.

"It sounds very good on the surface ... except if you're a district that chooses not to go down that road, and there's a tragedy at your school and people will ask why didn't you put the trained person inside the building to begin with," Fielden said. "It's still a double-edge sword in my mind and doesn't really solve the problem."

He said he understand rural boards of education want to do something to protect their students. "The problem is the boards are trying to move that direction themselves."

Fielden suggests school boards instead need to pressure the state Legislature to fund school security. "I think the states needs to step up and provide what's necessary to protect the students," he said.

"School shootings are a very, very tragic event. But where we've seen some good results is when the person inside the building is a trained law enforcement person," Fielden said. "I think when you put a firearm in the hands of individuals, basically, there's a lot of risk there, both to the population there and the person carrying the weapon."

Board President Kristin Fitzgerald questioned whether this even should be a matter the IASB should pursue.

"I think we are blessed because we have (school resource officers)," Fitzgerald said. "However, we want to consider is this where we want IASB to be putting their priority and time?"

Fitzgerald said a resolution from the District 203 board supported by IASB delegates at last year's convention didn't get much traction in the spring legislative session because of other priorities facing lawmakers.

Fitzgerald still wants the IASB to push her legislation in the coming year calling on the state to allow school districts that under levy as a means to save taxpayers money to have the ability to adjust their tax levy request for up to three previous years should the state or federal government approve measures that would drastically affect a district's bottom line.

Prior to the Oct. 15 meeting, Fitzgerald urged district administrators to provide any insight and opinions they might have.

Board member Donna Wandke said she'd also like to hear from the Naperville Police Department on what they think about rural districts having armed staff members.

Earlier this year when the topic of arming teachers was broached after the Parkland, Fla., shooting, Naperville Police Chief Robert Marshall said he questioned how teachers who are trained to support, teach and care for students would handle the psychological ramifications of taking a life, particularly if the perpetrator is a student.

And union President Mark Bailey said none of the 1,200 teachers in Naperville Unit Education Association has ever expressed a desire to have a gun in school.

Fielden said arming civilians in a school opens complications in laws already on the books.

"It's a pretty serious issue to put weapons in school, and the first hurdle you have to get over is (right now) you can't have weapons in school," he said.

That's not a problem for police officers because they are allowed carry them anywhere, including in a school, Fielden said.

"It's a real problem down there, first of all. The problem's genuine; something needs to be done," he said. "I don't know if this is the answer."

Trial moved to June for former Rep. Aaron Schock

By Elvia Malagon
Chicago Tribune

Former U.S. Rep. Aaron Schock is now scheduled to stand trial June 10 in a Chicago federal courthouse after a series of shake-ups brought his corruption case to Chicago from Urbana.

Schock, once considered a rising star in the Republican Party, resigned in 2015. He is accused of using money from his campaign accounts and his House allowance for personal expenses ranging from an extravagant remodeling of his office inspired by the British television show "Downton Abbey" to flying on a private plane for a Chicago Bears game. The federal case has been pending since November 2016 and it was recently reassigned to Chicago.

In August, the case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Matthew Kennelly, who presides in the Northern District of Illinois in Chicago, by the U.S. Court of Appeals, then moved to Chicago. U.S. District Judge Colin Bruce had previously presided over the case in Urbana. Bruce's removal from Schock's case came about a week after he recused himself from an unrelated federal case he presided over. In that case, a woman accused Bruce of exchanging emails with a U.S. attorney's office employee during her trial proceedings.

A new set of prosecutors from Chicago also recently was assigned to the case, according to court records.

During Friday's brief status hearing at the Dirksen U.S. Courthouse, Kennelly vacated the previous Jan. 28, 2019, trial date and set a new one for June 10. Kennelly said he would like to block out one month, but he didn't think the trial should go on for longer than that. "I think that helps everyone focus," Kennelly told attorneys during the hearing.

Schock, of Peoria, did not speak during Friday's hearing and later declined to comment.

One of his attorneys, George Terwilliger, said after the hearing that he expects prosecutors will conduct in "good faith" a review of the case and take a close look at its merits.

Schock's attorneys have tried to get the charges thrown out based on legal technicalities regarding whether prosecutors based their charges on ambiguous House rules, in violation of separation-of-powers clauses in the U.S. Constitution. Schock's defense team is awaiting word on whether the U.S. Supreme Court will accept the team's recently filed petition.

The U.S. Supreme Court typically gets 7,000 to 8,000 petitions a term, but it takes up only about 80 cases, according to the court's website.

Schock's political career began at 19 when he won a write-in campaign to be elected to the Peoria school board. In 2009, he was elected to Congress at age 27, and served until 2015 when he resigned amid allegations that later led to the federal indictment.

He has pleaded not guilty to the federal charges.

Chicago bridge lifts are declining; here's why

CHRIS SWEDA/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A Divvy bicycle rider pedals under the unfinished Navy Pier Flyover in Chicago last week.

Lake Shore Drive to Ashland Avenue. In the spring, the procession of opening bridges goes east.

To see the machinery working up close, there is limited availability to view a lift from under the street this Wednesday morning and on the morning of Nov. 3 at the McCormick Bridgehouse and Chicago River Museum at Michigan Avenue and the river. You can make a reservation for $15 by calling 312-977-0227 or emailing jcoles@chicagoriver.org.

If you do not get a spot during a lift, the museum is still a fun way to learn about the river and the bridge system. The museum is open through Oct. 31.

"Getting Around" recently got to go into the bridge house and watch a lift, and it was like being inside a giant's pocket watch. The process starts with the humming of a small, gray motor with the horsepower of a 1950s Volkswagen Beetle. The bridge, built in 1920, is so well-balanced that it does not need a lot of power to work, said Joshua Coles, director of the Chicago River Museum.

Big, yellow-toothed wheels begin to turn, and Michigan Avenue's bascule bridge tilts up by means of a counterweight and a rack-and-pinion system that pulls up the street to clear the way for tall boats. The term "bascule" is French for seesaw, so it helps to visualize a playground seesaw to understand the way the bridge works. The 12,000-ton counterweight goes down 40 feet as the roadway lifts.

There are a total of 60 moveable bridges in Chicago, more than any place else in North America, though not all are active, McBriarty said. Of Chicago's moveable bridges, 48 are bascule, while the rest are lift or swing bridges, he said.

Under federal law, the city has to maintain the Chicago River as a navigable waterway. Before 1995, the city's Transportation Department had to have enough staff to be able to open 32 of the 37 movable bridges with advance notice of 30 minutes at all times. Sailboats could request bridge lifts at any time.

Beginning in 1995, the U.S. Coast Guard's regulations were revised and the city worked with local boatyards to create the current schedule of lifts, Chicago Department of Transportation spokesman Michael Claffey said. Each Wednesday boat run costs the city about $11,000, while each Saturday run costs about $14,000 due to weekend overtime costs. It takes a crew of abut 30 workers to conduct the runs.

If no boat owners make arrangements to move their boats on a scheduled day, the bridges will not be lifted.

The city is about to lose two of its bascule bridges since it plans to replace the deteriorating spans at Chicago Avenue and Division Street with less expensive fixed bridges. Federal law no longer requires moveable bridges on the North Branch of the river, McBriarity said.

"It used to have to be navigable all the way up to Belmont Avenue," he said.

Along with fewer lifts, there are fewer sailboats on the main stem of the Chicago River because Crowley's Yacht Yard moved from the South Branch to a spot on East 95th Street on the Calumet River in 2005. Owner Grant Crowley said boats destined for his yard had represented up to two-thirds of the traffic along the main branch of the Chicago River.

Crowley said it is just as well that there are fewer sailboats on the Chicago River, since there is much more recreational traffic than there used to be with tour boats, motorboats and kayaks. He noted that the river is much less polluted than when his yard started in 1978 and more suited for recreation.

"There are all these new uses, which are doing great things for Chicago," said Crowley, who is on the Friends of the Chicago River board.

Navy Pier Flyover could be partly done this year

Chicago could have a partly completed Navy Pier Flyover as a Christmas present.

A spokesman for the Chicago Department of Transportation said that by the end of the year, part of the long-awaited bike and pedestrian path will be open over Grand Avenue and Illinois Street and the Ogden Slip, a narrow body of water south of Illinois and north of the Chicago River. The city recently received its first shipment of structural steel for the project and crews are expected to start installing the steel spine in mid-October, said CDOT's Michael Claffey.

"This will eliminate the at-grade crossing at Grand and Illinois and make the Lakefront Trail easier and safer for all users," Claffey said.

It has been a long time coming. The pedestrian and bicycle bridge, which will stretch from the Ohio Street Beach to the south side of the Chicago River, was started in 2014 after more than a decade of planning. The city had originally predicted that the whole thing would be finished this year, but it has been delayed by the need for extensive repairs to the Depression-era Lake Shore Drive bridge over the river.

The total cost of the flyover is expected to exceed the previously announced cost of $60 million. A new figure is not yet available because a contract has not been bid for the final third of the project.

The flyover is intended to eliminate a crash-prone bottleneck at the center of the busy 18.5-mile trail. Bikes and pedestrians currently crowd together on dark, narrow sidewalks on Lower Lake Shore Drive.

A collision there this summer with a rented quadcycle sent a bike commuter into traffic on Lower Lake Shore Drive. Cyclist Aaron Duncan said he was able to escape with a cracked bike helmet and a hand injury, narrowly avoiding getting hit by a car. A child on the quadracycle also suffered a minor injury.

"I get really nervous going down there now and I still have to do it almost every day," said Duncan, who works as a network administrator for the WBEZ radio station at Navy Pier. "Especially in the summer, it is jammed with pedestrians and tourists and bicycles. It's a real nightmare."

The planned 16-foot-wide, 1,750-foot-long steel-and-concrete flyover bridge will take the Lakefront Trail over the river, Grand and Illinois. The second phase of the project will run the completed portion all the way from Jane Addams Park south to connect by way of a temporary bridge to the existing Trail on the lower level of Lake Shore Drive north of the Chicago River bridge.

The third phase will widen the Lakefront Trail along the east side of the bridge from the north side of the river down into Grant Park — that portion of the trail is supposed to be completed next year.

Though the flyover has still not been used, shallow cracks have appeared on the underside, which can be viewed from the sidewalk between Grand and Illinois. Claffey said these are thermal cracks and nothing to worry about.

"It's not unusual to see them in concrete," said Claffey. "They form due to temperature fluctuations, and they are not an indication of any structural weakness."

Transportation song quiz

Last week's song is an inspiration to political hacks everywhere.

"I thought so little/ They rewarded me/ By making me the ruler of the Queen's Navee." The song is "When I Was a Lad," or "Sir Joseph Porter's Song" by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Linda Musial of Mount Prospect was the winner.

This week's song takes its title from a New York City bridge, but the bridge is not mentioned in the lyrics. What's the song, and who wrote it? The first person with the right answer gets a Tribune billfold, and glory.

*If you believe your only options are agonizing knee pain or surgery... You are WRONG!

Thousands of Chicagoland Boomers and Seniors are now getting knee pain RELIEF, INSTEAD of knee replacement.

It turns out, the secret of enjoying the "golden years" is NOT simply having a giant nest egg for retirement Why?

Recent research showed that Baby Boomers and seniors who lead an active lifestyle during retirement, and continue doing the things they truly enjoy, free of pain, ARE happier, regardless of income level or wealth.

And truth be told, people who don't have their mobility to enjoy their favorite activities at that age, all the money in the world won't bring true happiness.

We know this because we hear people say this over and over again at the Joint Relief Institute in Orland Park. Comments like this . . .

"I didn't know how much LIFE and SLEEP I was missing because of my knee pain, until it went away with this wonderful treatment."

— George R.

You know how it is . . .

You start to recognize your knee is hurting, and you try pain medicines, braces, or different over-the-counter arthritis supplements. Soon enough, you realize they either cause lots of side effects, or they fail to live up to their promise of fast, long-lasting relief, and are not worth the price of the bottle they come in.

And BECAUSE you'd prefer NOT to go under the knife . . .

And can't afford to be put in bed for several weeks, and because you know people who still hurt EVEN after surgery . . . you give up, and learn to live with the pain. BUT, you miss out on things you enjoy doing, and lose your golden years one activity at a time.

With less activity, comes weight gain, and depression . . . Yes, you can put up with this ache in your knee, but the cost of doing nothing about it is HUGE. You are not doing yourself a favor by "toughing it out."

"Six months later, I found out the one thing between me and losing 20 lbs, WAS my knee pain"

— Mary T.

"Every day was hard. I couldn't enjoy my favorite activities anymore. But thankfully, now I'm back in full form. I am doing yard work for the first time in years!"

— Phil M.

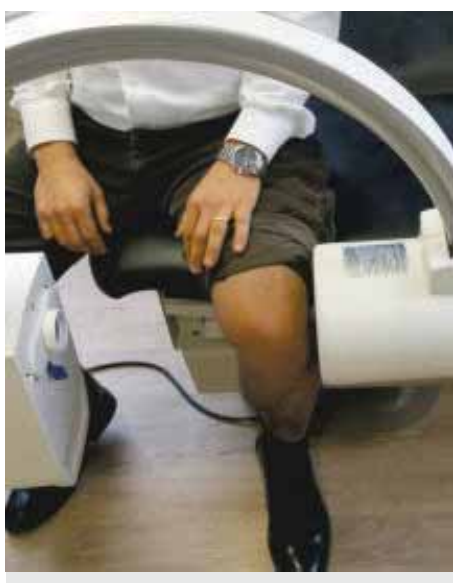
What are my options if I don't want to undergo surgery?

Today we live in an age with tremendous technology advances, and that's what Joint Relief Institute doctors use to put new life and energy into failing knee joints.

Using precise, advanced imaging, they gently place an all natural joint lubricant directly inside your knee to replace the lost fluid that's causing your pain. This treatment has proven to have a very high rate of success.

However, it HAS to be done right with advanced imaging . . .

A recent study examined trained



Advanced Digital technology is used to eliminate a HUGE percentage of treatment failures. Every treatment at Joint Relief Institute is pin-pointed to the damaged area inside the knee. The doctors see the medication live as it goes to help the troubled joint.

doctors and surgeons who attempted these injections without using advanced imaging. Instead, they simply felt the knee with their fingers and BLINDLY delivered the replacement fluid.

The study revealed that these doctors missed the target most of the time . . . In fact, 30% of the time, they didn't even

Alternative to the knife for your knee pain? Non-Surgical treatment success rate soars after using new digital technology place the treatment inside the joint. Yes THIRTY percent. It is not a typo.

Even after missing the target, they had no way of knowing they missed, because they are not SEEING it with advanced imaging.

That means these patients went away thinking they had received a life-changing treatment, and, in fact, did not get any benefit at all. Even worse, many of them went on to have surgery they didn't need.

How did Joint Relief Institute find the Antidote to this MISERABLE failure . . .

The doctors at the Joint Relief Institute are trained in using cutting-edge low dose motion digital imaging. These highly skilled, Board Certified doctors are able to see into the knee joint. They actually watch the medicine, live, as it goes where it needs to be. This technology is so precise, so advanced, and so forefront that it was able to make a whole difference in Non-surgical treatments.

"We've had so many patients tell us they RECEIVED treatments like Synvisc or Orthovisc in the past, and it didn't work. So they were considering surgery, and some even had surgery scheduled. Luckily, we were able to save many of those people from the knife." Said Dr Mike Hana at the Joint Relief Institute.

Joint Relief Institute's proven accuracy and effective treatment is why people are traveling hundreds of miles to get knee pain treatment from their Doctors.

Why did Knee treatments from Joint Relief Institute become the talk of the town?

Many seniors walk out feeling better than they have in years! So as you might imagine, when their friends see them move easier, walk further, sleep better and are happier, they want it also.

Only days after this treatment, people usually notice a decrease in: Pain... Stiffness...Muscle weakness... Swelling... Locked joints... Reduced range of motion... and Cracking sounds.

Most patients who receive the treatment are able to live pain free for up to 6 months, and some even get relief for 3-5 years with NO additional treatments.

How does the treatment help relieve your joint pain...

It's pretty simple, really. You see, when you're young, you have a thick, fluid protein inside your knee joints to lubricate them as you move.

This fluid also acts as a cushion and shock absorber inside your knee. It's called synovial fluid, and it works much like the oil in a car's engine to keep all the parts moving freely, without friction.

However, as you age, this fluid dries out, leaving your bones to painfully rub and grind against each other with every step. And unfortunately, there's no way for the joint to make more.

After years of trusted service in moving you everywhere you need to go, you start to feel a subtle ache in your knees with certain activities like kneeling down, or getting out of the car. With time, it becomes a constant ache. If left untreated, it can keep you awake at night, and hurt with every step.

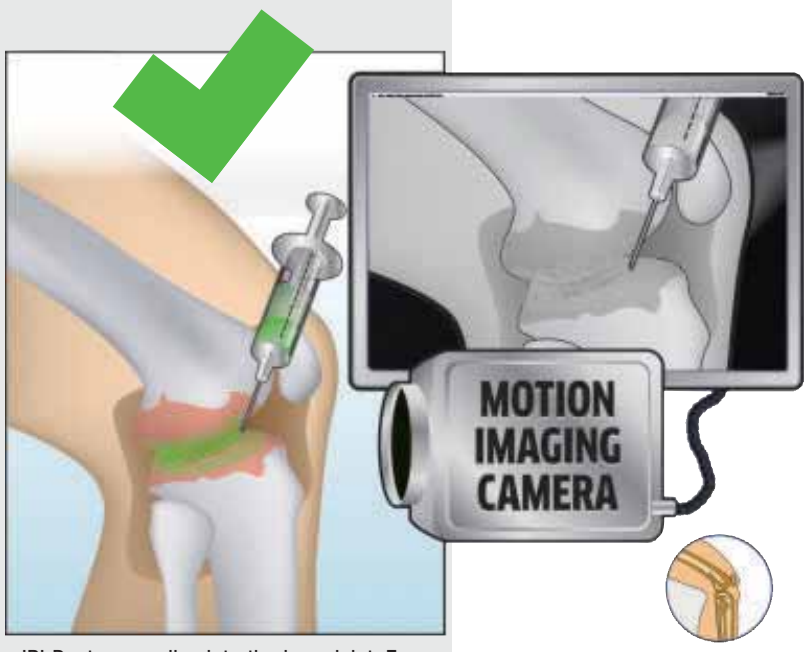
The good news is, researchers discovered an almost identical, all natural lubricating fluid called Hyaluronic acid. It has been proven in numerous clinical studies to act as a natural lubricant in your joints.

It's FDA approved and is a perfect cushion and shock absorber for your joints. Once it's correctly placed inside your knee, it can make them feel just like new again, eliminate any rubbing and friction, and make your joints glide smoothly.

Are there any side effects to this treatment? Is the treatment painful?

After numbing the skin with a special spray, Joint Relief's imaging technology makes this treatment virtually painless. And because you are getting a supplement for a protein we are all born having, there are NO known after effects.

If you received this kind of treatment in the past, and it didn't relieve your pain, there is a BIG chance the medication landed somewhere around, but not INSIDE, the joint where it can't help you.



JRI Doctors see live into the knee joint. Even you will be able to tell the medicine went where it needs to be. No guess work, no poking around, the medicine cushion lubricate and help heal the damaged knee.

© 2015 Joint Relief Institute.

That is right, this is a quick, natural long-lasting, non-invasive, non-surgical treatment with NO known side effects...

Is it true this natural treatment costs NOTHING?...

Yes, more good news, besides the pain relief, is that because this non-surgical program has already proven to help thousands of seniors, Medicare and other insurance plans DO cover the full cost of the treatment.

So there is very likely NO COST to you for this life-changing treatment.

Here is what you need to do if you or a loved one is suffering with knee pain…

Call now for a free screening...

If you or a loved one is suffering with knee pain, this could be the blessed relief you're looking for. You are personally invited to a FREE knee pain screening from the Joint Relief Institute doctors to see if you are a good candidate for this all-natural, highly-precise treatment.

Due to high demand, they can only offer a limited number of FREE screens every month. So if you're interested, Call now (708) 914-5145.

Waiting will not help you feel better...

This ache in your knees could be a sign of serious damage and people who choose to simply "tough it out" will definitely see their knees deteriorate further over time. The one thing we know is: The damage will NEVER undo itself without some help.

Your screening will only take about 20-30 minutes of your time, as one of their doctors sits down with you and answers all the questions you have about your knees.

On the day of your treatment, you'll be able to come in on your own, and be done within 30 minutes or less. No pain. No problem driving yourself home. ■

Will women's wave affect 14th District?

no one has come and tried to engage them, try to talk with them and to try to hear from folks directly. That is what we're doing."

During a year when the #MeToo movement and women's issues have risen to a prominent place in advance of the midterm elections, Underwood is hoping her campaign resonates with progressives and enough centrist Republicans upset with President Donald Trump. Her energetic campaign is trying to make headway in territory that has been reliably conservative: suburban families, small towns and agricultural areas where 87 percent of residents are white, according to U.S. census data.

While the neighboring 6th Congressional District — the site of a heated tussle between incumbent Rep. Peter Roskam and Democratic challenger Sean Casten — has drawn most of the attention and millions of dollars in contributions from national sources, the 14th District campaign has emerged on Democrats' radar screen.

Last week, the House Majority PAC aligned with House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi announced it was spending $887,000 on a television commercial targeting Hultgren. The group Women Vote!, associated with pro-choice Emily's List also contributed about $135,000 into the race in the last week of September for pro-Underwood and anti-Hultgren advertisements and mailers.

Hultgren said he knows he's in for a battle.

"It's going to be close," he said. "I think whoever is going to motivate their base more is going to do well. ... I'm hopeful, but obviously I'll be worried until the polls close."

The golf course meeting spot where Underwood met and posed for pictures with voters is in the heart of McHenry County, territory that has been a dominant area of support for Hultgren.

The county delivered more than 60,000 votes for the Republican in his 19-point re-election victory in 2016. Hultgren paired his domination in McHenry with a big win in Kane, the counties with the most total voters. The margin two years ago was closer in Lake and Will counties, where Hultgren won by only a margin of a few thousand votes. And though only a small part of DuPage County is in the 14th District, voters there voted for Democrat Jim Walz over Hultgren, the only county he lost in that election.

When most of the collar counties backed Barack Obama in 2012, McHenry and Kendall counties both voted for Mitt Romney. Trump won McHenry County by 8 points, while he and Hillary Clinton virtually tied in Kendall, with the president winning by fewer than 100 votes.

The mood in the country in the Trump era has played a role in Underwood's run for Congress. The Women's March held in the days after Trump's inauguration, Underwood said, helped boost her desire to run for political office for the first time.

"Millions of women stepped forward and said, 'We want some changes. We are here. We are not going to tolerate this sexist, vulgar president who is smearing and disrespecting women every day. We have some policy goals as women that we support on a nonpartisan basis,'" Underwood said.

STEVEN ROSENBERG/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

U.S. Rep. Randy Hultgren, a Republican, has represented the 14th District since 2011.

The candidate directly addressed gender again in a post on Twitter last Monday, referring to the Senate's confirmation hearings for Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh.

"This has been an emotional week for a lot of us. Use that energy to send a message and elect this community's first-EVER female representative," Underwood wrote.

A record number of women — 234 total, 182 Democrats and 52 Republicans — are running for House seats, according to the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University.

On the campaign trail, Underwood says it is gender, more than race, that has bubbled to the surface.

"I thought that I would experience racism in running for Congress. I was ready for it. I was steeled against it. And (I) did not and have not encountered racism. Sexism and misogyny have been so apparent. I had not experienced that in my career, because I had spent my career in this female-dominated profession. ... That has been something that I didn't expect. That has been something where I've had to adapt to, to learn to overcome."

Voters sometimes challenge her on policy positions, she said, intimating that her views carry less weight because she isn't married and doesn't have children. Men have occasionally tried to physically intimidate her, she said, by standing close to her or hovering over her during interactions at campaign events.

"This is what sexism looks like," Underwood said she told herself, "this is what it feels like."

Cathy Johnson, a precinct committeewoman for McHenry County Democrats, said Underwood has injected a new energy into the campaign, something she hopes builds momentum for her candidacy.

"We haven't always had good candidates who have been impressive, so people have been stuck voting for Republicans," Johnson said. "People around here used to be afraid of telling people they were Democrats, afraid their signs would be torn down. Now they're excited."

The views were decidedly different at a recent GOP fall rally in Geneva, where about 100 people gathered on a hot September afternoon to hear from Gov. Bruce Rauner, attorney general candidate Erika Harold and a panel of regional candidates at the Kane County gathering. Hultgren was on hand, shaking hands and speaking with voters.

As the party faithful munched on hot dogs and chips, the local Republican leaders scoffed at the notion that Democrats such as Underwood are primed for a series of wins across the country, including in their territory.

"Have you heard about the blue wave? You're going to feel blue as you wave goodbye to your paycheck," said Bob Grogan, a state central committeeman, as laughter rippled through the right field pavilion at the Kane County Cougars' ballpark.

Republicans pointed to a robust economy and concerns about taxes, which they said will boost their chances in November.

Stan Bond, a Republican state central committeeman and village trustee in Montgomery, south of Aurora, believes that pocketbook issues are at the forefront of voters' minds. If people are feeling good about the economy and the jobs situation, Bond said, "then they're not going to move away from someone for someone else they don't know."

Bond said he's worried about a move toward more socialized medicine, too many taxes and the role that state politics will have on the federal elections.

"I'm not a big fan of the government doing something the private sector can do," Bond said. Bond said he wants to offer "a helping hand, not a handout" and doesn't want lawmakers to delay solving today's financial problems, leaving them for future generations to resolve.

"We have to worry about going into a death spiral because of taxes," Bond said.

For Elsie Campbell Morrissey of Sandwich, who wore a Hultgren T-shirt to the rally, Underwood is too much of a one-note candidate, ultra-focused on health care at the expense of other issues.

"I'm worried his opponent is about big government health care," Morrissey said. "There's more issues out there that affect the people of the 14th District. ... Randy is worthy of winning."

And Republicans need to maintain control of the House, Morrissey said, to avoid potential impeachment proceedings against Trump.

"If we impeach Trump, well, we lose the impact of the Trump economy," she said. "I think there's so much more to governing a country than just being hateful, and I don't think the Democrats understand that. I think they think that if they hate Trump, they are doing something good for the country. And I say, look at what the man is doing despite all the hate."

Kane County voters, however, turned away Trump during the last election, voting for Clinton by a margin of 10 points. A slice of the 14th District is in eastern DeKalb County, which also voted for Clinton, and northern and western Lake County, another area that backed the Democrat two years ago. Hultgren, however, won more than 60 percent of the vote in DeKalb in 2016 and 56 percent in Lake.

At the golf club event in Huntley, Diane Ayers said she believes the district is slowly changing, turning from reliably red to "lavender." Ayers has lived in Huntley for more than two decades, and she said there's a palpable sense of excitement among local Democrats.

"I haven't seen as much enthusiasm in the last 26 years as I've seen in the last year and a half," Ayers said. "I think Lauren is articulate and very passionate person, and that's exactly what we need."

Suburban Halloween decoration draws concerns of racism

By Zak Koeske
Daily Southtown

A bound dummy hanging from a tree in Lansing set off a social media firestorm last month after black passers-by noted its resemblance to a lynching victim and streamed video of the dangling corpse on Facebook.

Police quickly concluded that the suspended mannequin — whose head was covered with a black garbage bag — was actually a Halloween decoration not a racially tinged threat.

An incident like this is the type of issue that the village's newly formed Human Relations Commission could attempt to address, village spokesman Ken Reynolds said.

Trying to meet the challenges that have come with the community's changing demographics, Lansing recently appointed the commission to "create cultural competency and improve intergroup relations."

Lansing is a formerly white-majority community that has experienced a major demographic shift in the last 20 years. About half of the community's population is now minority, officials said.

The diverse nine-member commission — which was appointed last month, but has yet to hold a meeting — will be tasked with ensuring that new residents feel safe and welcome in Lansing, and with encouraging them to get involved in the community.

"To have a representative group that's diverse be able to be available to the public to give them information on how to get involved, to help them and address issues of concern in their neighborhoods, that's the doctrine for why the HRC was formed," Reynolds said.

The village attracted national attention just a year ago after cell phone video of a white village cop threatening and restraining a black teen in his yard went viral.

In that case, Lansing officials worked for months with a Department of Justice mediator and community groups, including the South Suburban branch of the NAACP, to develop a memorandum of understanding intended to increase community trust and cooperation with the police department.

While Reynolds said he considers the recent Halloween decoration controversy "completely different" than last year's policing incident — the village recently settled a lawsuit brought by the 15-year-old boy's family for $70,000 —he understands why people might draw connections between them.

"They both fall under that kind of general umbrella of acceptance, tolerance, and so forth," he said.

In a rapidly changing community like Lansing, where the percentage of black and Hispanic residents has tripled since 2000, cultural misunderstandings — as the hanging dummy appears to have been — can occur, NAACP member Mark Kuehner said.

Edith Morales, the homeowner whose husband hung the dummy, called the episode "a big misunderstanding" and said there was no racial intent behind her decoration.

"I just wanted to scare people, that's it," said Morales, whose yard is littered with humanlike corpses and other Halloween trimmings. "I just wanted to have a good time, go all out on Halloween. That was just about it."

The dummy had initially been fitted with a white "Jason-style" mask of the sort worn by the killer in the "Friday the 13th" horror film franchise, Morales said. But when the mask disappeared a short time after the corpse was hung — presumably lifted by kids who passed the display — the black head underneath posed a chilling sight for some residents.

"I knew it was just going to take one person to see it and it was going to turn into what it turned into," said Pam Peeples, the Morales' next-door neighbor, who is black.

Peeples said that prior to the controversy she told her husband, who is friendly with Edith Morales' husband, to warn him that the display could easily be misinterpreted.

"I told him to say something," Peeples said. "And he said when he saw (Morales) he would, but he hadn't seen him in passing. And before he could get a chance, (the controversy) happened."

Peeples defended the Morales family, but said they should have known better than to allow such a decoration to hang in a community with a growing black population.

Edith Morales estimated the dummy's head had been exposed for about two days before the controversy erupted, but said she had not been approached by anyone who said they found the display offensive during that time.

She and her husband had discussed replacing the mask, Morales said, but had been preoccupied tending to their young children and hadn't gotten around to doing so.

She said she didn't initially realize the unmasked dummy would offend residents, but that after the potential racial implications were explained to her, she understood why some had taken offense.

Morales said she wished someone had simply told her they found the display offensive, because she would have gladly taken it down. When a roiled crowd gathered outside her home to stream video of the dangling dummy, however, she grew defensive and contacted police.

"All I saw was about 15 people, they were all on Facebook Live and they were yelling at me, 'Take it down, take it down, why don't you take it down?'" she said.

Lansing police soon arrived to cut down the dummy and later released a statement saying its investigation of the incident "revealed no malicious intent."

But the village's attempt to diffuse the situation didn't prevent the Morales family from becoming the target of Facebook commenters who threatened to harm them.

Morales, who is Hispanic, said she regretted allowing the dummy to hang after its mask had been taken, but also felt hurt that others had jumped to conclusions about her intent.

Peeples said she hoped the uproar over her neighbor's display would compel residents to more carefully consider the implications of their Halloween decorations.

Despite the incident, Peoples said she enjoys living in Lansing.

"I do genuinely care about my neighbors," she said. "I do feel comfortable...My kids get a good education, they get to enjoy being children . . ."

Kuehner said he believed the misunderstanding had created "a real opportunity" to increase awareness and understanding of racial issues in Lansing and to deal with some possible tensions that he said exist "right below the surface."

Reynolds said it was difficult to strike the right balance when communicating information about controversial issues to a diverse community, but that he envisioned the Human Relations Commission as the vehicle through which such conversations could occur. "I think in the case of making sure our residents and anyone involved in our village are aware of cultural norms of others, that's something we'd want our HRC to take on," he said.

not arrive at the hospital until more than two weeks after her daughter was shot.

By that time, evidence was long gone. The car was broken into while it sat parked in Chicago. A window shattered in the shooting had been replaced. The recollections of the other people in the car were no longer fresh. No one is in custody.

The Tribune is examining that first weekend of August, hoping to shed light on the challenges authorities face in solving crime, as well as the impact unsolved shootings may have on the city's ongoing cycle of violence. The Police Department's record for solving shootings that are not fatal is dismal: 6.5 percent so far in 2018 and 7.2 percent for all of 2017.

In Williams' shooting, the department refused to make detectives on the case or their commander available to discuss their progress. A police spokesman said the delay did not have a significant impact and investigators have "gathered crucial details."

Several experts said such a delay in starting an investigation puts detectives at a disadvantage. "The more time that passes, the trail cools off substantially," said Hector Rodriguez, a retired Chicago police commander who once headed a detective division on the West Side.

Lachaka Hobson helps daughter Chamira Williams walk at her home in Danville last month. She was shot in Chicago after leaving a house party.

'She's hit'

Williams lives in Danville, where she works as a certified nursing assistant and has a 4-year-old son. She drove to Chicago that weekend to go to a party with her best friend and her boyfriend.

After spending the evening having drinks and dancing at a house party, the group decided to head home. It had been a great night, Williams recalled, the kind you want to keep going. They left the party in two cars and stopped near Western Avenue and Jackson Boulevard to drop off someone from the second car. Shots rang out.

Williams, in the backseat with her boyfriend, remembers hearing the gunfire and feeling a vibration in her side. The last thing she can recall is the voice of her boyfriend.

"She's hit," he said.

Williams' friend drove to Stroger, less than 10 minutes away, and she was admitted at 12:15 a.m. on Aug. 5, according to police reports.

She arrived during one of the most violent outbursts of the violent weekend. Between midnight and 7 a.m. that day, dozens of people were shot around the city and at least 12 of them were taken to Stroger. Hobson said she watched from a waiting room as harried medical personnel worked to save patients.

"Every five minutes, every 10 minutes, you've got a body coming in. Somebody else has been shot. Family members started to come in," she said. "I know what I am going through and I know what they are going through. Just to see the amount of young kids coming in here. My heart. ... All I could think about is my child."

The shooting damaged her daughter's liver, kidney and spine, leaving her unable to walk. She underwent surgeries and was initially on a breathing machine and spent about a week in intensive care, the family said.

Williams, shown at home with her 4-year-old son, A'mauri, works as a certified nursing assistant and plans to go to nursing school.

In the days that followed, Hobson was filling out paperwork for the hospital when she realized there was no police report. Curious, she stopped two detectives at Stroger on another case and asked them why. "What was the protocol for gunshot victims?" she said she asked. "Because my daughter is a victim of a gunshot wound."

The detectives took her name and called back later that night to tell her that her daughter was not in the department's system, Hobson said. Hobson said she searched online for Chicago police phone numbers and called three districts to ask if anyone wanted to speak to her daughter. She got the same answer: No one could find Chamira Williams in the system.

"I said, 'Well she's at the hospital. She's in Trauma 5. I know she was shot because of where I am right now,'" Hobson said. "'Call this number. Call that number.' They never once said, 'Well, let me take your statement now and send somebody there.'"

Police spokesman Anthony Guglielmi said the department has launched an investigation to see whether any officers failed to respond to Hobson's calls.

Department records show that, on the night of the shooting, Harrison District officers responded to a call of shots near where Williams was shot. But when they arrived, they couldn't find any victim, Guglielmi said.

Asked why her friend or boyfriend didn't call 911, Williams said she believes they were overwhelmed by the shooting and focused on getting to the hospital.

Guglielmi said the Harrison District was eventually notified about a victim at Stroger Hospital, and the case was assigned to detectives.

A police report dated Aug. 21 states, "Responding officer was supplied with information that victim was shot on 05AUG18 and was still at Stroger Hospital. Responding officer was to determine if incident was documented. ... Responding officer spoke to ER staff and learned above victim was a walk-in gunshot victim."

Williams said she first spoke with officers as she was preparing to transfer to Schwab Rehabilitation Hospital, where she would remain for nearly two months recovering from nerve damage.

Evidence lost

Williams said she wasn't able to tell detectives much. She said she doesn't recall a confrontation or other problems on the block before she was shot. The detective pushed for more details, saying the hospital staff had told him she was alert when she came to the hospital.

Later that evening her mother was back in Danville, sitting on the front porch when a police car from town pulled up. They needed to see a car involved in the shooting, the officer told Hobson. But by then, the car had been broken into on Ogden Avenue, where it was parked near the hospital earlier that month, Hobson said. The family drove it back to Danville and replaced a rear passenger window that was shattered by the gunfire.

Since being notified of the shooting, detectives have also interviewed Williams' boyfriend and reviewed city and private surveillance cameras. "While the delay in reporting is not ideal, detectives have ... gathered crucial details," a statement from the department read.

Michigan State University criminal justice professor David Carter, who has studied clearance rates, said a delay in reporting shootings is unusual but happens more often than the public realizes. When it does, it presents "a significant hurdle."

In this case, Carter said it is likely any forensic evidence in the car has been contaminated. Also, witness memory might not be as solid with the passage of time.

"In short, it makes the investigation tougher but not impossible," Carter said in an emailed response to questions. "It is a greater challenge for the prosecution of the case because forensic evidence can be very influential for convincing a jury to meet the burden of proof — proof beyond a reasonable doubt."

'Why wouldn't I tell you?'

But Williams said she believes police can still make a good effort to solve the case even with the delay. A more nagging concern is whether police believed her when she said she doesn't know why someone fired at her car. "Why would you think I wouldn't tell you?" she said, fighting tears.

"This whole situation was unfair to me," she said in a hesitant, low voice. "I am not involved with anything that's going on. I don't want to come off as egotistical, but I am a good person. I love to help people. I'm a CNA myself. I take care of people. Everything happens for a reason. But I don't feel that bullet was meant for me."

After a tiring but productive recovery, Williams was discharged Sept. 20 from the rehab center, where she often found solace on a rooftop garden with a koi pond, lush garden and sweeping views of the city.

She struggled to walk at first, even while leaning on support bars, but she recently pushed herself to move 180 feet on her own, with an assistant standing by.

Her immediate plan is to get back to Danville and enroll in nursing school. "It was meant for me to kinda grow, to figure out what He really has in store for me," she said, gesturing her hands upward. "That is why I am still here. He has a higher calling for my life, and I am not going to let this deter me from that."

2-year-old killed, 18-year-old wounded on Northwest Side

Gunshots fired into crowd after fight spills into alley in Hermosa

By Hannah Leone and Elyssa Cherney
Chicago Tribune

The Hermosa neighborhood fell silent early Sunday in the hours after an overnight shooting during a fight killed a 2-year-old boy.

Identified as Julien Gonzalez by the Cook County medical examiner, the young boy lived in the Southwest Side's Clearing neighborhood, in the 5500 block of West 63rd Place. He was on the sidewalk with an 18-year-old man just after 10:15 p.m. Saturday near the mouth of an alley off the 2200 block of North Kilbourn Avenue, police said.

A fight spilled out into the alley between Kilbourn and Kenneth Avenue from a party inside a house on Kilbourn, said Sgt. Al Stinites, a police spokesman.

Someone north of the fight shot at the crowd, hitting the 18-year-old in his left leg and the 2-year-old in the neck, Stinites said. Two females had been fighting in the alley when the shots were fired, police said.

The 18-year-old was taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center, where he was treated and released. The child was taken to Stroger Hospital, where he died about 20 minutes before midnight. The teen also did not live in the neighborhood, a source said.

The man wounded did not have documented gang affiliation, but some people at the house party were Maniac Latin Disciples, according to a police source. In the alley, members of the YLO, or Young Latino Organization, Disciples, reportedly got involved, and one of them started shooting a 9 mm pistol that had a laser sight, the source said.

Police found 10 shell casings. North of the alley where the shooting took place, yellow police tape closed Belden Avenue between the two streets.

A small group gathered outside Stroger, standing outside the emergency room and sitting on the sidewalk with their backs against the building's wall.

The corner of Belden and Kilbourn is a known area for gang graffiti, but crews work to remove within 24 hours, said Ald. Gilbert Villegas, 36th.

"It's a little hot with some of the gangbangers ... but we've been attacking it, and police have been taking a lot of guns off the street," Villegas said.

Detectives were investigating whether someone tipped off gang members about the fight that had spilled into an open area, Villegas said. The man who was injured was from the South Side, and a rival gang may have notified a local faction that someone was visiting the area, he said. One of the women who was in the fight appeared to be with him, Villegas said.

The parents appeared to be with the 2-year-old, but Villegas said he has not spoken with them.

"As a father of two boys, I can't even imagine this happening and seeing your child get shot in the neck," he said. "That's insane and very frustrating. This is the first murder that's occurred in Hermosa (in 2018) and we've been very vigilant and very good at calling police ... but one murder is too many."

Police on Monday will hold an outdoor roll call at the site of the crime scene to encourage people to come forward with information about the gunman. The roll call will be at 6 p.m. at the corner of Kilbourn and Belden.

Area North detectives were investigating, but police had no one in custody.

North Central College report shows 6 sex assaults in 2017

By Suzanne Baker

Both women were somewhat surprised to hear six people were victims of a rape at North Central College in 2017, according to the data included in the Naperville school's Annual Security and Fire Safety Report released this week.

The 2017 report shows five incidents were reported in the Naperville campus' residence halls and one was on "non-campus" property, which is defined as property either owned or leased by the college that is not contiguous to the main campus.

All colleges and university that participate in federal financial aid programs are required by law, known as the Clery Act, to publish crime statistics occurring on or near their campuses in an annual security report. North Central College's report was released Monday.

Roughly 200 graduate students and 2,770 undergraduates, 54 percent of whom are women and 46 percent are men, attend the school located just east of downtown Naperville.

The number of reported rapes at North Central in 2017 was higher than the four reported in 2016, two in 2015 and three in 2014.

The city of Naperville has seen a similar rise.

Statistics from the FBI's Uniform Crime Reporting program shows the number of rapes increased from eight in 2014 to 14 in 2015, 15 in 2016 and 22 in 2017. The population increased by less than 2,500 during that time.

Dating violence and reports of stalking at North Central College also showed a small increase in 2017 compared to previous years.

The 2017 report shows six cases of dating violence occurring either on campus or in dorms and one case on public property, such as sidewalks or streets around campus. That is up from four incidents in 2016 and three in 2015.

Four incidents of stalking on campus were recorded in 2017, up one from the three in 2016 and two in 2015.

While the report shows no case of the sexual offense of forcible fondling occurring in 2017, three incidents were recorded in 2014 and in 2015, and one in 2016.

The National Sexual Violence Resource Center reports more than 90 percent of sexual assault victims on college campuses do not report the assault, and one in five women and one in 16 men are sexually assaulted while in college.

As court leans, uncertainty looms ber elections. Key House Democrats have said they would investigate Kavanaugh.

In the meantime, the focus will be on the new court majority's willingness to take on controversial issues.

A potential early test are two cases involving state efforts to strip public money from Planned Parenthood. The justices are considering appeals from Kansas and Louisiana. Lower courts have blocked the states from going forward. The court could announce Tuesday that it has rejected the appeals, if the justices voted that way in their private conference Friday. But they also could defer action to allow Kavanaugh to weigh in.

It is far from certain that the court will move precipitously on this or any high-profile issue. "It's not going to be lost on anyone on the court that everybody is going to be watching the new court to see which issues they engage in," said Paul Clement, solicitor general under President George W. Bush.

The justices could look for cases that are more likely to produce consensus, including those about privacy protections in the digital age, Clement said.

Some contentious issues, though, will be harder to avoid because federal law compels the court's involvement. In coming months, the issue of drawing political districts for partisan advantage will return to the court in a case from North Carolina. Last term, the justices failed to set limits on the practice known as partisan gerrymandering in cases from Maryland and Wisconsin. Kennedy was seen as the conservative justice most likely to side with liberals on the issue. His retirement dimmed the hopes of proponents of such limits.

New state restrictions on abortion could make their way to the Supreme Court soon, along with challenges to the Affordable Care Act and protection from deportation for young immigrants.

The leader of an anti-abortion group that supported Kavanaugh foreshadowed the fight to come in a statement issued just after the confirmation vote.

"Judge Kavanaugh's distinguished judicial career has been built upon his constitutionalist approach to law, and we trust that this will serve all Americans well when Roe v. Wade inevitably comes before the Supreme Court for review," said Catherine Glenn Foster, president of Americans United for Life, referring to the court's landmark 1973 abortion rights ruling.

Kavanaugh's arrival on the court after the most tumultuous confirmation battle since Clarence Thomas faced allegations of sexual harassment by Anita Hill in 1991 hardens the alignment of party and ideology: five conservatives appointed by Republican presidents and four liberals by Democrats. That was true with Kennedy on the bench, but he voted with the liberals in cases that preserved abortion rights and affirmative action, expanded LGBT rights and limited capital punishment.

Two of those liberal justices, speaking Friday at Princeton University, talked about the court's legitimacy, without mentioning their new colleague.

"Every single one of us needs to realize how precious the court's legitimacy is. You know we don't have an army. We don't have any money. The only way we can get people to do what we think they should do is because people respect us," Justice Elena Kagan said.

Justice Sonia Sotomayor said the nine justices recognize the small world they inhabit, suggesting that the tense atmosphere surrounding Kavanaugh's nomination is unlikely to be replicated on the court.

"We have to rise above partisanship in our personal relationships. We have to treat each with respect and dignity and a sense of amicability that the rest of the world doesn't always share," Sotomayor said.

Chief Justice John Roberts has been especially sensitive to portrayals of the court as a political institution. That perception has waxed and waned over the years, but it was particularly strong following the Bush v. Gore decision that sealed Bush's 2000 election.

In stressing Kavanaugh's frequent agreement with Judge Merrick Garland on the federal appeals court in Washington, the new justice's backers seem to be suggesting that Kavanaugh's vote cannot be taken for granted.

"I saw him rule in favor of liberal parties. I saw him rule in favor of criminal defendants who were unsympathetic. For 12 years, I saw him rule where the law led and I expect him to do the same on the Supreme Court," said Justin Walker, a University of Louisville law professor and former Kavanaugh law clerk.

But the more widely held expectation among court watchers is that Roberts, who joined with the liberal justices to uphold President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, will determine how far and fast the court moves.

For Wydra, the new role for Roberts underscores the court's shift to the right. "I guess he is now the new center, which is rather frightening considering how conservative he is," she said.

JOSE LUIS MAGANA/GETTY-AFP

The battle over Brett Kavanaugh's confirmation could continue if Democrats take control of the House.

20 killed after limo runs stop sign

By Michael Hill and John Kekis
Associated Press

Emergency personnel respond to the scene of a deadly limousine crash in Schoharie, N.Y., in which 20 people were killed.

HANS PENNINK/AP

HANS PENNINK/AP

Recovery crews remove debris from the crash scene Sunday.

SCHOHARIE, N.Y. — A limousine loaded with revelers bound for a 30th birthday celebration blew through a stop sign at the end of a highway and slammed into a parked SUV outside a store, killing all 18 people in the limo and two pedestrians in the deadliest U.S. transportation accident in nearly a decade, officials said Sunday.

The collision turned a relaxed Saturday afternoon into chaos at an upstate New York spot popular with tourists taking in the fall foliage. Relatives said the limousine was carrying four sisters and their friends to a birthday celebration for the youngest.

"They did the responsible thing getting a limo so they wouldn't have to drive anywhere," their aunt Barbara Douglas told reporters Sunday. She said three of the sisters were with their husbands and identified them as Amy and Axel Steenburg, Abigail and Adam Jackson, Mary and Rob Dyson and Allison King.

Douglas said the couples had several children between them who they left at home.

"They were wonderful girls," Douglas said. "They'd do anything for you and they were very close to each other and they loved their family."

The 2001 Ford Excursion limousine was traveling southwest on Route 30 in Schoharie, about 170 miles north of New York City, when it failed to stop at a T-junction with state Route 30A at 2 p.m. Saturday, State Police First Deputy Superintendent Christopher Fiore said at a news conference in Latham, N.Y.

It went across the road and hit an unoccupied SUV parked at the Apple Barrel Country Store, killing the limousine driver, the 17 passengers, and two people outside the vehicle.

The crash "sounded like an explosion," said Linda Riley, of nearby Schenectady, who was on a shopping trip with her sisters. She had been in another car parked at the store, saw a body on the ground and heard people start screaming.

The store manager, Jessica Kirby, told The New York Times the limo was coming down a hill at "probably over 60 mph." In an email to The Associated Press, she complained that the junction where the crashed occurred is accident-prone.

"We have had 3 tractor trailer type trucks run through the stop through our driveway and into a field behind the business," Kirby wrote. "All of these occurred during business hours and could've killed someone then."

She added that the state Department of Transportation has banned heavy trucks from the intersection but there are constant smaller crashes. "More accidents than I can count."

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating.

"This is one of the biggest losses of life that we've seen in a long, long time," NTSB Chairman Robert Sumwalt said.

It's the deadliest transportation accident since February 2009, when Colgan Air Flight 3407 crashed in Buffalo, N.Y., killing 50 people, Sumwalt said.

And it appears to be the deadliest land-vehicle accident since a bus taking nursing home patients away from Hurricane Rita caught fire in Texas in 2005, killing 23.

At the news conference, Fiore didn't comment on the limo's speed, or whether the limo occupants were wearing seat belts. Authorities didn't release the names of the victims or speculate on what caused the limo to run the stop sign. Autopsies were being conducted.

Speaking through tears on the telephone, Valerie Abeling said her 34-year-old niece Erin Vertucci was among the victims, along with Vertucci's newlywed husband, 30-year-old Shane McGowan.

"She was a beautiful, sweet soul; he was too," Abeling said.

They were married in June at a "beautiful wedding" in upstate New York, Abeling said. "They had everything going for them."

The vehicle was an aftermarket stretch limousine, according to an official briefed on the matter who spoke on condition of anonymity. The official was not authorized to discuss an ongoing investigation publicly and thus declined further identification.

Safety issues on such vehicles have arisen before, most notably after a wreck on Long Island in July 2015 in which four women on a winery tour were killed.

A grand jury found that vehicles converted into stretch limousines often don't have safety measures including side-impact air bags and reinforced rollover protection bars.

That grand jury called on Gov. Andrew Cuomo to create a task force on limousine safety.

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo met with South Korean President Moon Jae-in in Seoul on Sunday after having lunch with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Pyongyang.

Pompeo trip includes 'productive conversation' with Kim Jong Un

By Simon Denyer
The Washington Post

TOKYO — Secretary of State Mike Pompeo spent several hours with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Pyongyang on Sunday, later describing his talks as "productive" and "another step forward," as he attempted to set the stage for a summit between Kim and President Donald Trump.

Pompeo and Kim met for about two hours and then had lunch together.

"It's good to see you again," Pompeo told Kim as the two men shook hands for the cameras. The secretary of state then put his hand on Kim's shoulder and the pair smiled.

"Well, I am really pleased for this opportunity. After having a nice meeting we can enjoy a meal together," Kim said.

As they sat for lunch, Kim said, "It's a very nice day that promises a good future for both countries."

Pompeo said he had a "great visit" and a "very successful morning," adding that Trump sent his regards. Both men spoke through translators.

The last trip to North Korea for the secretary of state, in July, did not go so well. He came away from it saying the two sides had made progress, only for North Korea to denounce him for making "gangster-like" demands and raising "cancerous" issues. On that occasion, he did not meet Kim.

He then planned to return in late August, only for Trump to cancel the trip at the last minute as it became apparent that the two sides remained far apart on their approach to the negotiations.

But a summit of the leaders of North and South Korea last month has helped to rekindle the peace process, as has the apparent desire of both Kim and Trump to meet again for a second summit.

Later on Sunday Pompeo flew to Seoul where he met South Korean President Moon Jae-in. He said he would brief Moon in private but added he had "a good, productive conversation" with Kim.

"As President Trump said, there are many steps along the way and we took one of them today. It was another step forward. So this is, I think, a good outcome for all of us," Pompeo said.

Moon said he hoped a Trump-Kim summit would happen soon and would "make irreversible, decisive progress in terms of denuclearization as well as the peace process."

At the heart of the recent impasse has been two fundamentally different approaches to denuclearization.

Pompeo has insisted that sanctions on North Korea should remain in place until the country completely dismantles its nuclear program.

The governments of both North and South Korea, however, say that is unrealistic. Instead, they want both sides to take a "phased" approach, where Pyongyang is rewarded as it takes gradual steps to roll back its nuclear program.

On his way to Asia from Washington, Pompeo stuck to his guns, indicating that the spirit of the agreement between Trump and Kim at Singapore in June was that "we will get to denuclearization in a fully verified, irreversible way, and then we will actually deliver on the commitments to make this brighter future for the North Korean people."

Pompeo was also aiming to set up a location and a time for a second summit between Trump and Kim, although he warned in advance that he might not be able to nail down all the details on this trip.

Pompeo will visit Beijing on Monday.

'High probability' that Saudi journalist killed at consulate

By Mehmet Guzel, Suzan Fraser and Jon Gambrell

Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi speaks at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, in 2011.

ISTANBUL — A friend of a prominent Saudi journalist who went missing in Istanbul said Sunday that officials told him to "make your funeral preparations" as the Washington Post contributor "was killed" at the Saudi Consulate.

A Turkish official separately told The Associated Press that authorities believe Jamal Khashoggi was slain at the Saudi Consulate, while another said it was a "high probability."

Saudi officials have denied the allegations, calling them "baseless."

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan said "God willing, we will not be faced with the situation we do not desire" when asked by journalists about Khashoggi.

The growing dispute over his fate threatens relations between Saudi Arabia and Turkey and raises new questions about the kingdom and the actions of its assertive Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, whom Khashoggi wrote critically about in his columns.

Turan Kislakci, a friend of Khashoggi and the head of the Turkish-Arab Media Association, spoke to the AP on Sunday outside the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul.

"What was explained to us is this: He was killed, make your funeral preparations," Kislakci said. "We called a few other places, these are lower officials, but they said: 'We have evidence he was killed in a barbaric way, we will announce it tomorrow or the day after.' "

A Turkish official told the AP late Saturday that an "initial assessment" by police concluded Khashoggi had been killed at the consulate. On Sunday, another official assessed it as "high probability" that Khashoggi was killed in the consulate and his body was taken away. Both spoke on condition of anonymity as the investigation was ongoing.

The Post reported on the police's theory late Saturday, citing two anonymous sources.

"If the reports of Jamal's murder are true, it is a monstrous and unfathomable act," the Post's editorial page editor Fred Hiatt said in a statement. "Jamal was — or, as we hope, is — a committed, courageous journalist. He writes out of a sense of love for his country and deep faith in human dignity and freedom."

The state-run Saudi Press Agency carried a statement from the Istanbul Consulate that "strongly denounced these baseless allegations," and expressed doubt that they came from Turkish officials that are informed of the investigation or are authorized to comment on the issue. It said Saudi Arabia sent a team of investigators to help look into the case.

Khashoggi, 59, went missing while on a visit to the consulate in Istanbul for paperwork to marry his Turkish fiancee. The consulate insists the writer left its premises, contradicting Turkish officials. He had been living since last year in the U.S. in a self-imposed exile, in part due to the rise of Prince Mohammed, the son of King Salman.

As a contributor to the Post, Khashoggi has written extensively about Saudi Arabia, including criticizing its war in Yemen, its recent diplomatic spat with Canada and its arrest of women's rights activists after the lifting of a ban on women driving. All those issues have been viewed as being pushed by Prince Mohammed, who similarly has led roundups of activists, businessmen and others in the kingdom.

On Sunday, Erdogan did not directly repeat the investigators' fears about Khashoggi being dead when talking to reporters following a meeting of his Justice and Development Party in Ankara, Turkey's capital.

He promised to follow up personally on the case of Khashoggi, whom he referred to as "a journalist and a friend."

"It's very, very sad for us that this happened in our country," the Turkish president said.

your bank makes you
You said it, not us. You say it to your friends. You tweet it to the world. You curse it to the heavens. And yet, like the rest of us, for some reason, you put up with it. Fact is, very few people love their bank. Yet most of us never bother looking elsewhere. And while it might make sense to sell you something here, we're not going to. We won't mention a single product, or bang on about rates.

Today is National Online Bank Day. A day when most other banks are closed, but we're open. So take a couple of minutes to look for better, and when you do, there's a pretty good chance you'll find us. Because we were founded to be better. The name is the idea. Ally. We were created to right a whole lot of wrongs in the financial industry. We began nine years ago by naming every single thing we despised about going to the bank, about calling the bank, and most importantly, about how we were being treated by the bank.

Then we vowed to never, ever do those things, and we created Ally Bank. We had novel ideas, and also pretty obvious ones. In the end we had more than a different kind of bank. We had a mission. To be an ally for your financial well-being. To do it right. No matter what. Have we been 100% perfect? Heck no. Have we been pretty darn good? Look us up. Give us a call. Ask your neighbors about Ally and then ask yourself, "When it comes to my money and everything I've worked so hard for—my house, my car, my future—am I getting everything I want? Or am I merely 'satisfied'?" If it's the latter, you know where to find us.

Pro-Russian Serb wins seat in Bosnia's 3-member presidency

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Pro-Russia Serb leader Milorad Dodik declared victory Sunday in the race to fill the Serb seat in Bosnia's three-member presidency, deepening ethnic divisions in the country that faced a brutal war about 25 years ago.

Dodik said he was projected to win 56 percent of the vote in the election and his main opponent, Mladen Ivanic, 44 percent.

The projection was made with 85 percent of ballots counted, he said.

Preliminary official results are expected Monday. After polls closed, Dodik and Ivanic both said they were in the lead.

The presidency also has a Muslim and a Croat member. Dodik advocates eventual separation of Serbs from Bosnia. His election deals a blow to efforts to strengthen the country's unity after the 1992-95 war.

Referendum vote to outlaw same-sex marriage falls short

BUCHAREST, Romania — A referendum aimed at putting same-sex marriage further out of reach in Romania was invalidated Sunday after a quick tally showed too few voters cast ballots, election officials said.

The weekend vote on a constitutional amendment that would have changed the definition of family to make marriage a union between a man and a woman instead of between "spouses" required voter turnout of at least 30 percent for the result to stand.

Election officials said after polls closed that only 20.41 percent of eligible voters participated.

The turnout threshold never was close to being reached all day, a trend that gay rights group Accept said showed citizens "want a Romania based upon democratic values."

Haiti rocked by aftershock following quake; 12 dead

PORT-DE-PAIX, Haiti — Survivors sifting through the rubble of their earthquake-toppled cinderblock homes in Haiti on Sunday were rattled by a magnitude 5.2 aftershock that caused panic and threatened to raise the death toll even higher than 12.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the epicenter of the aftershock was located 9.8 miles north-northwest of Port-de-Paix, the city hard hit by Saturday night's 5.9 magnitude earthquake. Sunday's aftershock had a depth of 10 kilometers.

At least 12 people were killed in quake, Interior Minister Fednel Monchery told radio station MAGK9. Authorities said 188 people were injured.

The USGS said Saturday's quake was centered about 136 miles from the capital of Port-au-Prince.

U.N. report on global warming carries life-or-death warning

WASHINGTON — Preventing an extra single degree of heat could make a life-or-death difference in the next few decades for multitudes of people and ecosystems on this fast-warming planet, an international panel of scientists reported Sunday. But they provide little hope the world will rise to the challenge.

The Nobel Prize-winning Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change issued its gloomy report at a meeting in Incheon, South Korea.

In the 728-page document, the U.N. organization detailed how Earth's weather, health and ecosystems would be in better shape if the world's leaders could somehow limit future human-caused warming to just 0.9 degrees Fahrenheit from now, instead of the globally agreed-upon goal of 1.8 degrees F (1 degree C).

"For some people this is a life-or-death situation without a doubt," said Cornell University climate scientist Natalie Mahowald, a lead author on the report.

Limiting warming to 0.9 degrees from now means the world can keep "a semblance" of the ecosystems we have.

Adding another 0.9 degrees on top of that — the looser global goal — essentially means a different and more challenging Earth for people and species, said another of the report's lead authors

But meeting the more ambitious goal of slightly less warming would require immediate, draconian cuts in emissions of heat-trapping gases and dramatic changes in the energy field. While the U.N. panel says technically that's possible, it saw little chance of the needed adjustments happening.

In Columbus, Ohio, no Columbus Day celebration

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The largest city named for Christopher Columbus has called off its observance of the divisive holiday that honors the explorer, making a savvy move to tie the switch to a politically safe demographic: veterans.

Ohio's capital city, population 860,000, will be open for business Monday after observing Columbus Day probably "for as long as it had been in existence," said Robin Davis, a spokeswoman for Democratic Mayor Andrew Ginther. City offices will close instead on Veterans Day, which falls on Nov. 12 this year.

Native Americans and allied groups have long used Columbus Day to elevate issues of concern to them.

The decision to stop observing the holiday was not triggered by the national movement to abolish Columbus Day in favor of Indigenous Peoples Day, Davis said.

Vatican official decries claims against pope as hit job

VATICAN CITY — A top Vatican cardinal issued a scathing rebuke Sunday of the ambassador who accused Pope Francis of covering up the sexual misconduct of a prominent American cardinal, saying his claims were a "blasphemous" political hit job.

Six weeks after Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano threw the papacy into turmoil over his claims about ex-Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, the head of the Vatican's bishops office Cardinal Marc Ouellet said there was no evidence in his files backing Vigano's claims that Francis annulled any canonical sanctions against McCarrick.

Ouellet did confirm for the first time that McCarrick, 88, had been subject to some form of disciplinary measures given uncorroborated "rumors" of sexual misconduct in his past.

Cosby motion: Bill Cosby's lawyers have asked a Pennsylvania court to overturn the actor's conviction and three- to 10-year prison sentence because of what they call a string of errors in his sex assault case. Lawyers called the sentence too punitive given the two- to three-year guideline range for the crime.

Storm watch: Newly named Tropical Storm Michael could strengthen to a hurricane as it heads to the Florida Panhandle, the National Hurricane Center said Sunday. The hurricane center upgraded the tropical depression in the Caribbean to a named tropical storm, saying it had winds of up to 40 mph.

EDITORIALS

ENDORSEMENTS

This is the first installment of the Tribune Editorial Board's endorsements for U.S. House races in the Nov. 6 general election. You'll find the candidates' answers to our surveys, and our endorsements for this election, at chicagotribune.com/candidates. You'll find the Editorial Board's statement of principles at chicagotribune.com/principles. We'll start with one of the Illinois races drawing intense national attention.

For the U.S. House: Roskam, Tillman, Kelly, Lipinski and Garcia

6th District

Might the political direction of the country be determined in part by the west suburban voters of Illinois' 6th Congressional District? Control of the U.S. House appears up for grabs, and analysts believe incumbent Republican Rep. Peter Roskam of Wheaton is vulnerable.

Roskam, seeking a seventh term, faces Democrat Sean Casten of Downers Grove, a newcomer to politics whose campaign is lifted by antipathy for President Donald Trump. In 2016, Roskam cruised to victory while Trump got thumped, losing by 7 percentage points in the district to Hillary Clinton. This time out, energized Democrats believe Casten can win, helping to secure a House majority that would become a force of resistance to Trump.

Roskam

Roskam is a fiscal conservative who takes leadership positions in Congress. He's not a member of the Republican chorus that simply shouts down the opposing party's ideas. The six-term lawmaker sits on the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee and chairs its Tax Policy Subcommittee. That means he has clout, which helps when he seeks congressional action for his district. Roskam is an aggressive foe of Medicare fraud and critic of the Affordable Care Act for its failings. He wants workable reforms that provide insurance protection for more people. Obamacare is teetering, a fact many voters recognize.

By far Roskam's most significant contribution this term was his heavy lifting on the creation and passage of Trump's tax reform bill. The legislation is designed to spur faster economic growth, with a focus on cutting the corporate tax rate so American companies can compete against global rivals who pay less. Tax reform, which also gives breaks to individuals, is an "investment" in the country, Roskam says. That's a good way to look at it: U.S. tax policy was out of date. The reforms incentivize employers to repatriate earnings from abroad, amp up business activities in the U.S. and hire more workers. Standing pat on the previous U.S. average of 2 percent annual growth isn't acceptable. Tax reform along with deregulation, another Republican policy, will boost growth and prosperity.

Casten, a scientist and clean energy industry entrepreneur, is challenging Roskam's views at most turns. Casten says Obamacare isn't perfect but should be fixed, not killed. He's also highly critical of tax reform, arguing that broad tax cuts are too expensive and won't encourage job growth. We side with Roskam: Passing tax reform and cutting regulatory red tape are key to keeping the U.S. economy humming. Roskam is endorsed.

1st District

The big question for voters of the 1st Congressional District is ... why? Why can't this South Side/south suburban district entice an array of qualified, competitive candidates to challenge entrenched Democratic incumbent Rep. Bobby Rush?

Rush has served the solid-blue 1st since 1993. We've joined with a chorus of constituents who complain Rush is practically invisible. He missed 27.2 percent of votes in 2017, according to GovTrack.us. He's had health and family issues, but also legal issues. He was ordered this year to pay $1.1 million on a delinquent bank loan dating to a 2005 Chicago church he purchased, according to the Better Government Association. The district, facing economic and gun violence problems, deserves new representation.

Tillman

Seeking to oust Rush is Republican Jimmy Lee Tillman II of Chicago, son of former Ald. Dorothy Tillman. Tillman, who's failed to take this seat previously, grew up a Democrat. He struggled in the past to make a case for his candidacy and says he's getting no help from the Republican Party. Yet this time Tillman makes an intriguing argument: As an African-American Republican in the U.S. House, he'd be positioned to work with President Donald Trump and Republican leaders on issues of importance to constituents. The Democratic black caucus has frozen out Trump, Tillman notes, even as the roaring Trump economy has brought African-American unemployment to record lows. Tillman cites voting rights for African-Americans and reparations as two issues he'd raise with Republicans. "By me shining a light, I feel like I can start the healing in this country by black citizens," he told us.

Also in this race: independent candidate Thomas Rudbeck of Chicago. Long-term, the district is best-served by new political blood. We give the nod this time to the long-shot challenger. Tillman is endorsed.

2nd District

Rep. Robin Kelly of Matteson, whose 2nd Congressional District includes southern Cook County, has a strong work ethic and a broad portfolio of interests. She co-authored legislation to provide federal dollars for dental treatment to seniors and others in order to reduce emergency room visits. That bill passed the House in February. A member of the subcommittee on information technology, Kelly's worked on artificial intelligence issues and dealt with legislation to prevent pregnancy-associated deaths.

Kelly

Kelly's signature issue is gun violence prevention. She's introduced various pieces of legislation meant to promote gun safety, including bills that would require the surgeon general to submit an annual report to Congress on the effects of gun violence on public health. Gun-related legislation faces opposition in Washington, but the work is necessary and Kelly has an effective voice.

Facing Kelly is David Merkle of Bourbonnais, a self-employed photographer and former member of the Kankakee County Board. Merkle tells us he believes in self-improvement and personal responsibility. Both worthy traits, but how would that translate into his work as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives? He envisions using district offices and other government buildings to host betterment programs. Kelly, who has a solid legislative record, is endorsed.

3rd District

Listen up, residents of the 3rd Congressional District. You know what to do: Give Rep. Dan Lipinski of Western Springs a landslide victory over his odious Republican opponent, a Holocaust denier, anti-Semite and neo-Nazi. Lipinski earns our support on the merits: He's a committed bipartisan whose work on the House Transportation Committee translated into federal dollars to improve the Chicago-area's rail system. As a conservative Democrat, Lipinski's views have been a good fit for this district, which stretches from Chicago's Bridgeport neighborhood to the western suburbs.

Lipinski

This year Lipinski faced a tough Democratic primary challenge from a progressive. But even if you aren't a Lipinski fan, there's something much bigger at stake this Election Day: rejecting hate and supporting decency. We're confident Democrats and Republicans will come together to defeat Arthur J. Jones of Lyons. It's scandalous that Illinois GOP officials slept through last year's election filing period, allowing a hate monger to run unopposed in the Republican primary. Jones is an outlier and a long shot. That's no reason for voters to skip past this race. Lipinski is endorsed — emphatically.

4th District

Jesus "Chuy" Garcia, a Chicago Democrat, is a Cook County Board commissioner, former alderman and state senator who also ran for mayor in 2015. He's built a support network of labor and progressive interests into an effective political organization. Powerful enough to send him to the U.S. House? Quite possibly.

Garcia got into the 4th Congressional District race when incumbent Rep. Luis Gutierrez unexpectedly said last November he would retire and hoped Garcia would be his successor. We didn't care for that insider-ish move. We also recognize that Garcia, who has lived in Pilsen and Little Village for most of his life, would be a strong advocate for the city-based 4th district. He's passionate about public safety and social justice issues, and his political grounding would position him to contribute on many issues in Washington. That includes immigration, which was Gutierrez's focus. With Democrats vying to win control of the U.S. House, "these are good times for progressives," Garcia notes. As a result, he decided against another run for mayor.

Garcia

Garcia faces Mark Wayne Lorch of Riverside, a financial analyst who ran unopposed in the Republican primary. Lorch, a political newcomer, brings a sharp skill set to the race. He's running primarily as a fiscal conservative who's concerned about the national debt. He has smart takes on many issues, and we'd like to see him stay engaged in politics. But Garcia is more in sync politically with the district. Garcia is endorsed.

Tomorrow: More choices for U.S. House.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING

The Iron Law of Bureaucracy was promulgated by Jerry Pournelle, an American essayist and novelist, who maintained that any organization has two kinds of people: those dedicated to furthering the organization's original mission — like academics who want their university to turn out well-educated students — and those dedicated to furthering the bureaucracy by expanding their budgets and staffs. Pournelle's Iron Law of Bureaucracy holds that the second group will inevitably take over the place. ...

"The problem with socialism is that it takes too many evenings," Oscar Wilde famously complained, but to leftists, those long evening meetings are a feature, not a bug. They thrive at meetings. They love forming committees to examine problems, real or imagined. With their zeal to reform and regulate, with their passion for empathizing, they have the stamina to out-talk and outlast everyone else — and then be put in charge of a program to solve the problem. If their solution creates even bigger problems, well, they'll just have to hold more meetings.

John Tierney, City Journal

Latino voters care about more than just immigration (although it is a key issue). In fact, issues such as education, health care and a growing economy are high priorities for our families. And even on immigration, Latinos often have a richly nuanced understanding of the policy debate. Despite generally one-sided media coverage, some polls indicate that Latinos also disapprove of how Democrats have handled negotiations with Republicans on what to do about the Dreamers — immigrant children who were brought to the United States through no fault of their own. According to a Quinnipiac poll, 54 percent think Democrats are using the issue for political gain rather than putting forward genuine solutions aimed at enacting a legislative fix.

FREDERICK FLORIN/GETTY-AFP

Nobel Peace Prize laureates Denis Mukwege and Nadia Murad have led the way to stop the use of sexual violence as a weapon of war, but much remains to be done.

The Nobel Peace Prize elevates understanding of rape as a war crime

By Rick Noack

The Nobel Peace Prize committee has handed out its prestigious annual award to two groups of laureates in recent years: people who were behind treaties or agreements that paved the way for peace, and inspiring individuals or groups whose work is still very much needed to address problems unlikely to be resolved anytime soon.

This year's prize winners — Denis Mukwege, a Congolese gynecologist, and Nadia Murad, an Iraqi Yazidi — would probably fall into the latter category. Mukwege and Murad have led the way to stop the use of sexual violence as a weapon of war, but it's hard to overstate how much more work needs to be done.

Late last year, Human Rights Watch documented how Myanmar's troops systematically raped Muslim Rohingya women to spread terror and fear as part of what has been condemned as a "cleansing campaign" that drove hundreds of thousands out of the country and into Bangladesh.

Holding the perpetrators accountable and preventing such acts is a "prerequisite for lasting peace," said the chair of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, Berit Reiss-Andersen.

But that's a rather new international consensus, and one that is still blatantly ignored by some nations.

Doing so became at least slightly more difficult in 2008, when the United Nations finally recognized rape during conflicts as a war crime. Legally, the resolution may not have been as groundbreaking as reported at the time, given that the Nuremberg trials and subsequent tribunals in Rwanda and elsewhere had already resulted in condemnations of rape and sexual violence as crimes of war.

But the 2008 U.N. resolution was unprecedented in its scope and acknowledgment of failure. It clearly stated that sexual violence in war had "become systematic and widespread, reaching appalling levels of brutality," because not enough was done to prevent such acts, and acknowledged the "negative impact this has on durable peace, security and reconciliation, including post-conflict peacebuilding."

That link itself wasn't new, given that rape had accompanied wars for centuries. But what changed in the 20th century was the emergence of a far more systematic use of it during ethnic cleansing campaigns and other conflicts — a disturbing development with impacts that took decades to be fully understood.

Early on in the century, Japanese soldiers abducted hundreds of thousands of women in occupied territories and forced them into prostitution during World War II. When the war ended, the Allied forces took a number of steps to prevent a repeat of human rights abuses including rape, but sexual violence was still only mentioned as a side aspect. That changed once researchers found mounting evidence that rape itself was being used as a key weapon in the second half of the 20th century.

The European Commission found in 1996 that 20,000 Muslim girls and women had become victims of rape and sexual violence in Bosnia since April 1992, when Serb troops began bombing Sarajevo, now the capital of Bosnia. In 1996, a disturbing U.N. report detailed how Serb soldiers had "impregnated girls (who) have been forced to bear 'the enemy's' child," and that during the Rwandan genocide two years earlier, "virtually every adolescent girl who survived an attack by the militia was subsequently raped."

In a 2003 report, Amnesty International was among the first organizations to suggest that ethnic rivalries were turning sexual violence into a strategic weapon. "In situations of inter-communal strife or conflicts drawn along ethnic or religious lines, women of a particular community or social group may be assaulted because they are seen as embodying the 'honour' and integrity of the community," Amnesty wrote at the time.

Other organizations, including Doctors Without Borders, were starting to notice a similar trend.

The late 1990s and the following decade brought a new awareness for the complex repercussions of sexual violence in wars that go far beyond what was acknowledged after World War II, including a rise in domestic violence. Researchers posited that men's perceived loss of control in conflicts if they are on the losing side may be compensated by them resorting to domestic violence.

More than a decade before the United Nations finally took actions, the organization's own 1996 State of the World's Children report warned that "sexual violation of women erodes the fabric of a community in a way that few weapons can," according to a summary by UNICEF.

But more than two decades on, there are still no systematic efforts to prosecute or prevent sexual violence in war zones.

This has left individual activists and groups with the harrowing mission of dealing with the fallout — in countries including South Sudan, Syria, Iraq, Burundi and many others.

Stepping out of the shadows of my depression

By Colbert I. King

I don't know much about Jason Kander, except what I read about him in the news. A former Army intelligence officer and Afghanistan veteran. First millennial to win a statewide office when he was elected Missouri secretary of state in 2012. Up-and-coming Democratic Party leader.

Last week, Kander abandoned his campaign to become mayor of Kansas City, Mo., citing symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder and depression that he traces to his tour of duty in Afghanistan. He had a hole inside that he was hiding from himself and the world, he said. To his credit, he faced up to a problem that he did not bring on himself. He went so far as to state publicly that he was depressed to the point of calling the Department of Veterans Affairs Veterans Crisis Line, "tearfully conceding that, yes, I have had suicidal thoughts."

Kander realized that this wasn't occasional spells of feeling glum. It wasn't something he could just snap out of. His symptoms of depression, he said, were "just getting worse." He had to step back from his public pursuits and get help.

I've been there, done that, too.

Unless you are suffering from it, you can't know what depression is like. Oh, you can read about it or listen to someone try to tell you what it's like. But nothing comes close to living with it, and the frustration of not knowing how to put into words how you are feeling, and why.

Depression is debilitating. It can take you out of the life you want to live. In my case, the written diagnosis is "persistent depressive disorder." I have battled it for years.

Sometimes, when I miss taking my meds, the disorder creeps into my day, and I slide into the world of a Stevie Nicks lyric: those "dark desperate hours that nobody sees."

But the moments and the symptoms are there: the feeling of worthlessness — notwithstanding a wall filled with plaques and honors.

And there's the sadness, the sense of emptiness, the fear of impending doom. And the urge to cry, even though you don't know why.

My bio doesn't share the full picture.

There are times when I don't want to leave the house. The thought of going out the door for a social gathering or to meet new people is pure agony. But I'm urged — no make that made to do it — by my wife, Gwen. There have been times when I wanted to self-medicate through sleep. She wouldn't let me get away with that either. She is good for me. Been that way for 57 years.

So are my three adult children, and seven grandchildren, who help me take my mind off myself and the feelings of guilt that arise because of real or imagined things I might have done or failed to do.

If there's a saving grace, it's therapy, medication, supportive folks and a faith that tells me I am not alone — "lo, I am with you always." These things help me get through the rough patches to those moments when I can smile without forcing it, concentrate without faking it and laugh like I mean it.

Part of coping with depression is knowing that it's not your fault. The other bit of help is knowing there are people you can trust to understand the problem.

The Washington Post's editorial page editor, Fred Hiatt, under whose authority I write this column, has known about my disorder for years. He doesn't attach a stigma to it, because he understands that depression is a serious mental health disorder, not a character flaw. I have shortcomings, but depression is not the reason for them.

Thanks to brave souls such as Kander, the country is shedding the taboo around depression.

Depression is an equal-opportunity disorder striking without regard for race, religion, age, gender or political persuasion.

Awareness of depression and what to do about it is especially needed in the African-American community, where the stigma is most acute.

I can't thank enough Academy Award- and Emmy Award-nominated actress, and my fellow Howard University alumnus, Taraji P. Henson for launching the Boris Lawrence Henson Foundation to get rid of the stigma around depression and other mental illness in the African-American community. She and her family have an experience with this.

Henson explained in a speech, there's "the misconception about celebrities that we have it all together." "When they yell cut and the cameras go away, I go home to real problems just like everybody else." "We're suffering and struggling just like the regular person and money doesn't help."

I join with Kander and Henson. It's past time to bring the problem out of the shadows. Diagnose and treat the pain; show that life, despite it all, is still worth living.

Minivans are the future of transportation — just don't call them minivans

By Michael Laris

MICHAEL LARIS/FOR THE WASHINGTON POST

The Knoche family minivan is among the pieces in the exhibit "America on the Move" at the National Museum of American History.

For the past 15 years, the Knoche family minivan has been frozen in traffic half a mile from the White House.

The Dodge Caravan with the stub nose and the faux finish has a prime spot, along with a 199-ton locomotive, in a Smithsonian exhibit on the history of transportation in America.

"I liked that wood grain, for sure. Now it's kind of corny," said Gary Knoche, who was with his parents, Fred and Mary Ann, when they brought the van home in the mid-1980s. "I remember saying, 'That looks good.' "

Now the once-mighty minivan — overshadowed by the SUV, vessel of dad jokes and soccer mom cliches— could be clawing its way off the museum floor and into an unexpected starring role in the future of transportation.

Tech firms are spending billions developing the brains for self-driving cars, and minivans offer what some consider the perfect body for a transplant.

"The platform of that minivan is ideal. It's an oblong block on four wheels," said Timothy Papandreou, a former chief innovation officer at the San Francisco Municipal Transportation Agency who also worked at Waymo, a leading self-driving firm. "It's familiar and it's safe. It's not scary. It's not a Mustang or Corvette. ... It's a minivan."

Its humdrum yet roomy shape can fit enough people to make driverless taxi services profitable, or can easily be rejiggered for autonomous deliveries, the thinking goes. In May, Waymo said it will buy up to 62,000 minivans — descendants of the Knoches' early Chrysler model — to build its driverless fleet. The company plans to start carrying paying passengers later this year in Arizona.

But the vision offered by boosters of driverless technology — including nearly flawless computer software besting all-too-human drivers; broadly replacing individually owned cars with ride-hailing apps and robotaxis; and a new era of reduced congestion and pollution — would require not only solving major technological challenges but also sweeping changes in Americans' consumer behavior and driving culture.

In the beginning

Chrysler first unleashed the minivan on the nation in 1983, and the practical workhorse carried Fred Knoche to his Detroit locksmith shop, Gary to hockey practice, and millions of American families and their growing loads of stuff where they needed to go.

"The minivan is a little bit like bluejeans with Lycra — incredibly comfortable, but not particularly stylish," said Peter Liebhold, a longtime Smithsonian curator who researches industry and technological change. "You had a little bit of room to move around."

Chrysler's designers came up with a relatively low-slung van that still had lots of space, headroom and legroom. Passengers could reach a third row of seats without having to climb over the back bumper, as kids did in station wagons. It was a thrilling stretch of innovation for those who had spent years making more mundane tweaks to existing cars.

"They're always just new wrinkles in sheet metal from the previous year, so here was a new concept," said Burton Bouwkamp, 91, head of product planning for Chrysler in the 1970s when the idea was being worked up. "That was pretty exciting to us."

The working name was the "garageable van."

The idea fell flat with Chrysler bosses. Top managers thought their big competitors — Ford and General Motors — would have already beaten them to it if there really was a market, Bouwkamp said.

But when famed auto executive Lee Iacocca took over Chrysler, he had the "automotive savvy and the guts to go ahead," Bouwkamp said.

"Now that you've seen it, how would you describe it?" Iacocca asked when he introduced the vehicle in 1983. "A station wagon? A garageable van? A bus? A truck? Or what? Actually, it's all of these and more. The Caravan and Voyager can be whatever you want it to be."

For many, they were. Until they weren't.

Most popular

The minivan was an immediate hit, and Chrysler's sales peaked at more than half a million a year during much of the 1990s. By 2017, they were less than half that, toppled by the SUV; its more carlike cousin, the crossover; and changing tastes. Fiat Chrysler Automobiles still holds the top spot in the U.S. market, according to the company. But minivans make up just 3 percent of the industry.

For the curators at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, which has nearly 4 million visitors a year, the Knoche family's gray minivan "really transcends just being a vehicle," Liebhold said. "I mean, everything about it is perfect."

Liebhold marvels at the mundane, including all its cup holders. It is also a window into a particular time, place and population. "It is a big piece of the American story in the '80s and '90s," Liebhold said.

The minivan was a means to go on vacation, itself part of the evolution of middle-class life, he said, and after the Knoches took it home, they went to Walt Disney World. Later, it was to daughter Adrienne's softball practices. "It was all about family life and doing stuff in a very practical kind of way," Liebhold said.

Fred Knoche went in big, buying minivan after minivan.

"He's the van king," said childhood friend Matt Trupiano, who still works for him through Fred's Key Shop, a landmark Detroit business that survived riots in the 1960s and thrived through the hollowing out and rebirth of the city. "To Fred, this is a Corvette."

The elevation of the family's 1986 Caravan to the Smithsonian added to Fred's mystique. He had the Midas touch, in business and even when offloading an old minivan. "If there was an atomic bomb falling on Detroit, I would stand next to him and I wouldn't get hurt," Trupiano said.

For the van king, it was just another one of those things.

"I put it up for sale down at my shop. A couple people looked at it and weren't interested," Knoche recalled.

Then a Chrysler representative learned about a beautiful, pristine early Caravan and came to take a look. The man told Knoche to take off the For Sale sign, and the company kept it for its historical collection before donating it to the Smithsonian.

Reinventing the minivan

And now this steel and glass specimen may offer insight into what comes next.

Waymo says the hybrid Chrysler Pacifica minivan is "the perfect platform for ride-hailing" because it's safe and has "power-sliding doors and roomy, versatile interiors that can accommodate large groups." The high-voltage battery also can power the self-driving sensors and computers.

Waymo's competitors, however, aren't convinced of Americans' long-lasting love of the minivan. General Motors is building its driverless strategy on a version of Chevrolet's five-seat electric Bolt EV hatchback. Tesla says its Model 3 is the "car of the future" and eventually will be able to join a driverless fleet "just by tapping a button" on the Tesla app.

An Uber spokeswoman said it is too soon to tell what kind of car will dominate the driverless market. The company is working with Toyota to upgrade Sienna minivans but also is using Volvo SUVs. Even Waymo is hedging its bets, saying it also will buy up to 20,000 electric Jaguar SUVs for its driverless ambitions.

"The minivan is not the car of the future," said Alan Hall, a Ford spokesman, adding that Waymo is "making do with a vehicle that was designed and built for personal (ownership)."

Hall said Ford will design and build its own fleet specifically to carry paying passengers and make deliveries, sometimes at the same time. It will be a mix of minivan, van and truck, "but with some comfort features of sedans," he said. The company has yet to unveil its creation, slated for production in 2021.

The long morph

Most intriguing for some transportation planners is the possibility that driverless minivans, or their close relatives, could replace single-passenger cars and save space on clogged roads.

"Imagine if Uber and Lyft had 50,000 of these vans available for pooling and shared rides," said Papandreou, who founded Emerging Transport Advisors after leaving Waymo this summer. But he says marketers may need to work some magic with the name.

"Everybody looks down on themselves. 'I'm no longer sexy, I'm no longer cool,'" Papandreou said. "Maybe we need to change the word 'minivan' to something else."

Toyota calls its minivanesque concept shuttle the e-Palette, evoking an artist's imagination. The autonomous and electric walk-in vehicles might be transformed into a rolling pizza kitchen, personal shoe store or casino, the company said.

Chrysler's futuristic minivan concept is also not called a minivan. It's an electric "family transportation vehicle," with three rows of track-mounted, movable seats, called the Portal. "Designed by millennials for millennials," the company says.

It's understandable that companies might shy away from the word's fuddy-duddy baggage. Being a running sight gag — as the now-discontinued Oldsmobile Silhouette minivan was in the mob comedy "Get Shorty" — doesn't do a lot for a modern image.

But Papandreou says minivans and their minibus bigger brothers — better known around the world as colectivos, matatus or Jeepneys — are already cheap and ubiquitous, even in their "nonautomated, non-electric, not-networked" form. That's not lost on autonomy advocates. "That platform is so flexible," Papandreou said.

Transportation has been defined by disruption, the Smithsonian's Liebhold said. The minivan carved itself a place in that history by tapping Americans' love for efficiency and productivity. Now autonomy is facing its test. Will drivers really hand over their keys to robots en masse, whatever "family transportation vehicle" comes next?

"Walking worked fine, but then people got horses. Trains get invented, and people get rid of them and start using buses. Trolley cars are wonderful, and then people start using automobiles," Liebhold said. "It's not like any one of the things was the perfect thing. Needs change. The technology changes. It just continues to morph."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Citizens' suffering

Regarding the Tribune editorial endorsing Gov. Bruce Rauner:

The one reality that should guide my vote for governor is the financial havoc Rauner caused as the chief executive of Illinois.

As an adjunct instructor at Northeastern Illinois University, I was a witness to the chaos that he was mainly responsible for. Due to severe budget cuts, faculty and staff were affected by unpaid furloughs, layoffs, the elimination of positions and bumping based on seniority. Some exceptional employees even moved out of state to escape the financial chaos.

What happened at Northeastern was replicated across the state in every educational institution, department or agency that depended on state funding.

These public employees suffered stress, uncertainty and financial hardship. For most of them, the choice to vote for J.B. Pritzker will be based on the reality that they went through.

— Larry Vigon, Chicago

A plea for honesty

Being a lifelong Illinois resident, I am disappointed that we are even considering a tax hike as part of a campaign for governor. I personally don't care that we are one of a handful of states that has a flat tax rate. We are also a state that continues to have an exodus of residents and one of the highest unfunded pension liabilities.

Look at the impact our real estate taxes have on our property values versus other states. Except in small pockets, property values have not yet recovered from the economic downturn while other states have thrived. Homes are selling for a fraction of replacement value in many areas, which is unheard of in other states.

Never, ever has any form of tax change resulted in a tax decrease to any resident over a lasting period of time. Toll roads were to become freeways in 1973 and look where we are today. We not so long ago incurred a 32 percent income tax increase in Illinois, and many are impacted by the federal cap of $10,000 on state and local tax deductions. Is that not enough of a tax hit?

Why must our elected officials look at revenue instead of costs? Make the hard decisions to cut our bloated government costs instead of appealing to the voters with tax and spend, spend, spend promises that sound good but cannot be accomplished without an additional tax burden. Where will any money come from for new programs when we can't fund what is in place today? Instead of promoting a progressive tax rate program, address things that will make a dent in areas that impact our budget — which are costs. For once, be honest with the voters.

Critical conservation

The Illinois and Indiana divisions of the conservation organization Izaak Walton League of America salute and appreciate the Tribune's excellent coverage of issues affecting Lake Michigan and the Great Lakes.

The lakes are an irreplaceable asset representing over one-fifth of the world's fresh water supply. They supply water to over 48 million people and support a $7 billion-a-year sport fishing industry.

As your coverage has ably pointed out, threats like industrial spills, invasive species, shoreline erosion, urban and farm runoff, etc., all threaten the lake and our local economy.

The public needs to be heard right now on the congressional farm bill and its conservation programs. The Senate version offers the greatest help for the lake. The next big issue is what to do at Brandon Road in Joliet to stop the spread of invasive species, such as Asian carp, from reaching Lake Michigan.

We hope that the administration and Congress will do the right thing with multiple barriers to stop invasive species from entering Lake Michigan and help keep more invasive species from entering the Mississippi River watershed.

An informed public is our best ally to protect Lake Michigan for future generations and a vigilant news media will help make that happen.

5 financial pitfalls to avoid

Fall officially started Sept. 22, which means Halloween candy is now out in force at your local store. It also means that the kids are fully back in the school routine and you can redirect your attention to your money issues, before the onslaught of the holiday season sucks you in.

To help, here are five financial pitfalls to avoid before the end of the year.

Don't delay completing your FAFSA: The Free Application for Federal Student Aid, or FAFSA, is now available for the 2019-20 academic year. This important document determines how much money students and their families get for college-including grants, scholarships and loans. In addition to a new website that works better when viewed on a phone, there is also a new mobile MyStudentAid app. Although the deadline for federal aid is not until June 30, your state and school may have earlier ones.

For some, it's as soon as possible after Oct. 1, which means they have a limited pool of funds that could run out. If you want to maximize your potential aid, submit a FAFSA ASAP.

If your kids are not old enough to apply, talk to them about college financing. According to Fidelity Investments' 2018 College Savings Indicator Study, a whopping 40 percent of parents with sophomores or older haven't discussed with their kids that they're expected to contribute to college savings and 43 percent have not discussed how much education debt they may incur.

Avoid the April 15 surprise: Check to see how much money you have withheld from your income for tax purposes and then go to the IRS website to see if the amount is sufficient to cover your needs. You may want to check in with a tax preparer or CPA to determine if you need to change course before the end of the year.

A corollary for any taxpayers who filed for an extension — while you already estimated how much money you owed Uncle Sam, your Oct. 15 drop-dead date to file is just around the corner.

Don't blow off open enrollment: Whether you work for a company, rely on the Affordable Care Act for health insurance or are retired and use Medicare, this is the time of year when you have new options. Many simply do whatever they have done last year, but this could be a mistake. Before the pressure of a deadline looms, review your plan, what you spent during the year and consider what could be likely in 2019.

Stop guessing about retirement: About half of workers who are 55 and older have not attempted to calculate how much they'll need to live a comfortable retirement. It's pretty hard to reach a goal if you don't know where you stand today. There are so many tools that can help with the process, but if you are at a loss, seek professional guidance.

Don't assume your financial professional puts you first: This week marks World Financial Planning Day – a good opportunity to find out whether or not your financial planner/adviser/consultant/sales puts your interests first at all times. In other words, does he or she adhere to the fiduciary standard?

There has been a great deal of confusion around this topic, but certain designations require that its professionals to act in the best interest of the client at all times. Those include CPAs, CFAs and as of Oct. 1, 2019, CFPs will be bound by new standards, which will expand the scope of the fiduciary standard.

Negotiating GLOBALLY

Understanding cultural patterns can make or break the deal

BY BETH FISHER-YOSHIDA
Inc.

If you are an entrepreneur, you negotiate every day. You negotiate sourcing materials, goods and services to keep your business running. These negotiations can take place in a local context or globally, across cultures.

If, for example, you decide to source globally, your negotiation partners will likely be from different cultures and may even speak different languages, adding a layer of complexity to all of your communications and coordination efforts. Indeed, different cultural orientations influence when we negotiate, how we negotiate and what we negotiate.

Thankfully, there are well-established frameworks for better understanding the cultural dimensions of a negotiation. One of my favorites was developed by author and consultant Richard Gesteland and uses four categories: relationship-focused/deal-focused; formal/informal; rigid-time/fluid-time; expressive/reserved cultures.

Using these dimensions to plan for negotiations can help you feel comfortable with the process.

1. Negotiate from a relationship-focused or deal-focused stance.

In Japanese culture (a relationship-focused culture), your counterpart needs to get to know you, so he or she feels comfortable and can trust you. A handshake, a bow or a look in the eye can help confer a sense of trust and respect. In my years of working in Japan, the unwillingness of certain parties of different orientation to adapt to this negotiation style was the source of many lost deals.

This dimension has everything to do with timing and familiarity. For those negotiating from a relationship focus, you want to spend time getting to know your counterpart to decide whether he or she deserves your trust. On the other hand, a deal-focused orientation is all about getting in, closing the deal, and getting out.

2. Follow formal or informal procedures.

This refers to the level of protocol you need to follow in order to engage in a negotiation. Formal negotiation protocol has a particular process. In cultures that are considered "tight" as per Michele Gelfand, professor of psychology at the University of Maryland, there are strict guidelines about what you can/cannot say publicly, the order of who can speak and when, and which issues are even negotiable. There's little flexibility. If you are from a "loose" culture with more relaxed procedures, you need to recognize that guidelines you ignore because you feel they are not important, can send the message that you do not respect the negotiation process, and therefore, do not respect the other party.

Becoming acquainted with how the other party wants to negotiate is important. One way is to identify a "cultural informant" who can explain the procedures you are expected to follow in the negotiation. It is a way of gaining insights of basic dos and don'ts when negotiating.

For example, before going to Ghana, I learned that expecting people to speak one at a time can be too rigid and can dampen their enthusiasm for the deal. In general, their preference is to show a high level of passion during a negotiation.

3. Adhere to a rigid or fluid sense of time.

Deadlines are non-negotiable for some cultures and mere suggestions for others. This can make or break deals if there is a clash over timing, especially when you have a tightly linked progression of activity flow and one part is delayed.

It is always good to have a back-up plan in case there is a delay. I know some colleagues who have more than one source of who can supply a product or service for what they need so they are assured they will be able to get what they need when they need it. Negotiating these contingencies in advance minimizes the risk from depending on one source.

4. Express yourself in communication or stay reserved.

With expressive cultures you may misjudge the level of commitment because of how emphatic they may be. Or you may underestimate the importance of a particular item in a negotiation because the other party downplays the response.

In the concept of mirroring, you build rapport with others by copying their gestures or tone. You may not need to be as reserved or emphatic as your counterpart, but edging closer than you normally would could be a way to build rapport. One of my colleagues responds better when I outwardly show more enthusiasm than usual in my demeanor. It increases trust and can lead to better quality outcomes.

Think of these four dimensions on a continuum and assess where you're most comfortable. Determine where you think your counterpart will fall on the spectrum, and decide how much you want to flex in their direction.

You want to strike a balance with remaining comfortable and showing good faith as you continue to develop your relationship through negotiations.

A useful addition to your retirement-planning library

By Elliot Raphaelson
The Savings Game

Steve Vernon, a financial services adviser and columnist for CBS MoneyWatch, has written an excellent book, "Retirement Game-Changers: Strategies for a Healthy, Financially Secure, and Fulfilling Long Life" (www.restoflife.com), which covers important issues that retirees will be facing.

The most important comprehensive sections of the book cover decisions about health care and securing sufficient assets and income to last a lifetime. The book is clearly written, and you don't have to be a financial expert to understand it.

One of the best features of the book is the identification of excellent resources, especially on the topics of Social Security and reverse mortgages. He provides a solid introduction to these issues, but there's a lot more to learn about them, and Vernon points readers in the right direction.

One of the most important subjects he covers in great detail is Medicare. He points out that traditional Medicare does not cover dental or vision expenses. He recommends, prudently, that individuals approaching Medicare eligibility age should examine their options in these areas and take the necessary steps prior to enrolling in Medicare to have sufficient coverage.

He points out the importance of doing your homework prior to enrolling in Medicare in order to avoid common pitfalls. For example, he points out that many individuals enroll in traditional Medicare without enrolling in in a Medigap plan. This is generally a serious mistake.

When you are first eligible for Medicare Part B, you can't be excluded from buying a Medigap plan for pre-existing conditions or be charged a higher premium. While you continue the coverage by paying the premiums, your policy is guaranteed renewable for the rest of your life. If you don't purchase the Medigap plan at the time you enroll in Part B, you will incur a penalty for each year you did not enroll, and you may not be able to enroll in the plan you eventually select, and the premium can be higher. Medicare Part B only covers 80 percent of the expenses associated with it. Enrolling in a Medigap plan will cover the other 20 percent.

When you enroll in Medicare, you can also enroll in Part D, which covers prescription drugs. If you enroll later you will also incur a penalty. When you select a specific Part D plan, you have to examine the costs associated with current drugs you are taking. Each plan has different cost structures. The book contains important sources you can use to identify the best plan for you.

You do not have to enroll in traditional Medicare. You can enroll in a Medicare Advantage plan. The book details the pros and cons. The main advantages can be lower cost, inclusion of some prescription drug coverage and possible dental coverage. One of the significant disadvantages is that you are restricted in your choice of physicians. Another is that whenever you incur serious medical issues, you may not be able to obtain the Medigap plan you need.

A Medigap plan cannot exclude you for pre-existing conditions or charge higher premiums if you enroll when you are initially eligible for Medicare. If you elect a Medicare Advantage plan initially, you no longer have the same Medigap option. Even if you can obtain a Medigap plan later, the costs can be much higher.

Another useful chapter covers the necessary steps to ensure that your retirement income will last a lifetime. Vernon explains how to protect yourself against retirement risks and to withstand financial shocks.

Overall, I found the book very useful for individuals who are approaching retirement, especially those who have not planned properly. Making the right decisions about health care, effective income management, and initiating Social Security benefits is critical to ensuring a prosperous retirement. This book will help you in all these areas.

The working-for-yourself windfall

By Sandra Block
Kiplinger

If you're self-employed or have a side gig, you could qualify for one of the most generous provisions in the tax overhaul enacted by Congress late last year. But if you don't already have an accountant or tax preparer, you might need one, because this tax break is also one of the most complex provisions in the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act.

The break could benefit millions of sole proprietors, small-business owners, freelancers and gig workers, who "pass through" their business profits (or losses) to Schedule C of their individual tax returns and pay individual tax rates. Starting this year, many of these taxpayers will be allowed to deduct up to 20 percent of their qualified business income — net income after they've claimed business deductions — before they calculate their tax bill.

For example, if you're self-employed and earn $100,000 in qualified business income this year, you could be eligible to deduct $20,000. If you're in the 24 percent tax bracket, that would reduce your tax bill by $4,800.

You don't have to itemize to claim this new tax break. The deduction won't reduce your adjusted gross income, nor will it reduce your earnings for purposes of calculating taxes for Social Security and Medicare, says Nathan Rigney, a research analyst at H&R Block's Tax Institute. (Unlike employees who work for someone else, self-employed workers must pay the full 15.3 percent of self-employment taxes, although they can deduct half of the amount from their AGI.)

Congress made this change in an effort to create tax parity between small-business owners and big corporations. The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act cut the corporate tax rate from 35 percent to 21 percent but only reduced the top personal tax rate from 39.6 percent to 37 percent. Excluding 20 percent of qualifying income effectively cuts the top rate from 37 percent to 29.6 percent.

Several factors, though, could disqualify you for all or part of the pass-through deduction, including the amount of your business income, other sources of income and the nature of your business.

If your total taxable income — which includes interest and dividends, as well as income reported on Form W-2, if you also have a regular job — is less than $157,500 on an individual return or $315,000 on a joint return, you're a winner. You can deduct 20 percent of your qualified business income no matter what type of business you're in.

At higher income levels, the calculation gets more complicated. In an effort to prevent affluent doctors, lawyers and, say, hedge fund managers from gaming the system, Congress created a higher standard for professionals who provide personal services. For these business owners, the deduction phases out once total taxable income exceeds $157,500, or $315,000 for married couples, and disappears once taxable income tops $207,500 for singles and $415,000 for couples.

The tax law says the higher threshold applies to professionals who work in "specified service" fields, including law, health care, accounting, performing arts, consulting, athletics and financial services, as well as any business in which "the principal asset is the reputation or skill of one or more of their employees."

Your life insurance may not live as long as you do

Will you live to be 100? Will your life insurance also live that long?

Many people who have paid for whole life and universal life policies for many years are finding that even if they are current on all their payments, the policies will end or endow at age 95 or 98 or 100. (More recent policies typically mature at age 121, reflecting new actuarial life expectancy tables.)

It's simply the way policies were written years ago when life expectancies were far shorter than they are now. For policies written many years ago, it was thought the owner would rather have the cash if he or she lived that long. But even if there is a cash value at this point, the tax consequences could be devastating. The money that is distributed from the policy may be taxable — as opposed to life insurance death benefits, which pass tax-free to the beneficiary.

Centenarians make up less than 1 percent of the U.S. population, but their numbers are growing every year. According to the U.S. Census Special Report on Centenarians, in 2010 there were 53,364 centenarians in the United States or 1.73 per 10,000 people in the total population.

Could you live to be a centenarian? Check the possibilities at www.Livingto100.com. Fill out the simple form. You'll be asked about hereditary factors (how long your parents, siblings lived) and lifestyle questions (exercise, diet) and even whether you regularly floss your teeth and wear your seat belt. But with one click, you're likely to get a surprising estimate of your potential longevity.

Life insurance policies depend on two key ingredients that fuel the promise of death benefits: time and money. And both are impacted by longevity.

In a recent column I detailed the issues of running out of time, when it comes to term insurance policies, which are set to automatically expire after you have paid level premiums for a fixed number of years, typically 10 to 20 years. At that point, if you need insurance you might not be able to qualify for another policy because of your health.

Running out of money inside the policy is another dangerous possibility.

I've previously written about the likelihood that many older universal life policies could run out of money. Their annual premiums were based on the assumption that the extra money you deposited in premiums during the early years would earn a nice rate of interest, subsidizing the premiums in the later years.

But, as we all know, interest rates have been very low for the last decade. As a result, people nearing retirement age are being told they must pay unexpectedly larger premiums than those illustrated to keep their policies "in force."

And now people who are living longer are running into a third potential insurance policy crisis: outliving their policies. This crisis involves both time and money.

Traditional cash value or whole life policies were sold with an "endowment" or "maturity" at a certain age, typically age 90 or later. That meant you had paid in enough premiums over the years for the premiums paid to equal the death benefit. At that specific age, the death benefit expired and you would be paid the cash value.

As more people reach their endowment or maturity age, they are confronted with two problems. First, there might not be much cash value in the policy if it was used to subsidize premiums. The death benefit was far more valuable than the cash that could be distributed.

Even worse, the cash value when distributed might be subject to taxes on the portion that was earnings inside the policy. A tax hit comes just at the wrong time for people who were expecting to let their heirs get the death benefit tax free.

This is the time to check with the insurance company to make sure your policy isn't running out of time or money. And that's The Savage Truth.

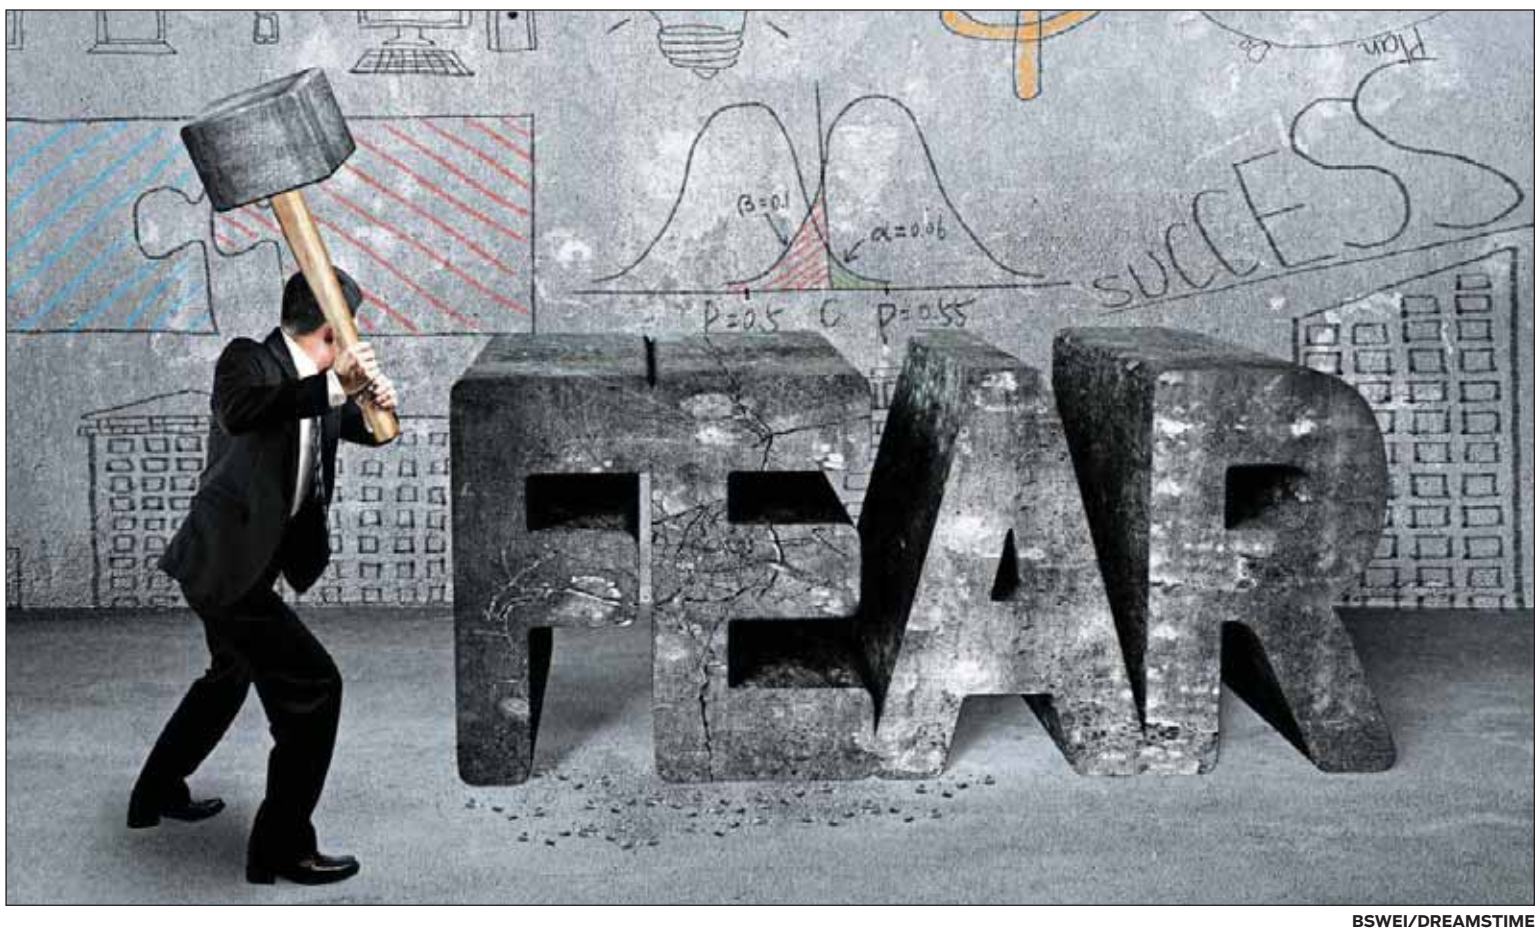
5 fears that sabotage your success

By Andrew Thomas
Inc.



BSWEI/DREAMSTIME

I spent a decent portion of my 20s limited by my fears or trying to avoid them altogether. If you're honest with yourself, you'll see how you also spend a great deal of time, energy and effort in order to avoid fear.

The truth is that fear cannot be eliminated. It's wired into your DNA and an evolutionary tool to help you survive. So why do some people succeed, or live boldly, while others live a life of mediocrity? The reason is successful people understand how to live with fear.

If you want to live boldly, and make bold decisions that are aligned with the life you truly want, then you need to understand your fears so you can reduce their power and achieve the results you want despite them.

Life is too short to live a half-lived life. Here are five powerful fears that keep you from living your greatness, and how to overcome them.

1. I'm scared that I won't be enough.

Our society, and especially consumerism, is designed to make you feel like you're not enough. We think, "If I can just get that promotion, sell my company or make a million dollars, then I'll be enough." Or, "If I can just buy that Mercedes, or that house, I'll be enough."

The problem with this approach to life is that no amount of money, success or stuff will ever be enough. That voice never stops. Once you buy a house, you'll notice all the houses that are bigger than your house. Or you'll only see the people who own two houses. It never ends.

The truth is that you are enough, right now, as you are. You don't need to keep searching outside yourself. Once you accept this, you then have the freedom to do anything you want.

2. I don't know how it will end.

The reality is that no one knows how most things in life will end. Yet you move forward in every area of your life despite not knowing the outcomes. Bold moves aren't any different.

For example, you won't start that new business because you don't know how it will end, but you will go see a movie without knowing the ending. What about sports? You don't know if you'll win the game when it starts, yet you play it anyway.

The only reason a bold move is more difficult than watching a movie is because you've applied meaning to the outcomes of the decision. You rely on those outcomes for your sense of self-worth or your identity. While giving up that meaning is easier said than done, if you treat a bold decision like a watching a movie, you'll be able to go for it.

3. I'm afraid I'll look bad (or won't look good).

If you take a moment and reflect — and if you're honest — you know how much energy you put into looking good, or avoiding looking bad, for others. We invest way too much of our self-worth and identity into external validation, and it manifests as the subconscious and conscious actions we take to look good to others.

The key to remedy this mindset is to put your focus back on you. Live for yourself and act in a way that is aligned with your integrity. This helps you take your power back, instead of giving it away to others.

4. I'm scared I might fail.

It's scary to go all-in on starting that business or making a big jump in your career. It's scary to choose the path less traveled and live boldly. It's even scarier when you know that one possibility of any decision is failure.

The truth that few people realize is that the fear of failure starts from the fear of not being enough and the fear of looking bad.

Again, you need to separate yourself (and your identity) from the outcomes. The truth is you don't know how anything in life will turn out, so put your focus on living boldly instead.

5. I don't know how to do it.

If you think about it, you've never known how to do anything in your life. You didn't know how to take your first steps, say your first word, ride a bike or have a first kiss. Yet you did it. Why is starting a business or making that career switch any different?

Life, business and careers are a process of figuring it out. So many people (especially successful people in tech) try to make the journey seem more sophisticated and brilliant than this. It's actually very simple: All we do in life is figure things out along the way.

Final word: You can't eliminate fear from the human experience. Human beings are hardwired to feel fear in order to survive. Fear will never go away, and neither will the voice inside your head that creates fearful thoughts.

Stop trying to defeat fear, or be fearless. Instead, dive into these fears and reduce the attachment you have to each one. What's on the other side of that process? The answer is the courage to show up to your dreams and live boldly despite the fear.

Consider this list and find the courage inside of you to boldly move forward.

PETER ROESCH 1929-2018

Architect studied with Mies van der Rohe

By Graydon Megan
Chicago Tribune

Architect Peter Roesch came to the Illinois Institute of Technology after World War II, a Fulbright scholar whose studies there with famed modernist architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe set the course for the rest of his life.

"He found really a meaning in architecture when he studied with Mies," said his wife, Vibeke "Biba" Roesch. His studies in Europe had taught him the components of buildings, from bricklaying to carpentry, but it all came together as he studied in Chicago in the early 1950s.

The impact on Roesch and his work was lasting, according to Chicago architect John Ronan, of John Ronan Architects.

"Peter represents a link from the Miesian past to the present," Ronan said. "He's part of this Chicago modern architecture legacy."

That Chicago modern legacy is perhaps best represented in the city by the Roesch-designed St. James Commons building, a handsome five-story building of dark bronze steel and glass at the southwest corner of Rush and Huron streets.

Roesch, 89, died of natural causes Sept. 24 in his home in a Mies building in Chicago's Lakeview neighborhood, his wife said.

Roesch was born in 1929 in Leipzig in what was then East Germany. He was about 16 at the end of World War II when his mother sold a piece of her jewelry to get money to allow him to travel to the West. Once out of Leipzig, he studied at several places in Europe, including an architectural school in Hamburg, his wife said.

From there, he qualified under the postwar Fulbright program to come to the United States and to IIT, where he studied under Mies, who became his mentor. After two years of studies in Chicago, Roesch returned to Germany to help with postwar rebuilding efforts in keeping with the spirit of the Fulbright program, his wife said.

A few years later, he entered a design contest. While he didn't win, the effort brought him to the attention of the Skidmore Owings & Merrill architecture firm in Chicago, and in the late 1950s he came to work for the firm here.

He met architect James Hammond at Skidmore and in the early 1960s, the two formed Hammond and Roesch, where they worked together for about 10 years. Among their projects is a distinctive bank building in Villa Park, originally the Villa Park Bank, on the southwest corner of St. Charles Road and Villa Avenue.

The 1964 building, now a BMO Harris bank, is notable for two exterior black steel trusses that support the roof and allow for a clear interior visible through glass walls. The exterior truss construction is similar to the Mies design for Crown Hall at IIT as well as an unbuilt Mies design for a fast-food restaurant.

After Hammond left the firm, Roesch continued to practice from an office that was part of his home.

Roesch taught architectural design at IIT for about 35 years until he retired five or six years ago.

Ronan, also a teacher at IIT, said the classes taught by Roesch and others are the main classes in which architecture students learn to design buildings.

"He was very talented but also had a very generous spirit and was very giving of his time," Ronan said.

Roesch, Ronan said, was committed to advancing the ideals of the Bauhaus philosophy that good design could better society.

"You saw this in his teaching. Affordable housing would be a topic of his studio," Ronan said. "He was like the best that the profession has to offer in terms of being talented but also being very generous. There was a real optimism about him."

In addition to his wife, Roesch is survived by daughters Katharina Walker and Michelle; sons Stefan and James; eight grandchildren; and two step-grandchildren.

Services are being planned.

In the Wake of the News

For 21 somber seconds Sunday, 21,812 people stood up inside the United Center before the Blackhawks home opener and showed their respect with silence.

A message on the scoreboard said it all: "FOREVER A BLACKHAWK." On the ice, Jill Mikita fought back tears after a touching three-minute video of highlights and interviews appropriately captured Stan Mikita, a Hawks center for 21 seasons and her husband for 55 years who died Aug. 7 from dementia. The tribute, set to music, celebrated a person as rare as he was a player — and this was the guy who leads the franchise in career games, assists and points.

"One of the things Stan always said was remember where you came from — he did," said Pat Foley, the legendary Hawks broadcaster surrounded at the lectern by Mikita's family and team ambassadors Bobby Hull, Tony Esposito, Denis Savard and Chris Chelios, all wearing red sweaters.

Hawks go overtime for 3rd game in row, fall despite 2 Kane goals in last 2 minutes

Don't arrive late for Blackhawks games. And if you know what's good for you, never ever leave early.

But understand that once in a while you might leave disappointed.

On Sunday night in their home opener at the United Center, the Hawks were nearly able to replicate the formula they used to win the first two games of the season. Build an early lead, lose it and then storm back late.

But instead of the Hawks prevailing in overtime for the third straight game it was Morgan Rielly's goal 19 seconds in the extra session that ended a wild affair and handed the Maple Leafs a 7-6 victory.

Patrick Kane scored game-tying goals twice in the final minutes of the third period, the first with 1 minute, 42 seconds remaining. Auston Matthews' second goal of the game momentarily put the Leafs back in front 6-5, but with 29 seconds left Kane again tied the game to send the 21,812 fans into delirium.

"Pretty crazy hockey game," Kane said. "It was a fun one. Too bad we couldn't get two points."

The superstars had a lot of fun in this one. For the Leafs, John Tavares had a hat trick to go along with Matthews' two goals. On a night honoring the legendary Stan

Mack knows just how to attack

Assistant coach Staley says ball-hawking skills are 'a part of his DNA'

BY DAN WIEDERER
Chicago Tribune

On the morning of Sept. 1, Bears outside linebackers coach Brandon Staley was easing into his day when his wife reached over to check her phone.

"First, it's your alarm," Staley said. "And then in the mornings, your phone is like the newspaper now. So that's what it was."

Quick check of the news, OK.

The day's first big headline: All-Pro pass rusher Khalil Mack was being traded?

Preparing to sign the richest contract for a defensive player in league history?

About to become a Bear?

Staley saw the reports coming from several news outlets. He gave it a second to sink in.

"My initial reaction, honestly, was this is the NFL. Anything can happen," Staley said. "People tell you that before you get here. Anything can happen in this league. So you never know."

Still, as instant as Staley's adrenaline rush was, he can't say the blockbuster trade that changed everything for the Bears came as a total surprise. That's just how much the young coach believes in the vision and aggressiveness of general manager Ryan Pace and coach Matt Nagy.

"I knew we were more than capable of something like that," Staley said. "So it didn't shock me. Because I know how special Ryan and Matt are."

Later that day, Pace and Nagy

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Michigan's timing perfect

Wisconsin will be thin for visit to Ann Arbor; Ferentz turns to trickery

TEDDY GREENSTEIN
On the Big Ten

Five things you should know about the Big Ten, including this: New Kirk > New Coke.

1. Michigan is getting Wisconsin at the perfect time. The Badgers beat Nebraska handily Saturday night but got beat up in the process. Faion Hicks was the only starting defensive back to make it through 60 minutes. Caesar Williams (leg) missed the game. Deron Harrell exited with a head injury. The marvelous D'Cota Dixon limped off with what looked like a right foot injury. Scott Nelson got ejected for targeting and will miss the first half of the Michigan game.

Coach Paul Chryst had to use true freshmen Donte Burton and Rachad Wildgoose as Nebraska threw for 407 yards, completing 26 of 44 throws.

"A lot of guys played," Chryst said, "and it wasn't always pretty."

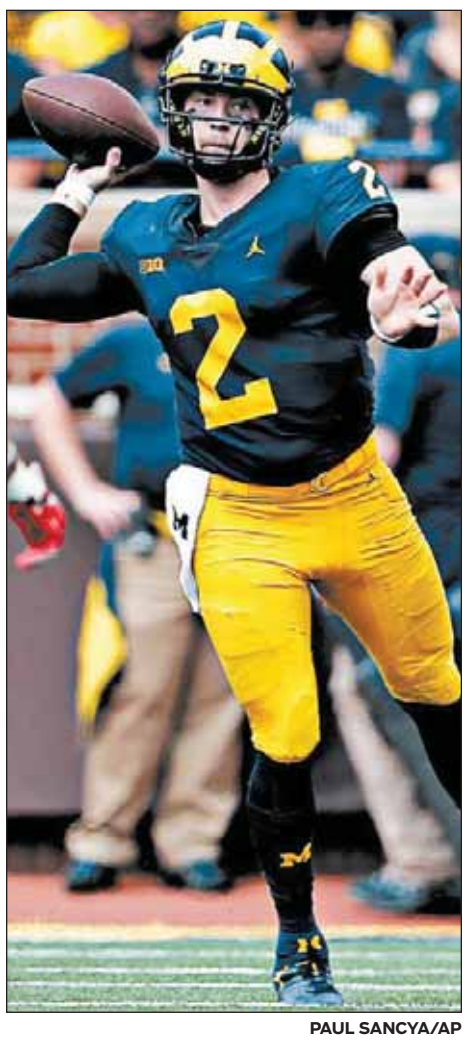
It begs the question: When will the sons of defensive coordinator and legendary 5-foot-8 walk-on Jim Leonhard be ready? Wait, Leonhard is only 35? Never mind.

Michigan doesn't strike much fear in opponents with a passing game that ranks ninth in the Big Ten and averages less than one pass play of 40-plus yards per game. But still. Shea Patterson has a cannon, at least by college standards, and field stretcher Tarik Black is getting closer to returning. Wolverines Wire reported that, five weeks past foot surgery, he has shed his walking boot.

2. #NewKirk is a thing. Dirty jokes can be funnier when told by the Bob Sagets of the world. (Wait, weren't you the dad on "Full House"?) Kirk Ferentz has allowed generations of Iowa fans to snooze during games with some of his predictable play calls. Which is why a moment from Saturday's 48-31 thumping of Minnesota was a relative double shot from Starbucks.

Leading 14-7 in the second quarter, the Hawkeyes lined up to kick a field goal. But quarterback Nate Stanley remained on the field in shotgun formation while seven players split to the far right. You have to watch the play several times to understand what transpired, but the result had tight end T.J. Hockenson receiving a one-handed snap that sailed along the line of scrimmage. Hockenson then spun and sprinted around right end for the touchdown on a play called "Herky."

"There's a little bit of risk/reward," Ferentz said. "They convinced me, and it was however many guys we have on our staff versus one. That's one vote I did lose."



PAUL SANCYA/AP

Michigan's passing game hasn't been dynamic, but Shea Patterson has the arm to test a beat-up Wisconsin secondary.

3. Dwayne Haskins will be tough to beat for the Chicago Tribune Silver Football. Duh, right? The Ohio State quarterback has 25 touchdown passes. No other Big Ten quarterback has more than 11. He is completing a conference-best 71.7 percent of his throws for 1,919 yards. His 30-yard touchdown pass to Binjimen Victor in Saturday's 49-23 beating of Indiana appeared to be dropped from the heavens.

"The kid is just blessed by the hands of God, quite honestly," receiver Johnnie Dixon said. "He works his butt off, but God truly hand-picked Dwayne and blessed him with the tools."

You could make a terrific case for Penn State's Trace McSorley, who outplayed Haskins last week in State College, Pa. And it would be foolish to count out Wisconsin's Jonathan Taylor, who is on pace for a 2,000-yard rushing season. But it will be hard for Big Ten coaches (each gets a vote but cannot cast it for his own player) to snub the divine Haskins.

4. Guess who defended the Big Ten West's honor? Northwestern and Illinois, that's who. The East was 4-0 against the West entering Saturday, with victories by Penn State (vs. Illinois), Michigan (vs. Nebraska and Northwestern) and Maryland (vs. Minnesota). But the Wildcats took down Michigan State 29-19 and the Illini smashed Rutgers 38-17, getting 100-plus-yard rushing games from tailback Reggie Corbin and quarterback AJ Bush Jr.

Yes, Illinois benefited from some friendly bounces and gave up 267 passing yards. Northwestern lost top cornerback Montre Hartage to injury and has almost no kicking game to speak of. But, hey, Chicago should enjoy these wins. NU coach Pat Fitzgerald said of his role: "I'm not (Knute) Rockne, I'm not (Vince) Lombardi. To me, it's not real hard: Get your feet apart and block a guy. Throw a ball, catch a ball."

5. Nebraska still needs to get smarter. The Cornhuskers lead the FBS with 10.4 penalties per game. But coach Scott Frost, who has been hypercritical of his players, saw improvement Saturday at Camp Randall Stadium: "We didn't have any dumb penalties, selfish penalties. There were hardly any busts of assignments. I told the team: Sometimes when you're sick, you have to puke it out."

Good stuff. And let's hope safety Antonio Reed wises up as well. He's the one who unloaded on Colorado quarterback Steven Montez, drawing an unnecessary-roughness penalty that might have cost his team the game. Against Wisconsin, Reed slammed into ball carrier Garrett Groshek and began celebrating. One problem: Groshek wasn't tackled. He kept on running.

BIG TEN POWER RANKINGS
Last week's rankings in parentheses.

1. Ohio State (1)
The Buckeyes' toughest foe over the next three games (Minnesota, Purdue, Nebraska) will be apathy.

2. Penn State (2)
James Franklin's quest to push the Nittany Lions from great to elite begins Saturday against Michigan State.

3. Wisconsin (3)
Not sure Jonathan Taylor really ever left. But he's back after demolishing Nebraska for 221 yards and three TDs.

4. Michigan (4)
Ready for the gauntlet, Wolverines? Next three opponents: Wisconsin, Michigan State, Penn State.

5. Iowa (6)
The Hawkeyes nearly scoring half a hundred will take some getting used to.

6. Northwestern (10)
The Wildcats have won five straight on the road — but are 0-3 at home. What's buried under Ryan Field?

7. Michigan State (5)
The heat is on offensive coordinator Dave Warner after the NU defense owned Sparty in the fourth quarter.

8. Indiana (9)
The fiery Tom Allen ended his postgame news conference with: "This program is working hard to be special. That ain't gonna change." Then he slapped the table and walked off.

9. Maryland (7)
How's this for trivia? Or trivial? Name the only school using Rutgers as its homecoming opponent? Maryland.

10. Minnesota (8)
Receiver Rashod Bateman, who grabbed two TD passes against Iowa, is a true believer. He has "R.T.B." tattooed on his forearm, short for "Row the Boat."

11. Purdue (11)
David Blough, who began the season as the No. 2 QB, has been sensational: 68.2 completion percentage, seven touchdowns, one pick.

12. Illinois (12)
Those gaudy rushing stats count even though they came against Rutgers.

13. Nebraska (13)
The Cornhuskers have lost nine straight — and that's not their only crummy streak. They've racked up 10 or more penalties in every game this season.

14. Rutgers (14)
Rutgers staged a "Blackout" — for a day game in a stadium with about 15,000 fans. Insert face-palm emoji.

Kelly says Irish 'looser' than monster '12 team

BY TEDDY GREENSTEIN | Chicago Tribune

Notre Dame has started 6-0 three times under Brian Kelly. But the Irish have been 7-0 only once, in 2012.

So the question arose Sunday: Does this undefeated team feel like that one?

"It's such a different club," Kelly said. "It was constructed differently. (The 2012 team) was largely put together on the backs of a great defense and ball-control offense and slugging it out to the very end. Small ball, if you will. We won some very, very close games."

The 2012 Irish allowed only 10.3 points per game before losing to Alabama in the BCS title game. The Irish offense surpassed 30 points just three times.

This team's offense has been transformed under quarterback Ian Book, averaging 46.3 points in victories over Wake Forest, Stanford and Virginia Tech.

"The similarities," Kelly said, "are that they know how to win and (know) the things you have to do in terms of week-to-week preparation."

The 2012 team beat Stanford in its sixth game — its third victory over a ranked team. This 6-0 Irish squad beat Virginia Tech 45-23, also its third win over a ranked team.

The 2012 team still had to win at No. 8 Oklahoma — and seal the deal at USC. This team has no currently ranked teams left on its schedule, with Florida State losing Saturday for the third time.

Again the Trojans, playing at home, will get a final say on Notre Dame's regular season.

Kelly said his 2012 team was exceptionally mature with the likes of Zack Martin, Theo Riddick, Tyler Eifert and, of course, Manti Te'o.

"That was a very professional, older, veteran group," he said. "Not that this is a non-veteran group, but you know, we signed 27 players in our last (recruiting) class and 15 of them were on this (Virginia Tech) trip. This is a younger group that is a little bit looser."

Does Kelly like having a loose group?

"As long as they do their job," he said, "I have no problem with having to listen to music that I'm not very familiar with. I can adapt."

6-0 Irish showing maturity

BY LAMOND POPE | Post-Tribune

Notre Dame cleared a big hurdle Saturday night while keeping its record perfect and its College Football Playoff hopes alive.

The Irish (6-0) pulled away in the second half in Blacksburg, Va., for a 45-23 victory against No. 24 Virginia Tech. Here are three takeaways from the game:

1. This Irish team is different. Would Notre Dame be ready for the atmosphere at Lane Stadium? Or would the Irish flop like last November at Miami?

The opening possession indicated this year would be different. Dexter Williams capped a 12-play, 75-yard drive with a 1-yard touchdown run. The quick start showed how much the team has grown.

Leading by one early in the third quarter and with their backs to the wall — or more accurately, to their end zone — the Irish responded. Williams broke free for a 97-yard touchdown run to flip momentum back to Notre Dame.

Ian Book's two touchdown passes to Miles Boykin later in the quarter drove home the point there wouldn't be a repeat of the Miami debacle.

2. Khalid Kareem exemplified the defensive effort. Kareem fought past two blocks on his way to Virginia Tech quarterback Ryan Willis late in the second quarter. Willis initially slipped away, but the Irish defensive end got back on his feet and jarred the ball loose. Cornerback Julian Love recovered the fumble and returned it 45 yards for a touchdown.

The defense as a whole stepped up.

When a poor punt snap gave Virginia Tech great field position earlier in the second quarter, the Irish held the Hokies to a field goal. Virginia Tech settled for another field goal two possessions later after reaching Notre Dame's 1-yard-line.

3. Boykin is on a roll. Entering the Sept. 29 game against Stanford, Boykin had nine receptions for 167 yards and no touchdowns. In the last two weeks, the redshirt junior from Providence has 19 catches for 261 yards and three scores.

Boykin's eight-catch, 117-yard performance Saturday showed why the Irish had high expectations for him entering the season.

Hawks pay tribute to Mikita

overtime — the organization that takes legacy seriously honored the old, too, with a stirring pregame ceremony.

Then the Hawks — who said they were inspired by Mikita's memory — did their best to keep the nostalgia narrative going, riding Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews as they have so many times to salvage a point against one of the league's most talented teams. Kane scored twice in the final 84 seconds of regulation to spark a furious rally and Toews continued his resurgent start.

"Whatever you want to call it, his play over three games has been pretty amazing," coach Joel Quenneville said postgame.

Toews exhibits many of the same qualities that made Mikita special: a natural leader who distinguishes himself with grit in the corners and grace under pressure. He turned 30 in April yet has looked young enough in the first three games to still be asked for his ID when buying a drink. Nothing about this Hawks season would be more welcome than a rejuvenated Toews, who scored his fifth goal nine minutes into the first period. He scored only 20 all of last season, the second straight year when Toews left Hawks fans wanting more.

You could say something about Toews appears different in the early going or — to be more respectful of one of the NHL's most accomplished players — that everything looks familiar. Toews' style — he seems quicker — has matched his substance. This is the Toews who led the Hawks to three Stanley Cups in six seasons. This is the player the Hawks must rely upon if they ever get close again to winning a fourth before he retires. This is a glimpse of the past, however brief, good enough to feel slightly better about the Hawks' immediate future.

Meet the new captain, same as the old captain. Finally. On a football Sunday in October as the Bears rested, on a date circled on Chicago's calendar months ago for the Cubs, the Hawks provided hope by feeding off Toews early and Kane late.

"Top players find a way in big moments," Quenneville said.

Toews scored the game-winner in overtime Saturday to give him a hat trick, the kind of offense the Hawks need if they have any hope of making a playoff run. The Hawks need more than Toews' example, more than the 52 points in 74 games he produced last year, more than just the effort and intensity that makes him their most responsible center on both ends. Realistically, for the Hawks to scare anybody again, Toews must threaten opponents as a scorer too the way he has early.

On the Hawks' first goal at the 11-minute mark of the first period, Toews tussled for position in front of the net with defenseman Morgan Rielly — where he does his best work. On cue, Toews deflected Dominik Kahun's shot past Leafs goalie Garret Sparks to give the Hawks a 1-0 lead. On the Hawks' second goal, Toews demonstrated good hands in picking the puck from Leafs winger Kasperi Kapanen and fed Duncan Keith to begin a passing clinic that resulted in Alex DeBrincat finding the back of the net.

The Leafs, who entered the season as a legitimate Cup contender, rode the play of 21-year-old MVP candidate Auston Matthews and $77 million free-agent John Tavares, a Marian Hossa-like addition for Toronto whose hat trick proved too much to overcome. The Hawks hung tough despite a defense that lacks more quality than quantity and cagey 34-year-old goaltender Cam Ward, who deserves credit for competing three straight starts in four days but still makes Hawks fans long for the return of Corey Crawford.

Speaking of Crawford, the goalie heard chants of "COREY!" when introduced on the red carpet during the pregame ceremony. Crawford, expected back later this month after not playing since last December because of a concussion, probably didn't mind missing this shootout.

"You're not going to find a more entertaining game all season long," Foley told his TV audience. On the Hawks bench, even Quenneville managed a rare smile.

Maybe Coach Q suspects that reports of his team's demise have been greatly exaggerated. After seeing how young the Hawks' older stars looked in the first week, it is easy to agree.

David Haugh is a special contributor to the Chicago Tribune.

'Pretty crazy' game results in OT defeat

Mikita, a one-time center and Blackhawks captain who died Aug. 7, current captain and center Jonathan Toews scored for the third straight game to give him five on the season.

The Hawks had won their previous 44 games in which Kane and Toews both scored goals, including the first two games of this season.

"I'm sure the fans liked it," Hawks defenseman Duncan Keith said. "I don't know if we want it to be like that. It's good to have those games, but nice to come out on the winning end."

The power play, which was ineffective last season, hasn't shown any evidence of being improved. The Hawks are 0-for-10 after failing to score on three chances Sunday, including a dismal four-minute opportunity midway through the second period that brought out the season's first United Center boos.

"Not very good tonight," Quenneville said of the power play. "Other than that, it's been fine."

Hawks goalie Cam Ward has now allowed 14 goals while starting all three games, but Quenneville said goaltending wasn't the reason so many goals are being scored.

"It's really early and you're seeing a lot more scoring in the league this year," Quenneville said. "I don't know the real reason, but the game is fast and things are happening quick and you've got to be ready to go."

The early part of the game was an indicator of what lay ahead. Toews scored with 11 minutes left in the first when he parked himself in front of the net and deflected in a shot from Dominik Kahun, whose assist gave him the first point of his NHL career. Kahun's second helper came a few moments later when he made the final pass on a beautiful tic-tac-toe goal to Alex DeBrincat to put the Hawks ahead 2-0.

The Leafs halted the Hawks' momentum with a pair of quick goals to tie it up. Kasperi Kapanen split Erik Gustafsson and Jan Rutta for a breakaway at the 5:51 mark, then Matthews scored 34 seconds later.

The Leafs took their first lead with 16:04 left in the second when the Hawks failed to clear on several occasions and Tavares eventually found a loose puck near the corner and easily slid it past Ward. They lost it less than two minutes later as John Hayden, a healthy scratch in the Hawks' first two games, whipped in a rebound off a Henri Jokiharju slap shot.

"Usually you see those type of games in playoffs," Kane said. "But I think both teams this year are trying to get off to a good start. Sometimes you're going to see these hard-fought games where no teams quit."

BLACKHAWKS NOTES

Forsberg getting antsy on bench

By Jimmy Greenfield
Chicago Tribune

Despite a schedule that found the Blackhawks playing three games over the first four days of the season, Cam Ward was in net for the third straight game Sunday night against the Maple Leafs.

Coach Joel Quenneville said he thought the 34-year-old Ward would best help the team maintain momentum built up in the two victories to start the season.

Meanwhile, backup goalie Anton Forsberg is left to wonder if he'll get a start before Corey Crawford returns from a concussion.

The Hawks have been targeting Oct. 18 for Crawford's season debut, but that's not set in stone. The Hawks have only two more games until then.

"I know I can play at this level," said Forsberg, who last season started a team-high 30 games for the Hawks.

"Last year I had a lot of good games. A lot I was really bad. I've got to get those down as few as possible, hopefully none, and just try to be as consistent as possible."

So far, so good: Henri Jokiharju recorded the first two points of his career in Saturday night's win over the Blues — he had the primary assist on Jonathan Toews' game-tying goal and the secondary assist on the game-winner in OT — and saw more ice time than 33-year-old Brent Seabrook, who has 1,007 games under his belt.

But it's the poise and maturity of the 19-year-old defenseman that has impressed Quenneville the most.

"He's only going to get better in how he's going to be reading situations, how he's going to be playing around his net in his own end," Quenneville said. "But I like how he wants the puck. He really has good patience and good play recognition."

One-timers: John Hayden was in the lineup for the first time after being a healthy scratch the first two games. He replaced Andreas Martinsen. ... Over their last 44 games, the Hawks are 44-0-0 when Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews each score a goal.

BULLS

Boylen relished Hornets' interview

Coach called it 'an uplifting experience'

By K.C. Johnson
Chicago Tribune

To avoid the logistical hassles of the Chicago Marathon, the Bulls flew to Charlotte on Sunday to practice there before Monday's preseason game against the Hornets.

It's an organization Bulls associate head coach Jim Boylen knows well. That's because in May, Boylen interviewed for the Hornets head coaching job that went to James Borrego.

"I was really thankful for the opportunity to go through that experience and that preparation," Boylen said in an interview. "To assume that next seat when you're not in that next seat is an interesting thing in your mind.

"I've been a head coach in college (at Utah). So I've been though some of those feelings. But I haven't been a head coach in the NBA. So it was just a great process to put that pressure on yourself of what you would do if you were the guy and go through that dry run. Everything from, 'What are you going to say to the media if you get the job?' to 'How your first meeting is going to go with this player.'

"What was really fun for me was how supportive John (Paxson), Gar (Forman), Fred (Hoiberg) and the Reinsdorfs were during the process and the making of my interview book. I think they were as excited as I was. And that made me feel like they really cared for me and respected what I had done for the Bulls and the chance I might have."

Boylen, who went 69-60 in four seasons at Utah from 2007 to 2011 with one NCAA tournament appearance, came to the Bulls in 2015 from the same Spurs organization for which Borrego worked the last three seasons.

Save for those four seasons at Utah, Boylen has been an assistant coach in the NBA since 1992. He worked under Rudy Tomjanovich when the Rockets won back-to-back NBA titles in 1994 and 1995.

Last April 1, Boylen coached a home victory over the Wizards because a very ill Hoiberg had to leave the United Center. Interviewing with the Hornets only whetted Boylen's appetite for more.

"It was exciting," he said. "I didn't get the job. But it's still kind of a transformational experience. You look at the job you have in a different light. And you feel you're close to something that's been a goal of yours for a long time. It was just an uplifting experience all the way around. I didn't get it. So some may call that a negative. But I viewed the entire experience as really positive.

"I felt I did well. I felt I was myself. Obviously, I told them what I thought they needed to do as a group to get that thing going in the right direction. I was very direct."

Boylen said he interviewed for three hours with Hornets general manager Mitch Kupchak and assistant general manager Buzz Peterson.

"We covered everything," Boylen said.

Back with the Bulls, Boylen now is charged with shoring up a defense that is incorporating more switching this season. With so many young players, there's plenty of work to do. The Bulls finished 28th in defensive rating last season.

"The main thing to do is to support Fred," Boylen said.

ROUNDUP

Another Browns breakthough in OT

Associated Press

On their third try in five weeks, the Browns finally figured out how to win in overtime Sunday.

Rookie Greg Joseph's 37-yard field goal — a knuckleball that barely cleared the crossbar — with 2 seconds left in OT gave the Browns a 12-9 win over the Ravens.

After rookie Baker Mayfield drove the Browns (2-2-1) into position, Joseph, signed after Week 2 following Zane Gonzalez's release, lined his kick through for the team's first AFC North win in 19 tries.

"It wasn't a pretty kick but it went in," Mayfield said. "It also wasn't a pretty win, but it counts."

Chiefs 30, Jaguars 14: The Chiefs' defense forced Jaguars quarterback Blake Bortles into five turnovers, including a pick-six by defensive tackle Chris Jones. Patrick Mahomes threw for 313 yards and ran for a score, though he also threw his first two picks of the season.

Panthers 33, Giants 31: Graham Gano connected on a career-long 63-yard field goal with 1 second left to lift the Panthers. Gano has made 35 in a row at home since 2016.

Jets 34, Broncos 16: Isaiah Crowell ran for a franchise-record 219 yards, including a 77-yard touchdown, and Sam Darnold threw two touchdown passes to Robby Anderson, including a 76-yarder.

JOE ROBBINS/GETTY

Browns rookie kicker Greg Joseph, who joined the team after Week 2, celebrates his game-winner in OT.

Lions 31, Packers 23: Matthew Stafford threw two touchdown passes and LeGarrette Blount ran for two scores. Packers kicker Mason Crosby missed a career-high four field goals and botched an extra point.

Steelers 41, Falcons 17: Ben Roethlisberger and Antonio Brown connected on two second-half touchdowns. Brown has 64 touchdown catches, moving him past John Stallworth into second place in team history.

Vikings 23, Eagles 21: Kirk Cousins threw for 301 yards and one touchdown, and Linval Joseph returned a fumble 64 yards for a score in a rematch of last season's NFC championship game.

Rams 33, Seahawks 31: Todd Gurley rushed for three touchdowns, and Jared Goff passed for 321 yards and a score as the Rams remained unbeaten.

Bengals 27, Dolphins 17: Michael Johnson returned an interception for the tying score, and Sam Hubbard went 19 yards with a fumble for the clinching touchdown, rallying the Bengals from a 17-point deficit.

Chargers 26, Raiders 10: Philip Rivers threw for 339 yards and two touchdowns, the 59th 300-yard passing game of Rivers' 15-year career and his eighth against the Raiders.

Cardinals 28, 49ers 18: Josh Rosen threw a 75-yard touchdown pass to fellow rookie Christian Kirk on the Cardinals' first play from scrimmage and the defense had five takeaways. in the Cards' first win.

Bills 13, Titans 12: Stephen Hauschka hit a 46-yard field goal as time expired, and the Bills' defense forced three turnovers.

Cowboys at Texans: The matchup was only the fifth time these Texas teams have met. The Cowboys have won the last three, with the Texans' only win coming in the franchise's first game in 2002.

AROUND THE NFL

■ Giants: Odell Beckham Jr. said he spoke with his teammates before Sunday's loss to the Panthers to clear the air over comments he made last week. Beckham had talked about quarterback Eli Manning and why the team isn't throwing the ball downfield or playing with more energy. He said after the game that "sometimes stuff comes off the wrong way" and that "words can be portrayed in any kind of light." Beckham had eight catches for 131 yards and a touchdown. He also threw a 57-yard touchdown pass to Saquon Barkley after receiving a lateral from Manning.

■ Panthers: Eric Reid called his return to the NFL "bittersweet," saying it still hurts that his friend Colin Kaepernick has been "robbed" of his dream to play again in the NFL. While the safety is back in the league playing for the Panthers, Kaepernick remains a free agent. Reid, who was signed as a free agent by the Panthers on Sept. 27, continued his tradition of kneeling during the national anthem before the game.

■ Dolphins: Jakeem Grant's 70-yard punt return made him the first Dolphin to score on a reception, a kickoff return and a punt return in the same season. He had a 102-yard kickoff return against the Titans in the opener. Grant joins Dante Hall (2003) as the only NFL players with a 100-yard kickoff return, a 70-yard punt return and a 50-yard touchdown catch in the same season. The last NFL player with a touchdown of all three varieties was the Chiefs' Tyreek Hill in 2016.

■ Browns: Rookie cornerback Denzel Ward continues to dazzle. The No. 4 overall draft pick intercepted the Ravens' Joe Flacco in the first half and then blocked Justin Tucker's 48-yard field-goal attempt on the final play of the first half. Ward has three interceptions this season, and he's impressed his teammates with his toughness. "The dude was everywhere again," Browns defensive end Myles Garrett said.

■ Notable injuries: Jets CB Buster Skrine (concussion); Broncos CB Adam Jones (leg); Browns WR Rashard Higgins (knee); Titans LT Taylor Lewan (foot); Dolphins LT Laremy Tunsil (concussion); Jaguars RB Corey Grant (foot), LT Josh Wells (groin); Chiefs LB Justin Houston (hamstring), RG Laurent Duvernay-Tardif (fractured fibia); Packers LB Nick Perry (ankle), CB Kevin King (chin); Lions RB Kerryon Johnson (ankle), CB Teez Tabor (groin), CB Jamal Agnew (knee); Vikings LT Riley Reiff (foot); Eagles S Corey Graham (hamstring); Rams WR Brandin Cooks (concussion), WR Cooper Kupp (concussion); Cardinals OL Mike Iupati (shoulder), OL Andre Smith (hamstring); 49ers RB Matt Breida (ankle).

Mack has knack for attacking the ball

NUCCIO DINUZZO/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Newcomer Khalil Mack has been a huge hit — on the field and with fans — in his first month with the Bears.

called Staley on speakerphone with confirmation of Mack's arrival.

"You just knew," Staley said, "that phone call was going to be one that would change your life."

Indeed, over the last month Staley's life has been changed. He has had a hands-on role in Mack's transition to Chicago, in his spectacular emergence in the Bears defense. He has spent early mornings at Halas Hall tutoring the star outside linebacker on the details of the system. He has watched as Mack's ultra-confident yet humble demeanor has inspired teammates.

Recently, Staley sat down to share his insights into Mack's production and presence. Here's a partial transcript of that exchange.

A month into the Khalil Mack experience, what has been the most enjoyable part of this whole thing?

Well, a lot has happened in a month. I think the thing that you enjoy the most is that you get the same guy every single day. It's the consistency that he plays with, that he prepares with, that's something that really stands out. It affects all of us — his teammates, his coaches, everyone in the organization — in a really positive way.

How would you describe his personality? In the limited time we've had to get to know him, he comes across with a very, very chill demeanor.

Yeah. For me, it's that phrase "calm is contagious." That fits him perfectly. The guy is so steady no matter what the situation is. Practice. Game. Just around the building. He just has a great way about him. Extremely composed. And that helps everybody immensely. Because everybody feels like something good is going to happen when they're around him.

A month into the season, he's on pace for 16 strip-sacks. No one's expecting him to keep up that pace, obviously. But what makes him so dangerous in that regard?

From the moment he got here, you just knew that his goal wasn't just to beat the man, it's to go get the ball. He has the innate ability to see the football on his way to the quarterback. When Leonard (Floyd) tipped the ball in pass coverage (against the Buccaneers), Khalil almost caught the ricochet. You could see his eyes going there. And that's exactly the way he practices. We show our guys all the time in practice the way he is in one-on-one pass rush or in a team drill. You can see him always attacking the football. It's just a part of his DNA. And it's something that has made our defense even that much better.

When you say "calm is contagious" how have you seen that?

As far as our outside linebackers, he's just a steady guy. On the field. In drills. In between series, whether it's a practice or a game. And that affects people in a positive way. He has so much confidence in himself. And that can't help but spread to his teammates. Like, hey, this is going to turn out OK.

In the Arizona game, for example, we didn't get off to a great start. But one of the beautiful moments in that game was he kind of gathered the defense together after the second touchdown off the sudden change. He got everybody together and gave everybody a sense of calm. And then we went out there and played the way we could, the way we're capable of playing. He had a lot to do with that. Him. Danny (Trevathan). Akiem (Hicks). Those guys got the other guys together and I think that led to us finishing out the first half. And then obviously we went on that great run in the second half.

What have you learned about Khalil and what has impressed you most since he got here?

How steady he is. The consistency of his demeanor each and every day, each and every moment that he's on the field, that he's in a meeting, game or practice. You're getting the same guy each and every day. No matter what the situation is — the highest of highs like in Green Bay or the lowest of the low like maybe the first half of the Arizona game — same guy. That gives incredible confidence to his teammates, to his coaches. I use that phrase "calm is contagious." That really impacts all of us in a real positive way.

Khalil has such a mellow nature in conversation. And that's interesting given that on the field he's the opposite of calm, the opposite of mellow. How does that strike you?

His game and the way he plays would suggest a much different personality. But it could be him just saving his energy for the field. You can't say enough about his parents. The way they've raised him, just the man that he is, it's remarkable.

Obviously this has been a whirlwind transition for him. He's come to a new city, new team, trying to find a new place to live. And all of this while trying to be an impact player. Have you kept a pulse on how he's handled all of that away from football?

Our organization has done a great job in helping him transition. It's taken so many parts. Coaching staff. Training staff. Equipment. Our personnel people. Operations. He also has a great family that has helped him transition from Oakland here to Chicago. I know he closed on a place recently. And then there are still all these other logistical details of truly making this home. The Bears organization has played a big part in that transition. And he just has such a great supporting cast at home that kind of allows him to just be himself and to give his best. It's a credit to a lot of people.

What does it say about his willingness to be a teammate in that he is helping offensive linemen out in practice — "Hey, I beat you on this, here's what you could be doing differently"? What does it say that he's taking interest in helping like that?

Khalil understands the impact that he can have on so many people within the organization. There are a lot of eyes on him. And he sets the example of how we practice. Before every practice rep, you'll see him tell the defense to take the field. And then he runs to the ball in practice. It's like a race to the ball. And that's the way it is in the game too. People on both sides of the ball see that energy he has toward his craft and it multiplies. As a coach, as a leader you love that term "multiplier." Just a guy who can make a lot of other people better. And he certainly has that quality.

Vic Fangio said recently that there is no prima donna in him. How does that strike you for a superstar of his status?

It's rare. In this day and age, where there is so much attention you all the time. Social media, 24/7 news coverage. It just speaks to the foundation he was given by his folks in being a well-rounded young man and a guy who has earned everything that he has gotten. And when you have to come up the way he did, when you know what it takes to get to his level, when you understand that path, you're never going to stray from that path. You're going to keep going.

And I know that he feels like he is nowhere near being done. He has a lot left to accomplish in his career.

I get the sense that he doesn't even remotely understand how big he can be and in some respects how big he already is in this city. Megastar, huge market, football-crazed city. Yet it hasn't quite sunk in on him yet on what he can and already does mean to this organization and Chicago.

He's really focused on his game. And he's focused on his team. And that power of focus is an understanding of what the most important thing is. Not having too global of a view really helps him. He's just worried about attacking the opponent, attacking that day. And that's where you see him improving.

With great players, their standard for themselves is so much higher than anybody else's. And what they're most concerned with is what their film looks like. It's that whole artistic thing. An artist can spot their flaws before anyone else. And he definitely has that.

He has talked about taking pride in having an impact on his teammates. Why have you sensed that they've responded to him the way they do?

Production. Production is something you have to start with. But then they also see what type of person he is, what kind of competitor he is. The humility that he has. The respect for the game. And when you see your best player attack each day the way that he does and how he carries himself no matter what — high or low — you can't help but want to follow that.

It's a little absurd to think about what he's done and the impact he has made in a month, isn't it?

The more you're around him, the less surprised you get. ... From the moment he got here, you just had a strong sense that he was capable of more than anybody you had ever worked with. And it's a testament to the players that are around him here too.

I know he had a strong start to his career (with the Raiders). But I don't know that he's ever played with the caliber of players that we have here around him on defense. And he's thrilled by that. To me, that's another side of this story that needs to be told. Danny. Roquan. Eddie Jackson. Akiem. He knows he doesn't have to do it all. He can just be himself. And that's going to be plenty good enough.

And these guys have all fit together really well. That's important. Khalil would fit in great just about anywhere. But in our locker room with these guys, they've just really, really meshed well.

Miley, Kratz help red-hot Brewers eliminate Rockies

JOHN LEYBA/AP

DENVER — The 38-year-old journeyman catcher spotted his Brewers teammates spilling out of the dugout. Erik Kratz then saw his reliever standing alone.

So he took off for Josh Hader to give him "the biggest hug. Because you celebrate all your celebrations. Because you never know if you're going to get another one," Kratz said.

Wade Miley pitched masterfully into the fifth inning before turning it over to a lights-out bullpen, Kratz kept up his torrid hitting and the Brewers blanked the Rockies 6-0 in Game 3 on Sunday to sweep their NL Division Series.

The Brewers have won 11 straight dating to the regular season and advance to their first NL Championship Series since 2011.

"One at a time, man," MVP candidate Christian Yelich said. "That's what we've been saying, one at a time. Focus on the now."

With manager Craig Counsell making all the right moves, the pitching staff held Nolan Arenado, Trevor Story and the Rockies to two runs and 14 hits in the series.

"The story of the series for us was certainly our pitching," Counsell said.

Making his postseason debut, Miley toughed out the elements — he wore short sleeves when the temperature was 46 degrees — and was even tougher on Rockies hitters. The left-hander allowed three hits in 4 2/3 innings.

A procession of five relievers allowed one hit the rest of the way. With two on, Hader got Ian Desmond to fly out to end the ninth and start an on-field celebration.

Kratz helped by going 3-for-4 with a double Sunday and 5-for-8 in the series.

"I really feel like I've played my last game for the last 12 years because the game doesn't owe anybody anything," Kratz said. "When you understand that, you appreciate these times more than anything else."

The Rockies were shut out twice in the series and hit .146. Their three All-Stars — Story, Arenado and Charlie Blackmon — finished the series with a combined five hits.

"We fought, but we might not have played our best," Rockies manager Bud Black said. "Part of it is how the opposition played."

Acuna slam sets tone

Rookie's HR keeps Braves in series despite tight finish

By Charles Odum

JOHN AMIS/AP

An excited Ronald Acuna Jr. starts his home run trot after hitting a grand slam in the Braves' five-run second inning.

ATLANTA — Reliever Arodys Vizcaino escaped his own jam in a nervy ninth inning, and the Braves held off the Dodgers 6-5 Sunday night to cut their deficit in the NL Division Series to 2-1.

Rookie Ronald Acuna Jr. hit a grand slam that helped the Braves build an early 5-0 lead. They blew that advantage, but Freddie Freeman hit a tiebreaking homer in the sixth.

In the ninth, the Dodgers got runners on first and second with no outs. Vizcaino came back from a 3-0 count to strike out slugger Max Muncy, then fanned Manny Machado on a wild pitch that moved the runners to second and third.

With the entire crowd at SunTrust Park standing, chanting and chopping, Vizcaino fanned a swinging Brian Dozier to end it.

Shut out in the first two games at Dodger Stadium, the NL East champion Braves bounced back.

"My heart's still pounding," Freeman said, moments after the last out. "That's how we've been all year."

"I like our chances. We've got a uniform on, so we know we've got a chance," he said.

At 20, Acuna became the youngest player to hit a postseason grand slam — Mickey Mantle was 21 when he did it for the Yankees in the 1953 World Series.

Acuna connected in the second, right after Dodgers rookie Walker Buehler walked Braves starting pitcher Sean Newcomb on four pitches.

Freeman connected on the first pitch from former teammate Alex Wood to put the Braves back on top.

Chris Taylor hit a two-run homer, and Muncy added a tying homer in the fifth to lead the Dodgers' comeback.

Tagged at the outset, Buehler regained control as the Dodgers began their rally. Newcomb was pulled after a pair of walks in the third and Justin Turner hit an RBI single off Kevin Gausman. Taylor also scored when Acuna bobbled the ball in left field for an error.

Taylor connected off Gausman, and Muncy added a tying homer off Max Fried in the fifth.

Crosby misses 4 FGs, extra point in defeat

Associated Press

The Lions took advantage of some mistakes they forced the Packers to make and were fortunate some breaks simply went their way.

Matthew Stafford threw two touchdown passes and LeGarrette Blount ran for two scores, lifting the Lions to a 31-23 win over the Packers on Sunday in Detroit.

The Lions (2-3) earned a win they desperately needed under first-year coach Matt Patricia, going into their week off.

"We get two weeks to 10 days to sit on whatever happens," said Stafford, who was 14 of 26 for 183 yards with two TDs and no turnovers. "And, it feels a whole lot better with a win."

The Packers (2-2-1) were doomed because veteran Mason Crosby had the worst game of his life and two-time NFL MVP Aaron Rodgers lost two fumbles for just the third time in his 14-year career.

"We just couldn't overcome all the things we did wrong," Packers coach Mike McCarthy said. "We did some good things in the second half, but you can't dig yourself that kind of hole."

Crosby missed a career-high four field goals in one game and failed to make an extra point to boot. He connected on a field goal with 2 seconds left, but that wasn't of much consolation after his poor performance.

"I look back and I'm thinking, in my childhood, in high school, this is definitely one of the worst ones," said Crosby, the first NFL kicker to miss four field goals in a game since 2010.

Blount had a pair of 1-yard TD runs in the first quarter and Stafford's 8-yard pass to Marvin Jones late in the second quarter put the Lions up 24-0.

Patricia, though, didn't think the Lions' cushion was comfortable.

"Unfortunately, I've seen that quarterback on the other side there crush a lot of leads pretty quickly and come back," said Patricia, a former Patriots defensive coordinator.

Vikings 23, Eagles 21: Kirk Cousins threw for 301 yards and one touchdown, Linval Joseph returned a fumble 64 yards for a score and the visiting Vikings (2-2-1) won a rematch of last season's NFC championship game.

Carson Wentz and the Eagles offense again struggled as the defending Super Bowl champions fell to 2-3.

Trying to rally from a 17-point deficit midway through the third quarter, the Eagles were set up to take the lead after Roc Thomas dropped a backward pass and Nigel Bradham recovered the fumble at the Vikings 30 in the fourth quarter. But Wentz was called for intentional grounding and coach Doug Pederson elected not to let Jake Elliott try a 58-yarder.

Michigan coach Jim Harbaugh, looking up at the scoreboard from the sidelines during Saturday's victory over Maryland in Ann Arbor, is earning $7.5 million in compensation this season.

Pay dwarfs W-L record, so is Harbaugh worth it?

By Erik Brady, Steve Berkowitz and Christopher Schnaars
Detroit Free Press

Jim Harbaugh is making $7.5 million this season to coach Michigan football. Jimbo Fisher is making roughly the same at Texas A&M. Only Alabama's Nick Saban ($8.3 million) and Ohio State's Urban Meyer ($7.6 million) are making more.

Such soaring salaries seem more suited to Wall Street than Sesame Street, but let's borrow a sing-song game from the venerable children's show anyway: One of these things is not like the others.

Three of these coaches have won national championships. Harbaugh has not.

Nor has he won a Big Ten championship, or even a division title. His Wolverines have finished third, third and fourth in the Big Ten East. Oh, and his record against bitter rivals Ohio State and Michigan State is a lamentable 1-5.

The brassy fight song — "Hail! to the victors valiant. Hail! to the conqu'ring heroes" — sounds a tad hollow when none of the victors' victories come against ranked teams on the road.

All of which leads to a leading question: Is Harbaugh really worth $5.5 million plus $2 million in premiums for a creative life insurance policy that can create millions more down the road?

"Absolutely," Michigan athletic director Warde Manuel says. "Every dime."

Rodney Fort, a sports economist and professor of sport management at Michigan who is sometimes critical of college athletics spending, also thinks the answer is yes. He points out Harbaugh has been highly successful in creating interest and filling seats.

"You have to put 107,601 of the nicest people every week into the hole that Yost dug," Fort says.

That would be Fielding Yost, U-M's coach when Michigan Stadium opened in 1927. The cost to build the Big House then: $950,000 — or roughly $13.7 million in today's dollars, not enough to pay Harbaugh for two seasons.

As it happens, $950,000 was the average salary when USA Today began its analyses of coaches' salaries in major-college football in 2006. That's more than $1.2 million in today's dollars. This season, among the same group of schools studied in 2006, that average salary has more than doubled to $2.6 million. And Harbaugh makes nearly triple that.

Harbaugh declined to speak for this article through an athletics department official, but the Fox station in Detroit asked him in 2015 whether he was worth his princely pay.

No, Harbaugh said.

Well, should he give some back?

"Nah," Harbaugh said then. "I like making a buck just like the next guy."

That TV interview was lighthearted fun. Harbaugh hadn't coached a game at Michigan yet and Wolverines fans still luxuriated in the giddiness of possibility. His storyline was storybook: Former U-M ball boy and quarterback coming home from a successful stint coaching in the NFL. Cue the marching band. Play the fight song. Visions of national championships danced in fans' heads.

These days, with Harbaugh in the fourth season of his seven-year deal, the fan base largely stands by him, though some cracks are beginning to show.

"This is the first year patience is starting to wear thin," says Mike Persak, co-managing sports editor of the Michigan Daily, the school's student newspaper. "People always bring up his record against rivals. He has only one win against Michigan State and Ohio State combined, and then he lost at Notre Dame earlier this year."

That was the Wolverines' season opener. University President Mark Schlissel spoke at the Detroit Economic Club days later. The theme was the state of research at the state's research universities, but the first question concerned Harbaugh's status.

"He is not on the hot seat," Schlissel said. "He is under contract for four more years," including the rest of this season.

Schlissel declined to be interviewed for this article, according to an administration official who provided a statement from the president: "Coach Harbaugh embraces everything the University of Michigan is about and I fully support him. His student-athletes take their studies seriously and they graduate. He makes a commitment to each player that he brings to campus. Coach sets the tone in wanting to win every single game, and more importantly, he wants every student-athlete to have a great, full U-M experience while they're doing it."

'Wise investment'

John Bacon is the author of "Endzone: The Rise, Fall, and Return of Michigan Football," a 2015 book that includes the story of how the university lured Harbaugh from the 49ers after the 2014 season. Bacon figures Big Ten titles are just one measure of Harbaugh's worth.

"The flip side is, from a purely financial perspective, there's absolutely no question it's been a phenomenally wise investment," he says. "When Brady Hoke was let go at the end of the 2014 season, they were doing 60,000 or 70,000 fans, no matter what the attendance figures they issued said. So to have the Big House and the skyboxes one-third empty costs you a ton of money at Michigan, to say the least."

Michigan has led the NCAA in attendance in each of Harbaugh's three seasons there. And Harbaugh offers plenty of fodder for media and fans across the college football landscape.

"Whether people like Harbaugh or not, who does not talk about him nationwide to get more clicks?" Bacon says. "Harbaugh losing to Notre Dame gets more attention than Ohio State winning."

James Hackett became U-M's interim athletic director on Halloween in 2014, midway through a season in which the Wolverines finished 5-7 and Hoke was fired. Harbaugh went 8-8 that season with the 49ers, two seasons removed from their Super Bowl loss to his brother John's Baltimore Ravens.

Hackett is now president and CEO of Ford Motor Co. He declined to speak for this article, according to a Ford official. But Bacon's book tells how Hackett and Harbaugh spoke by phone on Saturday nights during that late fall and early winter, a time when Hackett called Harbaugh by an internal code name — "Unicorn"

Given Jim Harbaugh's sketchy Michigan record against top teams, some have asked whether he is worth his salary. Says athletic director Warde Manuel: "Absolutely. Every dime."

Is Harbaugh worth all his millions?

— reflecting his status as a one-of-a-kind candidate.

Bacon says coaches must fit the culture at their colleges in ways that are unnecessary for coaches on the NFL level.

"These college programs may be businesses to the athletic directors, but they are religion to the fans," he says. "And to have one of your own come back, the prodigal son and all that, it goes a long way."

Manuel is also a U-M grad. That means something here.

"But, look, nobody takes it easy on me or easy on Jim because we went to school here and we're Michigan men," Manuel says. "The production and what you do and how are also important. "And I'm pleased with who Jim is and where he is and how he treats these student athletes."

Huge death benefit

Ron Weiser is vice chair of the university's Board of Regents. Does he think Harbaugh is worth the money?

"I don't know," Weiser says. "I don't know what his contract is for."

Hard to fathom, given that Harbaugh's contract is a matter of public record and a matter of much media and fan scrutiny.

"That's not up for me to determine anyhow," Weiser says of Harbaugh's worth. "That's up to the athletic department to determine."

Harbaugh's contract spells out his worth this way: This season he is making $550,000 in base salary and $4.95 million in additional compensation plus $2 million paid into a life insurance policy. Michigan is scheduled to pay $14 million in loan advances into the policy over the life of the contract.

Howard Sharfman, senior managing director of NFP Insurance Solutions, ran a program for USA Today to show what a so-called split-dollar life insurance plan might look like using the parameters in Harbaugh's deal. (Sharfman is not involved in Harbaugh's case and offers these numbers only for purposes of illustration.)

Currently, the policy would provide Harbaugh's estate a death benefit of a little more than $75 million, from which Michigan would get repayment for the premium loans, plus interest.

But there's a longer-haul feature: Using present dollar values and assuming Michigan pays all of the scheduled premiums, Harbaugh would be able to draw more than $1.2 million a year in tax-free income from the policy's accumulated cash value from age 70 through age 84 — and the death benefit would still be more than $32 million, minus the roughly $20 million in loans and interest Michigan would be owed. The dollars likely will be worth much less in those years than they are now, but it's still an attractive setup.

Bennett Speyer is an attorney who represents coaches, including Harbaugh, plus athletic directors and sports executives. Speyer won't talk about Harbaugh's contract specifically, but he has about 10 clients with split-dollar insurance plans in their contracts (with two more in the works in the months ahead) so he is willing to speak generally about such plans.

"This has been a long-standing top perk in corporate America," Speyer says.

He thinks he may have negotiated the first split-dollar insurance plan in a college coaching contract 10 years ago. And he thinks such plans will become increasingly popular in coaching contracts in the years to come.

That's in part because the new tax law places a 21 percent excise tax on nonprofits on compensation over $1 million for an organization's top-five-paid employees.

"It costs universities an additional 21 cents on the dollar for compensation over $1 million," Speyer says. "So let's take a coach making $5 million. If it's all cash compensation, it's going to cost the university basically $5.8 million and change to pay the coach $5 million."

Premiums paid by schools are not treated as income for coaches, though they do pay tax on imputed interest (the fair value of the interest that the universities forgo with their loans). That would be about 3 percent at today's rates.

Premiums paid by schools are typically loan advances that will be repaid, usually from the plan's death benefit.

"For my clients," Speyer says, "I hope it's a good long time before (the schools) get paid back."

Pay a popular topic

Micheline Maynard is an author and journalist who is a lecturer in journalism in the Lloyd Hall Scholars Program at Michigan. Last year she used Harbaugh's contract in a class.

"It was a discussion about executive compensation," she says. "Normally, I would pull a CEO contract, but instead I pulled Harbaugh's because I figured it might have a little more relevance to the Michigan students."

The Michigan Daily recently had an article on the contracts of all of the coaches at Michigan. Persak, the co-managing sports editor, said it is among the Daily's most popular stories of this school year.

Weiser, of the Board of Regents, appreciates the reticence of university administrators on Harbaugh's deal.

"I can understand why they might not want to do that," he says. "No more than I really want to talk about the contract because I don't know anything about it. I'm only talking in general about the athletic department and the fact that it is a positive for the university as far as revenue is concerned."

While getting less than $300,000 each year from the university — none from student fees — Michigan's athletic department annually operates at a surplus and sends more than $1 million of that surplus to the university, according to financial reports filed with the NCAA. During its 2017 fiscal year, the most recent one for which a financial report is available, the athletic department gave more than $4.3 million to the university. Just 20 of the other 230 Division I public school athletic programs made such a transfer in 2017.

"There's no money that goes from the school, from the education part of the school, to the athletic department," says Weiser. "It is the other way around. All of the student-athletes who are on scholarship, the money is paid in full by the athletic department to the education part of the school. So it's money coming our way."

According to its NCAA financial reports, Michigan's annual operating revenue from football is much greater under Harbaugh than it was under his predecessor, Hoke. However, U-M has spent so much more on football under Harbaugh, including his compensation, that its surplus from the sport is a little less than it was under Hoke, who was making $2.85 million in his final season with the Wolverines.

In 2013 and 2014, the two full fiscal cycles with Hoke, Michigan reported averages of $86.4 million in football revenue and $24.9 million in expenses — an average surplus of $61.5 million.

In 2017, the one full fiscal cycle available for the Harbaugh era, football revenue was $105.9 million and expenses $46.2 million — a $59.6 million surplus.

Maynard thinks Harbaugh earns his worth for U-M just in terms of global marketing.

"He's achieved one of Michigan's goals, which was to elevate the visibility of its football program," she says. "Has he achieved the goal of winning championships? No, he hasn't. But he's done one part of (his job) splendidly."

Manuel cites Harbaugh's creativity.

"You think about the international trips that we've invested in for our student-athletes," Manuel says. "The way we have driven success on the academic side. A lot of people focus on, 'Do we win? Do we win Big Ten championships, do we win national championships under Jim?' "

Manuel focuses on what he calls a more broad-based look at the goal of building toward championships.

"Are we moving in that direction?" he says. "Absolutely."

Maria Agresta's Mimi stands out in Lyric Opera production

By Howard Reich | Chicago Tribune

Tears, laughter and a great deal of splendid — particularly from the female leads — launched Lyric Opera of Chicago's 64th season on Saturday evening.

Puccini's "La Boheme" was the vehicle, and though some might groan at the thought of encountering the old warhorse once again, this new, sleekly modern production reminded listeners of the score's perpetual melodic allure and dramatic pull. Its central lovers may be all too obviously doomed from the outset, but how cold must a heart be not to respond to its final, tragic pages?

Director Richard Jones' concept — in Lyric's co-production with the Royal Opera House Covent Garden and Teatro Real Madrid — embraced a lean, freshly contemporary aesthetic. You could see it in Stewart Laing's mostly minimalistic sets, and you couldn't miss it in the risqué touches that emerged periodically. The humor that Jones established early in the production and sustained even as disaster approached pointed to the intimate, human scale of this staging.

And yet for all the many achievements and one striking misfire in Lyric's first new "Boheme" production in 46 years, this one turned on a single element above all: soprano Maria Agresta's performance as Mimi. Returning to Lyric after singing Liu in "Turandot" last season, Agresta sounded radiant, thoroughly

A wronged woman gets a devil of an offer

Audrey Francis as Elizabeth and Ryan Hallahan as Scratch in "Witch" at Writers Theatre.

The Faustian myth — wherein some ambitious dude sells his soul to the devil to score some instant gratification — is one of literature's most popular themes. There's Christopher Marlowe's "The Tragical History of Doctor Faustus," Johann Wolfgang von Goethe's "Faust," Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and, memorably in Chicago, Randy Newman's "Faust," wherein Doctor Faustus became Henry Faust, an avaricious freshman at the University of Notre Dame.

But in all those versions, Faust is a man. So, for that matter, is the devil.

In Jen Silverman's most interesting "Witch," which had its world premiere this past week at Writers Theatre in Glencoe, Faust becomes Elizabeth, a woman who has an especially strong motivation to sell her soul to the devil, given that everyone in her community already believes her to be a witch.

This begs a fascinating question. We've heard this same story retold for hundreds of years with male parties: How does the equation change when the Faustian bargain must be made by a woman?

Silverman's new play actually is a new version of a pretty obscure Jacobean drama, "The Witch of Edmonton," by William Rowley, Thomas Dekker and John Ford. In the 1621 source play, though, the devil appears to the Elizabeth in the form of a nasty black dog. In Silverman's play, he takes the form of a sympathetic man who Elizabeth says is "handsome" and who's a lot more intelligent and charming than the typical villager. Elizabeth has changed too: Instead of being an embittered old woman, she's the kind of whip-smart companion who could tempt the devil himself to an off-the-clock glass of wine.

Those scenes between Audrey

Films — and real-life marriage — that led to new 'Star Is Born'

By Michael Phillips

Scene, interior: Hollywood's Brown Derby restaurant. The year: 1932. Outside, the Depression nears its lowest ebb. Inside, amid the cigarette smoke and lecherous glances, the banter hums with possibility.

"What's a pretty girl like you doing around here?" says Max Carey, the big shot with the drinking problem, played by Lowell Sherman.

"Waiting for a big director like you," replies Mary Evans, waitress/actress, at once innocent and knowing in actress Constance Bennett's hands.

From there, director George Cukor's "What Price Hollywood?" travels the road to success for Mary, the star on the rise, and suicidal oblivion for her bleary-eyed patron saint. There's no actual romance in this notable, and disarmingly trenchant, show business fable of intertwining destinies. The romance, shrouded in tragedy, came later, when the gold-plated property known as "A Star Is Born" came to the screen, first in 1937; then 1954; then 1976; and now, with Lady Gaga and Bradley Cooper, in 2018.

The new "Star Is Born" recasts one of Hollywood's oldest and most durable myths, working from the template established in "What Price Hollywood?" One star rises. Another falls. In this fable, love — whether soft as an easy chair (as the hit from the '76 version, "Evergreen," put it so ... stupidly) or hard as a chemical addiction — never conquers all.

And you know what? Not even "What Price Hollywood?"

Tina Turner reveals husband gave her kidney for transplant

Tina Turner has revealed that she underwent a kidney transplant with an organ donated by her husband.

The 78-year-old singer says in an upcoming autobiography that she has suffered from kidney disease, and by 2016 her kidneys were at "20 percent and plunging rapidly."

She says her husband, Erwin Bach, "shocked me by saying that he wanted to give me one of his kidneys." Turner says she was "overwhelmed by the enormity of his offer."

Turner writes that afterward she felt "happy, overwhelmed and relieved that we'd come through this alive."

Turner, whose hits include "Proud Mary" and "What's Love Got to do With It?", married German music executive Bach in 2013 after a long relationship.

Extracts from "Tina Turner: My Love Story" were published Saturday in the Daily Mail newspaper and released by its U.K. publisher, Penguin Random House. The book is published in Britain and North America later this month.

In the book, Turner encourages people to sign up to donate organs in order to save lives.

Inaction over alleged abuse regretful

Dear Amy: A few months into freshman year of college (not too long ago), an acquaintance of mine accused a popular athlete on campus of date rape and notified the college and police.

I went to a fairly small school, so rumors spread quickly and before long, most students heard some variation of the story.

I can't remember the details of what allegedly happened, but I vividly remember how many of her friends turned on her and accused her of lying. "He's not that kind of guy," "She just regretted sleeping with him," etc. were publicly stated by the people who should have been first to defend her. The girl in question later withdrew for a semester. The boy remained at school and remained popular.

As sexual assault and harassment have become less taboo to discuss and confront, my friends and I have talked about how we all remember that event, and how we regret we never said anything in defense of this woman.

It's tempting to excuse our inaction by telling ourselves we were young and didn't know better. In reality, I know we should have known better and should have done more.

So many times, I've wanted to reach out to this girl and try to apologize. I don't know what happened, but I know she deserved better than what she got. She deserved better than my inaction.

I'm wary of coming out of the blue to bring up a traumatic thing in her life just to make myself feel better. Would reaching out to this woman years after the fact be helpful to her — or just hurtful?

— Regretful

Dear Regretful: I applaud that you have made the connection between what is happening now in the larger culture, and your own previous inaction .

I don't know if reaching out now would trigger this woman's trauma, but surely the current exposure to the suffering of people who have survived sexual violence and have been further injured by being denied is a trigger for many victims. It is also a trigger for lots of other people — people who have witnessed assault, or who simply have the conscience to feel despair for victims and survivors.

So yes — you should reach out. Do so privately — not on social media. You can express compassion, concern and an expanded understanding of the impact of your virtual abandonment. Apologize on your own behalf. Express remorse, and tell her you hope that she can find it in her heart to forgive you.

Dear Amy: My husband and I have been friends with a fun couple for many years. Unfortunately, they just joined a multilevel marketing scheme predicated on targeting friends and family for sales.

While we are happy they have something to be passionate about, they are no longer fun to be around.

Now when we have them over for dinner, their product is all they want to talk about. Every conversation that we manage to steer away from this eventually returns to it, even though we have told them we are not interested.

I can't imagine inviting them to dinner parties with our other friends, as we used to, knowing that they will be aggressively working the room for sales. Should we confront them and explain things, or just stop inviting them?

— Curious

Dear Curious: You should certainly try to offer this couple a course correction before ditching the friendship. Convey your thoughts: "We're really happy you have this passion for your product, but it seems to have taken over your life. Sometimes I feel like you're still trying to sell to us. Even though you know we're not interested in your product, we're still interested in you. But have you lost interest in us?"

After that, yes — if they have become one-note selling machines, you should stop entertaining them.

Dear Amy: "The Invisible Wife" described how her husband's addiction to his electronic devices is leaving her out of his life.

You suggested she put together a cute video as a bid for his attention.

— Boom

Dear Boom: Well, dumping is certainly one way to go. However, "Invisible Wife" said that she loved him. She didn't want to dump him. She just wanted to get his attention.

'Murphy Brown' actor on his audition

By Danielle Turchiano
Variety

Jake McDorman was only 2 years old when "Murphy Brown" premiered on CBS in 1988, so he did not feel a personal sense of nostalgia when auditioning for the revival. But the cultural relevance of the show, which bridged politics and humor, seemed to resonate so much today that the "Lady Bird" and "American Sniper" actor welcomed a return to the small screen.

He co-stars in the revival as the title character's adult son, Avery, who's a TV news anchor at a rival station.

The following is an edited transcript of the conversation.

McDorman

Q: What drew you to "Murphy Brown"?

A: After ("Limitless") was gone, a lot happened. That was February 2016, and there was November 2016, and everything kind of just changed where finding my place and what I wanted to do felt different. I was becoming more politically aware and excited to have those conversations. I just knew it was really important to me — and increasing in importance. And that was a personal truth. I didn't necessarily expect that to influence the next job in the industry that I took. But karmically it made sense.

Q: What was most important about creating mother-son chemistry with Candice Bergen?

A: It's really just a vibe. I flew out to New York to test with Candice, and castings in New York are just usually very different than castings in LA. In LA it's usually on a studio lot or kind of in the back room of some rented office space, and Bernie's (Telsey) office in New York — he cast "Wicked" and "Hamilton" — there are these tunnels and hallways of actors preparing vocal warmups and doing pirouettes where you just feel like, "Oh man, those are triple threats."

And so I was nervous, obviously, and Candice just busted open the door and said, "McDorman, get your a-- in here!" And I had never met her before, and I don't know why, but it calmed me down. It just established it would be no bull. So it's just been really easy to just talk soul to soul.

IN PERFORMANCE 'Oxy, Ohio' ★★★

Clear-eyed, sympathetic opioid tale

By Kerry Reid
Chicago Tribune

In June 2017, an article by Mark Gokavi in the Dayton Daily News mentioned that one man in the Ohio city had been revived via Narcan by police 20 times after overdosing on opioids. An officer quoted in the article expressed his frustration that there isn't "some sort of mechanism or place for people like that," rather than just reviving them and sending them back out on the streets.

The expendability of addicts' lives is an old story. But in S.J. Spencer's "Oxy, Ohio," set in Dayton, the back story of how they end up in such straits gets a clear-eyed but sympathetic telling — even if there is a bit too much telling and not enough showing in this Side Project world premiere.

Spencer, whose play about drone warfare, "Push Button Murder," won good notices with the Side Project three years ago, is from Dayton. That familiarity gives his characters' observations on the "gray-on-gray" city a poignant dose of reality. But the story could also be set in any American city that has seen its blue-collar job market torn asunder, leaving citizens struggling with uncertain employment and inadequate insurance — and thus vulnerable to addictions.

Toss in generational trauma, as Spencer creates through mother Mary (Amy Johnson) and daughter Becky (Tracey Green), and the risk of self-medication increases. Mary, herself abused by a Vietnam War vet father with PTSD and with legitimate physical ailments brought on by hard labor at a nursing home, has pain in spades. In her volubility and knotty ironic wit, she's a near relation of Edie Falco's "Nurse Jackie." Daughter Becky has her mother's smart mouth but not her love of pain meds.

When Becky meets occasionally homeless, sorta-recovering addict Tom (Benjamin T. Jenkins) at an Al-Anon meeting with her mom, their mutual attraction spins into deeper addiction. Tom has his own horrific childhood experiences that outstrip even Becky's hardscrabble upbringing with Mary. Spencer's script isn't entirely coherent about just when Becky moved on from beer and pot to snorting oxycodone. But her escalating love of opioids escapes the notice of her mother, who is too busy trying to coax more meds for herself out of her sympathetic but at-the-end-of-his-rope physician, Dr. Wilmington (Fred Wellisch).

The latter tries to suss out the "difference between pain and true suffering" but finds himself too often giving in to the demands of patients like Mary. He knows, however, that when the state puts limits on what he can prescribe, they'll turn to street dealers who aren't fussy about how much fentanyl they cut their product with.

The idea, voiced by Mary, that "drug-addict time plays tricks on you" recurs several times. Both the script and director Adam Webster's staging keep us guessing as to exactly how long the events in the play took to reach their unsettling conclusion. Cristina McCrystal's dreary minimalist set (which gets a reveal toward the end reminiscent of the one in David Cromer's "Our Town" with the Hypocrites) suggests someplace purgatorial. That's entirely apt for the grinding sameness of days the characters endure.

The sense of separation from one another is also probably quite apt — but it does mean that Spencer's story is overloaded with interludes where characters talk to the audience more than to each other. Sometimes it's highly effective, as if we are a support group watching them try to untangle the roots of abuse and hopelessness that brought them before us. Early on, Mary talks about how every addict says something about how they can't believe it happened to them, and follows it with a warning to us: "There is some version of you already living under an overpass."

At other times, it feels more like the playwright's voice and point of view is being roughly filtered through the characters, who all tend to use a slightly off-kilter heightened vernacular. It's a mix of earthy and poetic observations that add to our sense that what we're hearing may not be the actual truth. But it does tend to make the characters sound a little too much like one another from time to time.

Despite these occasional stumbling blocks in the text, Webster's actors deliver solid performances that leave an aching impression of loss and waste. Spencer doesn't suggest a clear policy prescription to help us find our way out of the national opioid epidemic. But he does make it plain that without compassion, too many will continue to be lost.

History of 'Star Is Born'

was the first. That picture's scenario writer, Adela Rogers St. Johns, heard plenty of stories from her friend, silent film star Colleen Moore, who decades later was the co-founder of the Chicago International Film Festival. Moore's first of four marriages, to a movie publicity man turned producer-director named John McCormick, couldn't overcome McCormick's alcoholism, or the way McCormick prevented his wife, one of the Jazz Age's brightest lights, from trying her luck in talkies until everybody else already had. A lot of their marriage, and its dissolution, ended up in disguised form in "What Price Hollywood?"

In reverse order, here are five key stepping stones to the newest retelling of "A Star Is Born," co-starring, co-written and co-directed by Bradley Cooper.

"A Star Is Born," 1976. In the ripely melodramatic Barbra Streisand/Kris Kristofferson version directed with the straightest possible face by Frank Pierson, a self-destructive rocker meets an aspiring singer. Fireworks, humiliation and '70s power ballads ensue. This is, by a mile, the weakest "Star Is Born," but the stars made it a hit.

"A Star Is Born," 1954. Band singer Esther Blodgett, played by Judy Garland in her comeback vehicle, meets fading matinee idol Norman Maine (James Mason). She turns into Vicki Lester, Oscar-winning actress; he turns to the bottle. The Moss Hart-scripted romantic epic didn't find much public favor at the time of its release (everybody was going to "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" that year), but director George Cukor's film, restored to a three-hour version in 1983, features among many, many other delicacies the Garland rendition of "The Man That Got Away."

"A Star Is Born," 1937. William Wellman directed the first official "Star Is Born," starring Janet Gaynor as a North Dakota farm girl who follows her dreams to Hollywood. Fredric March's Norman Maine, once a star, finds himself teetering on the edge of has-been status, fighting his demons, marrying Esther and, with exquisitely painful timing, sacrificing himself for her career.

"What Price Hollywood?" 1932. A generation before he made the '54 "Star Is Born," director George Cukor directed this pre-Production Code melodrama, in which Constance Bennett and Lowell Sherman enact the rise-and-fall masquerade, beautifully. The story culminates in a memorable Academy Awards ceremony.

WARNER BROS. PICTURES

The 1954 version of "A Star Is Born" was a comeback vehicle for Judy Garland. James Mason, left, was her co-star.

Colleen Moore and John McCormick, married 1923 to 1930. This wasn't a movie, but the tempestuous couple gave birth to a lion's share of movie melodrama. As a teenager Moore dreamed of Hollywood and fame; her Chicago newspaper editor uncle, Walter Howey (the inspiration for Walter Burns in "The Front Page") helped D.W. Griffith slip "The Birth of a Nation" past the Chicago censor board; as "payback," in Moore's words, Griffith met with Moore in Hollywood and her career was off and running.

She married First National publicity man McCormick. She became a star, adored by millions; he drank, and acted violently, and trashed his career as a producer-director. They split in 1930. She married three more times, and in 1964, Moore co-founded the Chicago International Film Festival, bankrolling a young pup named Michael J. Kutza.

In this year's festival, which starts Wednesday, Kutza interviews Billy Hargrave, Moore's grandson by her fourth marriage. The occasion is a Moore tribute on Oct. 21, the festival's closing day, which features a screening of the 1933 Spencer Tracy/Colleen Moore drama "The Power and the Glory," Moore's final screen appearance.

Francis and Ryan Hallahan, both of whom are most excellent, are the high points of this lively new play — and, indeed, of director Marti Lyons' production.

As is very much in vogue, Silverman leaves the action in its original 17th century setting but writes in the modern-day vernacular. Indeed, the exchanges between this duo are so intense that it is, frankly, not all that easy to care about the remainder of the play, involving the machinations of a local lord in the village castle and his problems of succession and control. That's true, at least, until the two strands of the narrative come together.

Still, I left the theater wishing that Silverman had ditched more of her source play (and that, in doing so, she'd allowed Lyons to create a leaner production that did not need the constant coming and going of a banquet table, slowing down the action on Yu Shibagaki's cool-but-cumbersome set). That's because the metaphorical and symbolic weight of the key conflict is so intense that you want more of the clutter out of the way. Despite some entertaining acting by the likes of Arti Ishak, Steve Haggard, David Alan Anderson and Jon Hudson Odom, every time Elizabeth and her devil leave the stage you just wonder when they'll be back at it again. They don't get enough stage time to go all the way.

Here's why. Deals with the devil go on all the time. Including right now — not least in matters governmental and judicial. And this play, which thus feels timely, is very much about the tension we all feel between following the rules and making a raw grab for power, hang the consequences.

If you've seen the bumper sticker, "well-behaved women don't make history," you'll have a sense of what Silverman is shrewdly and passionately exploring here: If your unsold soul is so disrespected by your community, then why not give some handsome devil a try? It cannot, arguably, be worse.

And if you have come to see the rules as rigged, if you think the witch trials unfair, if you believe that you cannot build change on a rotten foundation, then to play by these constraints merely is to participate in your own marginalization.

Tempting right now, no?

Julie Chen stands by Moonves

Wives with spouses accused in #MeToo cases face quandary

By Meredith Blake
Los Angeles Times

CHRIS PIZZELLO/INVISION

Julie Chen of "Big Brother" is married to Les Moonves, who quit as CBS CEO amid misconduct allegations.

"The Chenbot."

That's the affectionate nickname devoted fans of the CBS reality show "Big Brother" gave host Julie Chen, a tribute to her mechanical precision and cool detachment amid the often sordid and outrageous shenanigans of the "houseguests."

But when Chen, who has hosted "Big Brother" since its premiere in 2000, signed off at the end of a live episode Sept. 13, she went off script in dramatically uncharacteristic fashion.

"I'm Julie Chen Moonves," she said. "Good night."

Under normal circumstances, Chen's use of her married name might have been met with a shrug. But coming in her first on-air appearance since her husband, Les Moonves, resigned from CBS amid allegations of sexual harassment and assault days earlier, those two syllables sent a jolt across the Twitterverse.

It was hard to interpret the sign off as anything other than a show of support for her embattled spouse, who for 15 years had reigned as chief executive of CBS, and a rebuke of his corporate rivals. Some even saw it as a swipe at the dozen women who've gone on the record with allegations against Moonves dating to the 1980s.

"Tonight, Julie Chen signed off Big Brother as Julie Chen Moonves, firmly standing w/her husband, a serial sexual assaulter who ruined careers," tweeted Danny Deraney, a publicist whose clients include one of Moonves' accusers, Illeana Douglas. "She is complicit."

The outcry hasn't deterred Chen, who has continued to use her married name on "Big Brother" and is slated to return next season as host of the long-running reality show. But her husband's alleged improprieties have already taken a professional toll. In a videotaped message Sept. 18, she tearfully announced she'd be leaving "The Talk," the CBS daytime show she's moderated since its debut in 2010, to spend time with her family.

The controversy surrounding her husband has thrust Chen — and her high-profile marriage — into the spotlight, a rarity for a woman who's made a career out of calmly observing the drama rather than being a part of it, of being an accessory to voyeurism rather than the object of it.

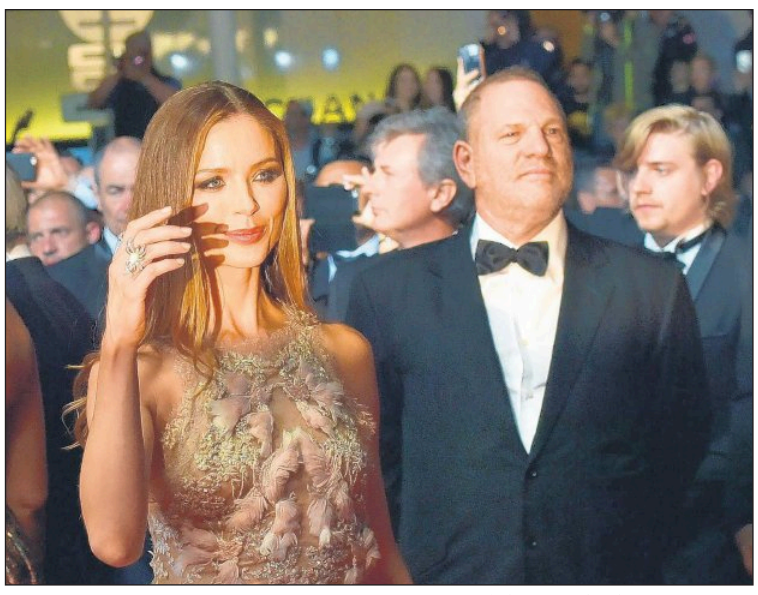
It also illustrates the difficult predicament faced by the partners of men disgraced by allegations of misconduct who, fairly or not, are often accused of complicity or willful blindness.

A year after devastating reports about Harvey Weinstein were published in The New York Times and The New Yorker, the #MeToo movement continues to rage. Thanks to Louis C.K. and others who've tested the comeback waters, there's already been much fitful discussion of how, when and whether men might redeem themselves after allegations of sexual misconduct. But for loved ones caught up the wake, navigating is even sketchier.

Chen declined to comment for this piece, but a source close to her told the Los Angeles Times that the use of her legal married name was meant "to simply express love and support for her husband, and to stop further speculation and inquiries into the status of their marriage."

"She is between a rock and a hard place," said Aisha Tyler, who co-hosted "The Talk" with Chen from 2011 until last year and believes her friend's decision to leave the Emmy-winning show was "a really deep personal sacrifice: I know how hard she worked to make it great."

Last fall, Georgina Chapman faced a similar dilemma as Weinstein's wife. Like Chen, she was professionally linked to, if not dependent on, her husband: Her fashion line, Marchesa, was a favorite on the red carpet and was often worn by the stars of Weinstein's films. But days after numerous women went on the record to accuse the once-untouchable producer of sexual assault, harassment and rape, she announced their marriage was over and said her "heart breaks for all the women who have suffered tremendous pain because of these unforgivable actions."



LOIC VENANCE/GETTY-AFP 2016

Georgina Chapman announced her marriage to Harvey Weinstein was over after women accused him of sexual assault and harassment.

She lay low for seven months — a time when no high-profile star wore Marchesa on awards show red carpets — before launching what appeared to be a carefully synchronized comeback attempt in May that included a sympathetic profile in Vogue, complete with a portrait by Annie Leibovitz and an editor's letter from Anna Wintour, plus an appearance by actress Scarlett Johansson in Marchesa on the red carpet of this year's Met Gala, chaired by Wintour. The effort met with a mixed reaction, with some questioning whether Chapman's story needed telling quite so soon.

Unlike Chapman, Chen has not publicly renounced her husband. Instead, she's repeatedly expressed support for him. After Ronan Farrow published his first expose on Moonves in The New Yorker in July, she issued a statement on Twitter.

"Leslie is a good man and a loving father, devoted husband and inspiring corporate leader," she said. "He has always been a kind, decent and moral human being. I fully support my husband and stand behind him." Later on "The Talk," Chen reiterated that she would stand by her statement — and, presumably, her husband — "today, tomorrow, forever."

Her public devotion to Moonves is "a huge slap in the face to the entire movement and to women everywhere, to survivors," Deraney, who also represents Weinstein accuser Rosanna Arquette, said in an interview. "All you're doing is lighting a fire that's most likely going to end up burning you."

Chen's decision to stick it out with Moonves is perhaps less unusual than one might think. In the final weeks of the 2016 campaign, Melania Trump dismissed the numerous women who'd accused her husband of sexual assault as liars. She also brushed off the "Access Hollywood" tape in which Donald Trump is heard bragging about being able to grab women inappropriately because he was a celebrity, as "boy talk."

Camille Cosby, the wife of disgraced comedian Bill Cosby, has repeatedly defended her husband in dramatic fashion, calling his conviction on charges of sexual assault in May "mob justice" and likening his predicament to that of lynched teenager Emmett Till.

The tableau of the downcast wife standing (or sitting) beside her partner in a moment of crisis is so pervasive that it inspired "The Good Wife," the acclaimed legal drama that aired on Moonves' network, CBS, for seven seasons. It made "Weiner," about the doomed mayoral campaign of disgraced congressman Anthony Weiner and his now-estranged wife, Huma Abedin, a must-see documentary, and it gripped the nation once again last week as a stricken-looking Ashley Kavanaugh watched silently as her husband, Brett, angrily defended himself before the Senate Judiciary Committee against allegations of attempted rape.

Then there's Hillary Clinton, who first entered the national conversation thanks to an infamous "60 Minutes" interview in which she and her husband, Bill Clinton, then a contender in the Democratic presidential primary, addressed his reported affair with Gennifer Flowers.

"You know, I'm not sitting here, some little woman standing by my man like Tammy Wynette," she said defiantly, an Arkansas twang in her voice. "I'm sitting here because I love him, and I respect him, and I honor what he's been through and what we've been through together.

Of course, Clinton did just that — standing by her husband through infidelity and much more serious charges of rape and sexual harassment. What some see as loyalty, others have interpreted as political calculation. But in either case, Clinton has been haunted by her decision for decades, perhaps most vividly at the final debate of the 2016 presidential campaign, where several of her husband's accusers were invited to sit in the audience by the Trump campaign.

Like most of these women, Chen is accomplished in her own right. Raised in Queens, N.Y., by parents who immigrated to the U.S. — her father from China, her mother from Myanmar— the 48-year-old USC graduate started her on-camera career as a reporter at a local station in Dayton, Ohio. After two years, she returned to her hometown to work for WCBS and rose quickly to become news anchor of "The Early Show," the network's national morning program, in 1999.

She began hosting "Big Brother" in 2000 while continuing at "The Early Show," and married Moonves in 2004. Coworkers who spoke with the Times praised her work ethic and rejected the notion that she used her relationship with the network's chief — their boss — to get ahead.

"Big Brother" has been a steady ratings performer during the doldrums of broadcast summer and inspired an unusually fanatical audience. It's also become a subject of perennial controversy, thanks to housemates who toss around racial epithets and homophobic slurs with alarming regularity.

Chen's reserve has always stood in contrast to the craziness. In early seasons, she came off to many as stilted — an impression captured in a montage of her repeating the catchphrase "but first" dozens of times.

"Her role on 'Big Brother' only involves one hour a week in a show that broadcasts three episodes and live feeds," said TV critic Andy Dehnart of the website Reality Blurred. "She has very little opportunity for improvisation and reaction, and she's also physically removed from the contestants and only interacts with them as they're leaving the game."

When she helped launch "The Talk" in 2010, she found that moving into the confessional space of daytime television was a challenge.

"I didn't know how to talk about my feelings on television (because) my whole career was spent keeping my mouth shut about what I think of topics," Chen told Buzzfeed in 2015. After a rocky first season, the show stabilized and has twice won the Daytime Emmy for entertainment talk show.

"The Talk" thrives on the news of the day, making it all but impossible for Chen to stay (particularly after her co-hosts expressed their support for Moonves' accusers after a second report was published in The New Yorker). Even before the Weinstein allegations broke, abuse by powerful men had been a fixture of conversation on the show. In a clip from 2015 that now seems prescient, the co-hosts discussed Camille Cosby's loyalty to her husband in the face of mounting allegations.

"A lot of times, when you've believed something about somebody for such a long time and you realize it's not true," said Aisha Tyler, as Chen looked on impassively, "it's not just that you're disappointed in the other person; you're disappointed in yourself for believing a lie for so long. It's easier to deny the truth and protect your own sense of self."

inhabiting the persona of the ailing heroine she portrayed.

From the first moment her Mimi entered the stage, stooped a bit from already failing lungs but tonally sumptuous across her vocal range, Agresta commanded attention — regardless of what else was happening around her. By the time Mimi finally expired, the loss seemed monumental, and we were left nearly as desolate as her tortured lover, the poet Rodolfo.

Michael Fabiano, making his Lyric debut in that role, immediately engaged listeners with the first aria he sang to Mimi, "Che gelida manina," producing a sweet tone and ardent delivery. But when Agresta responded with an aria of her own, "Mi chiamano Mimi," hearts immediately broke at the tenderness of this singing and the extraordinary innocence of the character Agresta was creating. Her Mimi was all goodness and vulnerability, making her grim fate all the more painful to behold.

When Fabiano and Agresta performed their first duet, declaring their love for one another in "O soave fanciulla," they sang with unanimity of phrase and spirit. But Fabiano sounded most compelling when sharing vocal lines with Agresta, the disarming openness of her manner and the remarkable tonal and technical control of her singing intensifying his already charismatic performance.

Musetta and Marcello, the opera's other troubled couple, reflected a similar dynamic: a vivid female voice and personality ennobling the work of her male partner. Soprano Danielle de Niese, who sang Roxane Coss in Lyric's world premiere of "Bel Canto" in the 2015-16 season, was all fire and ferocity as Musetta, and not simply because of the red-hot dress that clung to her. Watching de Niese torment baritone Zachary Nelson's Marcello with the rhapsodic character of her singing and the lusty manner of her movement, it wasn't difficult to understand why her lover was beside himself with jealousy.

De Niese's Musetta personified sensuality in sound and gesture. So much so that when she removed her underwear (without violating public decency) and tossed it at Marcello during a battle of the sexes in Café Momus, we had no difficulty believing she would do such a thing. In de Niese's interpretation, this Musetta easily would have done much more. Her throaty rendition of Musetta's famous waltz, "Quando me'n vo," very nearly made one forget the throngs of other actors crowding the scene. The devil was in her eyes and her voice.

The two couples turned in their deepest, darkest work in the third act, as a weakened Mimi and a guilt-ridden Rodolfo tried to repair their fracturing bond, while Musetta and Marcello tore at each other. In the work of these singers, their grand quartet, "Addio, dolce svegliare," shed light not only on the particulars of each couple's relationship but also on the ephemeral nature of love itself. Each pair, after all, was passionately in love but showed it in autobiographical ways. Fabiano yielded his best acting of the production, by far, in this scene, his Rodolfo looking very nearly crazed at the sight of Mimi's decline.

Once again, though, Agresta triumphed at the opera's finale, her muted reprise of the music that marked her first meeting with Rodolfo now steeped in tragedy. Her death scene, too, proved chillingly believable (by operatic standards).

Director Jones deserves considerable credit for the persuasiveness of so much of this production, especially the ingeniously choreographed Café Momus scene, with so much movement and action in a stage crowded with actors. Throughout, the bonhomie among Rodolfo, Marcello, Colline (played by Adrian Sampetrean) and Schaunard (Ricardo Jose Rivera) felt natural and brought forth comedic impulses in an opera that can easily be overshadowed by gloom.

Unfortunately, the set for the garret in which Rodolfo and his fellow starving artists gather took stripped-down simplicity several degrees too far. It looked not just spare but unfinished and, therefore, unconvincing.

Conductor Domingo Hindoyan made an impressive Lyric debut leading the orchestra in an accompaniment that was responsive to the singers, with vibrant work from the chorus (prepared by Michael Black) and characteristically nimble and exuberant singing from the Chicago Children's Choir (led by Josephine Lee). Lighting designer Mimi Jordan Sherin worked wonders in creating beams of moonlight that streamed into the garret, nowhere more effectively than on Mimi's hauntingly pallid face.

But the illuminated, ever-changing expressions were the work of singer-actor Agresta, whose sight and sound will not soon be forgotten.

Opera note: Contract negotiations between Lyric Opera of Chicago and the musicians' union are ongoing, according to a Lyric representative.

Lyric Opera's production of "La Boheme" runs through Oct. 20 and again Jan. 10 through Jan. 25 at the Civic Opera House, 20 N. Wacker Drive; ticket prices vary; 312-827-5600 or www.lyricopera.org.

"Long Lost Family" (8 p.m., 12 a.m., TLC): Hosts Chris Jacobs and Lisa Joyner return with a new season that features two-hour episodes running through October, each following personal stories of people searching for family members after an extended separation. The Season 5 premiere, "A Baby in a Shoe Box," finds Chris exploring the story of a woman who was left abandoned near an Ohio gas station just hours after her birth.

"The Resident" (7 p.m., FOX): As they work together to diagnose and treat an apparently happy couple who are admitted with some puzzling symptoms, the case prompts Conrad and Nic (Matt Czuchry, Emily VanCamp) to ponder their own relationship in the new "Three Words." Meanwhile, Bell and Marshall (Bruce Greenwood, Glenn Morshower) clash during a work trip, and Devon (Manish Dayal) continues to fall under the spell of Julian (Jenna Dewan).

"RX Early Detection: A Cancer Journey With Sandra Lee" (7 p.m., 2:30 a.m., HBO): Daytime Emmy-winning Food Network personality Sandra Lee opens up a very personal and challenging chapter of her life in this informative new documentary, which chronicles Lee's experience after learning that she had breast cancer. "Better Call Saul" (8 p.m., 10:40 p.m., 1:20 a.m., AMC): Season 4 of this "Breaking Bad" spinoff wraps things up in a finale called "Winner," as Jimmy (Bob Odenkirk) makes the fateful decision to turn the page when it comes to his good reputation. Elsewhere, Mike (Jonathan Banks) finds himself forced into making a difficult decision of his own. Rhea Seehorn also stars.

Once the creature is apprehended (sadly, off-camera), the contestants create an assortment of monster treats.

"Getting Naked: A Burlesque Story" (8 p.m., Starz): Since 1996, the faded and famously bawdy performance genre known as burlesque has been making a surprising comeback around the world. In this new feature-length documentary, James Lester explores this nightlife phenomenon as it currently is manifesting itself in New York, where female performers with stage names like Hazel Honeysuckle and Gal Friday take the stage in often fabulous costumes that, for the most part, are there strictly to be taken off.

Here are the answers to the weekly quiz:

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ 2 ♥ J75 ♦ AK93 ♣ 10976 3

North	East	South	West
1♦	1♥	2♦	2♥
Pass	Pass	?

What call would you make?

A.1—Bid 3C, showing a maximum and your long side suit. Partner will know what to do should they compete further.

Q.2—North-South vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ Q1054 ♥ Q107 ♦ KQ2 ♣ A82

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♦	Pass

What call would you make?

A.2—Old timers will bid 1S, bidding "up the line." Modern players, whose partner will often bypass a longer diamond suit over 1C to show a major, will bid 1NT. Neither is wrong.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A5 ♥ K9 ♦ KQ86 ♣ KQ832
As dealer, what call would you make?

A.3—This hand is good enough to reverse, but reverse auctions should be avoided if there is a reasonable alternative. This hand is worth 18 points, so open 1C, planning to rebid 2NT.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:

What call would you make?

A.4—Bid 2S, asking partner for a spade stopper. You can play in diamonds if he doesn't have one.

MONDAY, OCT. 8 NORMAL HIGH: 66° NORMAL LOW: 45° RECORD HIGH: 88° (1997) RECORD LOW: 27° (1987)

Showers diminish as warm, humid air arrives

LOCAL FORECAST

HIGH	LOW
84	68

■ Columbus Day. Area sits in the warm sector of a deepening Plains storm system. Strong south to southwest winds gusting to 25 mph pull warm increasingly more humid air into the Chicago area.

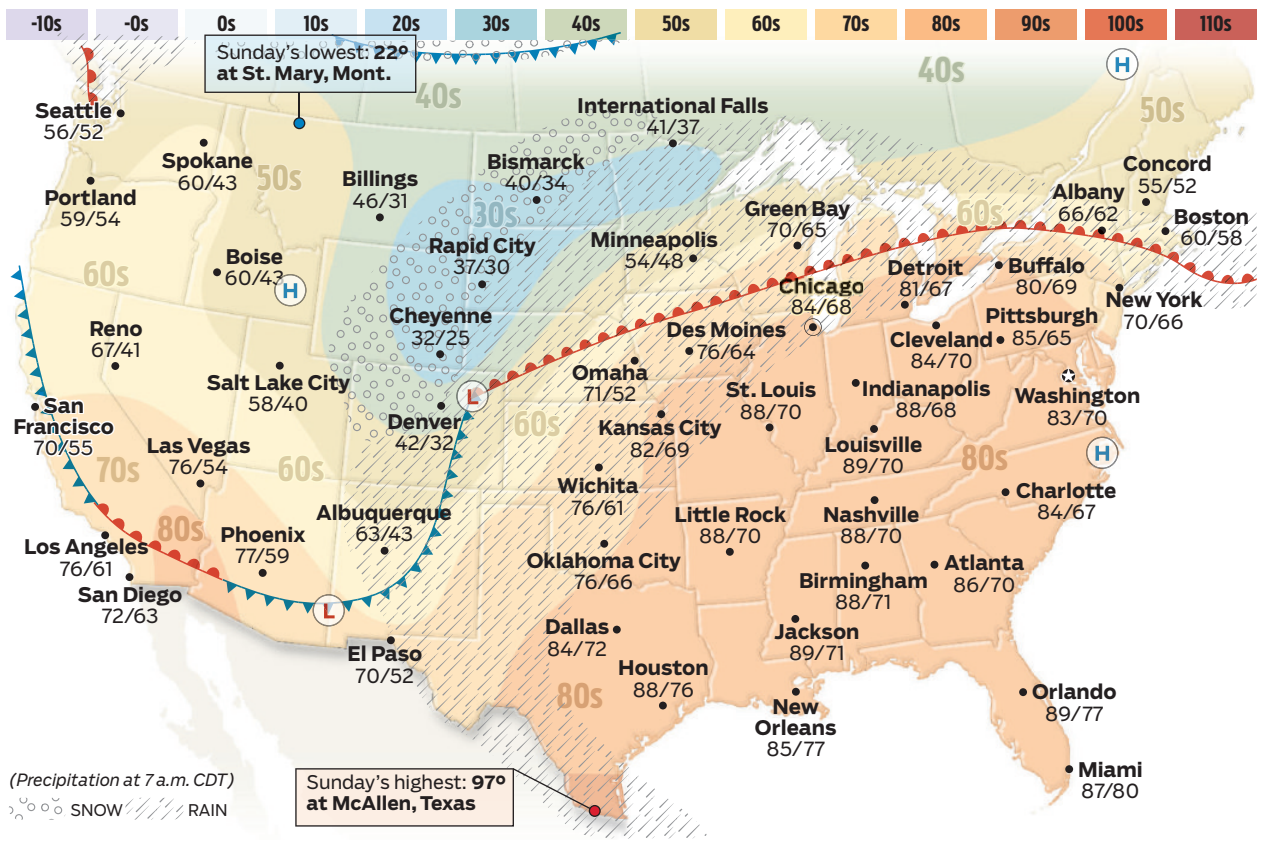
■ A few remnant showers and clouds early becoming partly sunny. Highest temperatures in the middle 80s. Partly cloudy overnight.

■ The minimum temperatures in the upper 60s could end up being the warmest minimum temperature on record for Tuesday (old record 68 set back in 1879).

NATIONAL FORECAST



Monday starts out with a warm front surging north into Wisconsin and strong south-to-southwest winds gusting to 25 mph, carrying unseasonably warm and increasingly more humid air into the Chicago area. Our afternoon highs should peak in the mid-80s, just shy of the all-time record high of 88 degrees for this date set in 1997. This will mark the 100th day this year that we have recorded an 80-degree or higher temperature — just three days short of the record 103 days with 80 degrees or higher established in 2005.

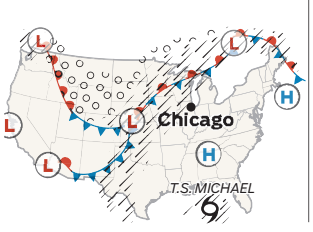
Tuesday should see more of the same temperature-wise, with an increase in cloudiness. Before the front arrives, Tuesday night and much of Wednesday an extended period of showers and flooding thunderstorm downpours is likely.

Much colder air will follow the cold front Wednesday night.

TUESDAY, OCT. 9

HIGH	LOW
83	68

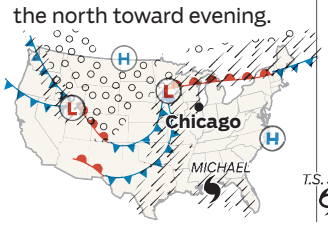
Partly cloudy, warm and humid with a chance of showers and thunder-storms. High temperatures in the low to mid 80s. Gusty southwest winds.



WEDNESDAY, OCT. 10

HIGH	LOW
74	50

Mostly cloudy, mild and humid with showers and thunderstorm downpours likely. High temperatures 70-75. Storms ending from the west overnight. Southwest winds shift to the north toward evening.



THURSDAY, OCT. 11

HIGH	LOW
58	40

Partly sunny, much cooler and less humid with highs in the upper 50s to lower 60s. Mostly clear skies at night. Northwest winds.

HIGH	LOW
51	36

Sun shines through some high level clouds. Highs barely make it into the 50s. Mostly clear skies and cold overnight with lows in the middle 30s and scattered frost possible. North winds.

ASK TOM

Dear Tom,

The Peshtigo fire of 1871 was overshadowed by the Chicago fire that took place at the same time, but wasn't the Peshtigo fire worse?

— Morton Gosslinger, Chicago

Dear Morton,

The Peshtigo, Wis., fire of Oct. 8, 1871, stands as the most deadly fire in American history.

The Great Chicago Fire of Oct. 8-10, 1871, claimed perhaps 300 lives, but the Peshtigo fire was worse by far.

In 1871, Peshtigo (220 miles north of Chicago) was a lumber town and home to one of the largest wood-product factories in the United States.

The summer and fall of 1871 were very dry across the Midwest.

The Peshtigo forest fire began Oct. 7 southwest of the town, hitting Peshtigo the evening of Oct. 8.

In Peshtigo and surrounding areas, 1,500 to 2,400 people died.

Thousands of runners begin the 41st annual Bank of America Chicago Marathon early Sunday on Columbus Drive.

THE SCENE

Spectators brave rain to support runners

By Morgan Greene
Chicago Tribune

Gray skies, damp air and occasional raindrops didn't stop thousands of fans from coming out Sunday morning to show their support to runners taking on the annual Bank of America Chicago Marathon.

By early morning, the first ripples of runners were out in the streets, with participants streaming out from Grant Park. About 45,000 runners were expected to wind their way through 29 Chicago neighborhoods throughout the day in the 26.2-mile course.

Kim Murray, 34, of Toronto, let out a giant "Wooo!" as her husband ran past her on Grand Avenue.

"Last year I ran New York and he was my supporter," Murray said.

Murray held a sign that said, "Keep Running You Must," with a googly-eyed Yoda on the front and a photo of her husband with a Captain America theme on the back.

"It's awesome," she said. "Just seeing people doing healthy things, being outside, enjoying life. I have serious FOMO."

By mid-morning, 20-year-old Champaign resident Daniel Romanchuk was declared the winner of the men's wheelchair marathon and Switzerland's Manuela Schar picked up her first Chicago win.

The elite men and women were nearing the finish line, and clapping spectators from Chicago, the suburbs and beyond still lined the sidewalks along Grand Avenue with their neon signs, life-size photos and helium balloons.

Alan Tirsun, 57, of Long Island, N.Y., held a rainbow unicorn balloon that he hoped his wife, running her 17th marathon, would spot.

"It's traditional," he said.

Many said nothing, including the weather, would keep them from supporting a loved one who had put in the work to be able to complete the race.

"She's been training for it so we're coming out to support her and the rest of the runners, of course," said Brittany Dweck, 29, of River North, about her mother-in-law.

ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A spectator high-fives a runner as thousands of participants pass in the Bank of America Chicago Marathon.

Kathy Trotter, 50, of Rockford, and her daughter Lauren, 22, braved the rain to support about 150 runners from Heartland Community Church in their city.

"I just saw a woman talking on the phone and running!" Lauren Trotter said.

Also spotted in the crowd: two people in inflatable sumo wrestling suits.

"We wanted something that was easily visible," said suit-wearer Nick Zivolich, 39, of Clearwater, Fla. "And it is actually protecting from the rain."

Zivolich, who came out to support his girlfriend, held a sign that said, "You're a majestic running unicorn."

As the rain came and went in the morning hours, hoods went up and umbrellas popped open. One runner stepped out of the group to pet a cute black dog. The River North crowd dispersed as fans headed to later miles of the race.

"We know that this stretch is where you need the most motivation. I'm hoping to run it next year. It's the best. When I walked up, I started to get teary-eyed."
—Jen Feeny, 36, of Palatine, who watched the race in Pilsen

Great Britain's Mo Farah was declared the winner of the men's race with a time of 2:05:11, and Kenya's Brigid Kosgei won the women's race with 2:18:35.

As the afternoon went on, temperatures hovered in the 50s and streets were slicked. There were no arrests or major incidents, according to police.

"It's been a very safe and uneventful marathon," said Chicago Police Department spokesman Anthony Guglielmi.

In Pilsen, cheers from fans could be heard blocks away at West 18th Street and Ashland Avenue. Onlookers offered up bananas and sugary treats as runners turned the corner near 18th and Loomis streets at Mile 19 of the race.

Members of the Chi City Running Club passed out orange slices and Coke.

"The caffeine really helps," said Yutaro Seki, 31, of Pilsen. "Woo! Almost there!"

Pilsen resident and fellow Chi City Running Club member Korey Martinez, 33, said as a runner of six marathons, she understood the runners' struggles.

"You need all the motivation you can get because it's a mind game," she said. "They're exhausted."

But, Martinez said, watching others complete the marathon is inspiring.

"You prove to yourself you're capable of doing more," she said.

As usual on marathon day, the ethnic patchwork of Chicago neighborhoods was on display.

"Welcome to Pilsen!" a body-suit-clad DJ shouted every few minutes from a deck near West 16th Street. As "Party Up (Up in Here)" blasted from the speakers, throngs of runners wearing as many colors as the muraled walls along the railroad embankment burst through the underpass. Some paused for a second to throw their hands in the air.

James Feeny, 41, of Palatine, cheered on runners with a megaphone. He and his wife, Jen, both marathon runners, were out with their 3-year-old twins to support a friend.

"We know that this stretch is where you need the most motivation," said Jen Feeny, 36. "I'm hoping to run it next year. It's the best. When I walked up, I started to get teary-eyed."

The twins held out their hands for the runners.

James Feeny cried out, "Little kid high-fives!"

Joe Glover, 47, of Orland Park, was there to support his fiancee, who was running for Ronald McDonald House Charities.

"I feel terrible about myself," he said. "But it's awesome. We're very proud of her."

Daniel Juarez, 24, of West Lawn, made a special sign to support his sister, who was running her first marathon. "You're running better than Trump," the sign said.

"My sister told me she likes to see funny signs," he said.

"Just being here, you can sense the runners' energy. It means a lot, to a lot of people," Juarez said, as a mariachi band began to play.

Michele Brock, 49, of Madison, Ala., stepped out of the running mass for a moment.

"I'm feeling great," the 17-time marathon runner said. "Now I have to get it done."

And she took off into the crowd.

‘Sir Mo’ Farah: ‘I know I could have gone a lot faster today’

By Shannon Ryan
Chicago Tribune

ERIN HOOLEY/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Mo Farah of Great Britain is congratulated by his wife after winning the Bank of America Chicago Marathon.

“Sir Mo” became king of Chicago’s roads Sunday.

As rain fell and his feet splashed through puddles on the final stretch, the knighted British runner Mo Farah pumped his arms into the air and blew kisses to the crowd.

Farah’s wife greeted him in an embrace shortly after he crossed the finish line in 2 hours, 5 minutes, 11 seconds for his first marathon victory, which set a European record and became the eighth fastest time in Bank of America Chicago Marathon history.

“Definitely, emotions are high,” he said. “It’s a great start. It’s definitely positive. It’s a major marathon. Definitely happy, more than happy.”

The victory cemented Farah’s successful transition from track glory — he won four Olympic gold medals in the 5,000 and 10,000 meters. He finished third place in London in April in 2:06:21.

“I know I’m capable of mixing with the guys and can run a decent time,” he said. “I know I could have gone a lot faster today.”

Farah held off a competitive field of elite runners, including three former Chicago Marathon champions and 11 runners who had clocked times of at least 2:08. Galen Rupp, from Oregon, failed to defend his 2017 Chicago victory finishing fifth in 2:06:21.

At Friday’s prerace news conference, Farah wore a bib with his last name. Before the marathon, race directors offered him two choices for his official bib.

“I had the option to wear ‘Sir Mo,’ ” he said with a smile. “Why not?”

He certainly appeared in a class of his own.

A pack of 10 runners dwindled to about seven, then to four and then it was just Farah and Mosinet Geremew from Ethiopia. Farah said he wasn’t aware of Geremew’s reputation or if he had a track background, judging how the last few miles would play out. (Geremew said they raced against each other on the track in Beijing.)

Farah spent much of the race strategizing when to make his move, declining to push ahead and waste energy when the pack would spurt forward only to fall back into the same rhythm. It wasn’t until about ¾ of a mile remained that Farah felt comfortable making his own push.

Geremew, who said he had a thigh injury from overtraining, couldn’t keep pace.

“I wanted to go hard and get rid of them as fast I could without out causing too much pain at the end,” Farah said of breaking free of the pack.

Geremew finished second in 2:05:24, followed by Suguru Osako who set a Japanese record of 2:05:50 to win a prize from the Japanese government of 100 million yen (roughly $880,000 U.S. dollars).

“It kept me going,” Osako said, announcing he would give a portion of the money to his coach.

The men’s and women’s winners each get $100,000 prizes from the Chicago Marathon.

Rupp looked for positives in his finish, which was faster than last year’s victory of 2:09:20 but still disappointing as some predicted he was on the verge of breaking the American record.

“My goal was to win,” he said. “I ran as best I could today. You have to give credit to Mo and all the guys who beat me. I’m real happy for Mo.”

He fell behind the pack around Mile 23 and didn’t recover.

“You’re still in it; you keep fighting,” Rupp said. “I caught back up again and they pulled away again toward the end. You never want to get broken and throw in the towel and give up. You hold onto belief you’re going to come back until the very end.”

At Mile 21, Farah said he fell into a “ditch” on the course while reaching for his water bottle, causing him some pain. He admitted the rainy conditions didn’t bother him because, after all, he lives in the wet United Kingdom and formerly trained in soggy Portland, but he noted the wind was sometimes a bother.

He said he doesn’t know what his next marathon will be but he said he could clock a time between 2:03 and 2:04.

Farah found Rupp, his former training partner, at the finish line for a quick consolation. He went on to celebrate, posing for a photo with actor and marathoner Kevin Hart and biting into his Chicago Marathon medal as if it was one of his Olympic golds.

After training for two months in Arizona away from his family, he said he’s eager to return to Britain and his four children to celebrate his youngest son’s third birthday next week.

“It makes me work harder,” he said. “I’m just excited to spend time with my kids.”

Then he added, “And chill.”

Kenya’s Kosgei overcomes rain, pain

Crouch finishes 6th, leads Americans

By Phil Thompson
Chicago Tribune

ERIN HOOLEY/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Brigid Kosgei of Kenya crosses the finish line of the Bank of America Chicago Marathon Sunday.

Brigid Kosgei was gunning to get her Bank of America Chicago Marathon time under 2 hours, 20 minutes, the range in which she finished at last year’s race (2:20:22) and in London in April (a then-personal best 2:20:13).

But she had two obstacles to overcome: rain and pain.

The 24-year-old Kenyan injured her right knee after a tumble at the Bogota Half Marathon in July, and she was feeling the effects before to taking the wet course in Chicago on Sunday.

“Before I start, I was having knee (pain) but I just swallowed a painkiller that my manager gave me,” said Kosgei, who added her knee started hurting again after the finish. “I just used (it) in order to move.”

In fact, for two months she had to take pain pills while training in Kenya.

But during Sunday’s win on the women’s side, there was no pain on her mind and no other runners in view as she outdistanced her closest competitor, Ethiopia’s Roza Dereje, by 2 minutes and 43 seconds, while Sarah Crouch placed sixth overall and first among the Americans at 2:32:37.

And Kosgei met her goal: 2:18:35 — better than she expected.

“At 5 kilometers (remaining), I saw the other competitors, they were not following me again. I just (kept) pushing myself and looking at the time.”

She kept thinking about her projected time, “2:18, 2:18, 2:18 and I just moved alone and finished like that.”

Kosgei said she hopes to better her time next year in Chicago.

Meanwhile, it was a war of attrition between the American women.

Crouch, Laura Thweatt and Gwen Jorgensen were bunched together around the 15K mark, but Thweatt dropped out of the race at station 7, between the ninth and 10th mile, and Jorgensen, an Olympic gold-medal triathlete making the transition to marathon running, said she started feeling the effects of a weeklong fever and fell off the pace.

No one was more surprised by the developments than Crouch, who said she prefers to be “the hunter instead of the hunted.”

“I was certainly not expected to be the top American, and there was a moment I had at 10K when I was running with Laura Thweatt, Gwen Jorgensen and Alexi (Pappas) where I thought, ‘I’m not sure that I belong here.’

“But I shut that voice real fast and I was like, you know, this is the pace I want, I feel good, so I’m going to continue to do this,” Crouch said. “One by one they started to fall off and I found myself out front, which is an odd sensation because the crowds are very responsive to the first American who comes through. So to feed off that energy for the next 20 miles was just — being the first American here is something special, and Chicago really embraces that.”

Crouch had help from male runners who shielded her from a strong north headwind and the occasional crosswinds, much a like race car driver would draft off a teammate.

“Every year I’ve had men who were running my pace just step up and (be) like, ‘Hey, girl, it’s windy. Tuck in,’” Crouch said. Wonderful meeting these men along the way who just shelter me from the wind and allow me to run the race I want because they’re willing to sacrifice (their own times) and take the wind.”

Before the race Crouch said she looked at her phone to check out the weather and saw a silver lining in the clouds, and the rain. In her estimation, she’s tougher and could better handle the poor conditions.

“This is my fifth Chicago in a row and of all the five it’s by far the worst conditions I’ve run in,” she said. “I’m absolutely positive it affected the times, although I definitely can’t complain because I walked away with a personal best, which is something I’ve been waiting for since my first Chicago in 2014 (2:32:44).

Daniel Romanchuk from Champaign wins the men’s wheelchair marathon with a time of 1:31:34.

NOTES

Champaign man wins wheelchair race; Hart falls short of N.Y. time

By Shannon Ryan and Phil Thompson
Chicago Tribune

Growing up in Maryland, Daniel Romanchuk played basketball, hockey and racing in wheelchair division sports. He has also competed in para-swimming and para-triathlon events.

But now he’s more focused on marathon training with the University of Illinois Wheelchair Racing Team.

On Sunday, the Parkland College student reached a career high by winning the Bank of America Chicago Marathon men’s wheelchair race in 1 hour, 31 minutes, 34 seconds.

And he’s only 20.

“I always go in hoping (to win) and (knowing) the race isn’t over until everyone is crossing the finish line,” Romanchuk said.

He staved off two-time defending champion Marcel Hug (1:31:35), from Switzerland, for the win. David Weir, from Great Britain, finished third in 1:31:43.

It was the first marathon victory for Romanchuk, who placed 17th here in 2016 and ninth in 2017. He’s having a breakthrough year with third-place finishes in Boston and London. He had competed in five racing events at the 2016 Olympics.

He said he has his eyes set on the New York Marathon next.

But he’s off to a strong start.

Schar’s win long time coming: Swiss wheelchair racer Manuela Schar had been flirting with a first place finish in the Chicago Marathon ever since she made her debut in 2013, placing second for four straight years and third in 2017, just two seconds behind winner Tatyana McFadden

“I’m really, really happy that I finally made it,” she said.

Her winning time of 1:41:38 was actually 2 minutes, 21 seconds slower than last year’s third-place finish, but she was fighting just to maintain her grip on the wheels on a slippery course.

“The first part of the race was really fast; it was still dry, so we were able to keep up a high pace,” Schar said. “Then it started to be wet again and I lost a little bit of grip, so I had a hard time to keep up a good pace that I have to do to win a marathon.”

Samuelson’s dream deferred: Joan Benoit Samuelson, 61, didn’t reach her goal of breaking the world record 3:01:30 for her age group (60-64), settling for 3:12:13.

“I was there when Joan Samuelson and her daughter finished, which was I think emotional for her,” race director Carey Pinkowski said.

Samuelson, who won in 1985, had to withdraw from last year’s race because of a knee injury and has had other setbacks that prevented her from running in previous years.

Pinkowski jested about her hard luck. “Was anybody here in 1985? The last time she ran here it rained, so the two she’s run here in the last 35 years it rains. So we can blame it on her. So we won’t have her run next year, how’s that?”

Rabbit runners: The Chicago Marathon allowed the return of pacers to help set a fast course.

Pinkowski said he would seek feedback from runners and coaches before deciding whether to keep them in ensuing years, but he seemed pleased with the outcome.

The winning time was 3 minutes faster than last year and the first-half marathon pace of 1:03:03 was fast considering the rain and wind.

Acting up: Comedian Kevin Hart finished the marathon in 4:13:10.

The actor didn’t beat his 2017 New York City Marathon time of 4:05:06 as he had hoped, but he did help raise money to help fund his philanthropy effort to send kids to college.

“Chicago Fire” actor Miranda Rae Mayo finished in 5:38:01.
